CHARTER REVISION IS NOW COMPLETE.

Vital Changes Proposed in the City Government.

THE MAYOR'S POWER CURBED

By arrangements made with Gov. Roosevelt the Charter Rivision Commission will give out to-day the report of the changes which it thinks should be made in the government of the city. It has also been decided that the public shall be informed of the recommendations of the commission on Monday morning.

The report will be signed to-day. George L. Rives, who has charge of the publication of the document, assures the public that no copy will be given out for publication before that day and if any paper purports to print the report the copy will have been obtained by surreptitious means.

It is said that the hardest work of the commission was to find some way by which the power of the Mayor as the practical head of the Board of Estimate could be curbed. Under the present charter the majority of the members of the board are controlled by the Mayor through his own election and his personal appointments to the offices of Corporation Counsel and President of the Department of Taxes and Assessments.

The charge made against the Board of Estimate has been that while it was practically in control of the City Government, as it regulated all expenses, the body was not representative of the people. Various remedies were suggested. The idea which the commission wanted embodied in the revised charter was to have a majority of the Board of Estimate elected by the people.

The proposed new law, it is said, will make the Board of Estimate include the Mayor, the Controller, the President of the Board of Aldermen, and the Presidents of the five boroughs. Whenever a question comes to a vote the Mayor shall have three votes, the Controller three votes, the President of the Board of Aldermen three votes; the Presidents of the Boroughs of Manhattan and Brooklyn two votes, and the Presidents of the Boroughs of Bronx, Queens, and Richmond one vote each, making in all sixteen votes. No official appointed by the Mayor will have a voice or vote in the proceedings of the board.

After a long contest it is said that the final determination of the commission is to continue the term of office for the Mayor at four years. He is to be ineligible to re-election.

The present Municipal Assembly will be abolished if the recommendations of the commission are accepted. Instead of the dual legislative body there will be a Board of Aldermen, consisting of sixty members. The members of this board are to be elected by Assembly districts. The President of the board will be elected at large, that is, he will be elected by a vote of all the citizens of the city, in the same manner as the Mayor. He will also be eligible to fill the office of Mayor in case of the removal by death or otherwise of the head of the City Government.

An added power will be given to the Mayor. He will have complete control of all his subordinates and may remove any of them at will during his term of office, instead of during the first six months of his term, as under the present charter.

A revolution is planned in the Police Department if the revision suggestions are adopted. It is suggested that the police be placed under the control of a Police Commissioner whose salary shall be $10,000 a year. The increase in the salary is made, so declares one of the Commissioners, to secure a man of the highest ability for the place. The Bureau of Elections will be separated from the Police Department entirely. The Chief of Police, according to the proposed law, can be removed by the vote of two Police Commissioners and the Mayor. The bi-partisan idea for the Bureau of Elections has been recommended.

The Department of Education has presented one of the most difficult problems for the revisionists. The final conclusion is to recommend to the Legislature the abolition of the Borough Boards of the Department of Education and the formation of a compact central board, consisting of forty-six members. Of this number Manhattan and the Bronx are to have twenty-two, Brooklyn fourteen, and Queens and Richmond five each.

According to statements made by men who have been asked for advice, the Davis salary law will be repealed if the recommendations of the Charter Revision Commission are adopted. The provision for a tax of 4 mills on each $100 of property valuation for the salaries of school teachers will also be annulled. It is said that the provision for the regulation of school teachers' salaries provides that the Central Board of Education, with the approval of the Board of Estimate, shall, before July 1, 1901, adopt a new salary schedule, otherwise the salaries of all teachers are to be fixed at the figures which prevailed before Dec. 31, 1899, or before the Davis law took effect. The teachers would, therefore, receive the salaries fixed by the Ahearn law.

It is also proposed to divide the city into forty-six school districts on a basis of school population. The Central Board will elect the Superintendent of Schools and also fifteen District Superintendents.

One of the most radical changes in the charter which it is said the revisionists will propose is to abolish several of the boards which now have charge of large departments. For instance, the Department of Charities is to be controlled by one Commissioner instead of a board of three Commissioners, as at present. There will be deputies in each borough, under the control of the Commissioner. The Department of Parks will also be placed under the control of one Commissioner.

The Department of Corrections will be under the charge of a single Commissioner, without any deputies in the boroughs.

One of the most radical provisions in the amended charter may result in a change in the hospital system of the city. All the emergency hospitals under the city's control will be placed in charge of a commission of seven physicians, who will serve without pay. These hospitals are all now under the control of the Department of Charities.

What will happen to the mass of suggestions made by the Charter Revision Commission when the Legislature meets is problematical. Senator Thomas C. Platt has within the past few days stated that a good many of its recommendations would not be adopted by the Legislature.

UNPRECEDENTED GOLD SUPPLY

Stock in the United States Treasury, $474,108,366—Probably $1,100,000,000 in the Country.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The largest stock of gold coin and bullion ever held in the United States is now accumulated in the Treasury and its branches. The total has been rising steadily during the whole of the present year, and is now $474,108,366, or about $76,000,000 greater than at the close of 1899.

This gold is not all the direct property of the United States, but is held against outstanding gold certificates. The amount of these, less the amount in the Treasury and its branches, was $230,755,809 Wednesday. All the remaining gold, amounting to about $243,000,000, belongs to the Treasury, including the reserve fund of $150,000,000.

The influx of gold into the Treasury comes partly from the new gold from the Klondike and the other mines, but its retention is due to the pressure for currency, which leads to the acceptance of gold certificates and other paper money in preference to coin. The Treasury recently has been shipping small notes in large quantities to New Orleans and other points upon deposits of gold in the New York Sub-Treasury by the New York reserve agents of the Southern banks.

The fact that $474,108,336 is thus accumulated in a sense under a single authority enables an estimate to be made of some of the other visible gold resources of the country. The National banks reported gold holdings on Sept. 5 of about $312,000,000, of which amount $115,018,140 was in the gold certificates issued by the Treasury. The remainder, about $197,000,000, if added to the visible gold in the Treasury, makes a total in these two classes of establishments alone of about $670,000,000. This is more than the entire estimated stock of gold in the United States at the close of 1895.

The gold supply of the country on the last day of 1896 was estimated at $672,047,-212. The estimated amount Nov. 1, 1900, was $1,080,027,407, and it is probable that the report for Dec. 1 will show at least $1,100,000,000. The Treasury officials are confident that the round sum of $475,000,000 in Treasury gold holdings will soon be attained, and that even $500,000,000 is not beyond reasonable expectation.

SMALLPOX IN 30TH STREET.

It became known last night that two cases of smallpox had developed during the past two weeks at the New York Colored Mission House for Women, at 135 West Thirtieth Street. Both of the patients were removed to North Brothers Island for treatment. Late last night a surgeon connected with the Board of Health appeared at the West Thirtieth Street Police Station and requested Sergt. Carson to detail a policeman to accompany him to the home, next door. The cause of the late visit was to vaccinate the inmates. After much knocking the surgeon, accompanied by Policeman Ahearn, managed to awake a matron, who let them in.

All of the inmates were vaccinated, some of them submitting gracefully to the ordeal, while others were frightened and a few angry at the hour selected for the vaccination.

GIVING AWAY $100,000.

Delaware Man Keeps Thanksgiving Day Vow in Novel Fashion.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 30.—Alexander Jackson of Camden, one of the best-known old men of Kent County, recently decided that if he lived until Thanksgiving Day he would distribute part of his fortune. He has no children and few immediate relatives. He is going to give away $100,000.

Mr. Jackson began the distribution of his wealth in a novel manner. For many years Frank Jackson had driven a hack between Wyoming Station and Camden. Frank Jackson, who is no relation to Alexander Jackson, had an antiquated cab. A few days ago Alexander Jackson appointed a committee to go to Philadelphia and spend $700 in the purchase of a fine pair of Western horses, a modern upholstered hack, nickel-plated harness, and other equipment, which were presented to Frank Jackson.

Edgar Stubbs, a clerk in the store of Jackson Stubbs, in Camden, gets $3,000 and a fine farm near Marydel. His brother, Jackson Stubbs, besides other gifts, gets $300 in cash. Mrs. Henry R. Draper, wife of the Justice of the Peace of Camden, receives $9,100 in property.

Mrs. William T. Jakes, wife of the express agent at Wyoming, gets $5,000, principally in well invested securities; Miss Mary Draper, a well-known young woman of Camden, receives $3,000.

Alexander Draper and Avery Draper, farmers, near Wyoming, each $3,000 cash; Mrs. Annie Booker, recently married to a merchant of Hillsborough, Md., gets property valued at $3,000, and Isaac Jackson, a grocer at Wyoming, $2,500 and Miss Sallie Jackson, his daughter, $4,500.

Other gifts are to follow.

CLEARED OF $2,891,003 OF DEBT.

Arndt K. Housekeeper as Voluntary Bankrupt Discharged in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 30.—Arndt K. Housekeeper of Narberth, Penn., was discharged as a voluntary bankrupt in the United States District Court to-day, with liabilities of $2,891,003.83 and assets of $25.

It was stated that thirteen years ago, when Housekeeper was twenty-two years of age, some friends induced him to go on their bond in a gigantic real estate operation. This involved the erection of 800 houses in Philadelphia and near-by cities. He signed the necessary papers without thoroughly understanding what he was doing. Later the burden of the mortgages, nearly $3,000,000, fell on his shoulders.

The holders of the mortgages began proceedings against him. The judgments against him are held by trust companies and estates in various parts of the United States.

Reported Rich Gold Find in Arizona.

Special to The New York Times.

YUMA, Arizona, Nov. 30.—One of the richest gold ledges ever known in Arizona is reported to have been discovered in Central Yuma County, near the famous King of Arizona mines. The ore is said to be fairly speckled with free gold. The locators, six Yuma Mexicans, have bonded their main claims with absolutely no development work done for $50,000. The option has been secured by Ira P. Smith, Assistant Superintendent of the Territorial Penitentiary, who represents Frank M. Murphy of Prescott and several Los Angeles capitalists. The mine is in the most arid section of Arizona, about twenty-five miles east of the Colorado River, which is the nearest surface water.

CITY EMPLOYES' DISMAY

Two Thousand Men Dismissed in the Various Departments.

Mr. Croker's War Upon Protective Associations Declared to be the Cause—Police Defied Him.

Over two thousand city employes have lost their jobs during the past week, and there has been much wailing in the Tammany camps of several politicians. All the leaders have been asking questions as to why this sudden descent should be made on office holders so soon after election, and why 2,000 of the faithful should be dismissed to spend a very cold and cheerless Winter.

There have been several answers made to these questions. The majority of the removals have been in the Department of Streets and Highways, in charge of Commissioner Keating, and in the Department of Parks and the Department of Street Cleaning.

An estimate made yesterday by one of the city officials gives the number of removed in the Department of Streets and Highways during the past week as from 800 to 1,000 men. Commissioner Nagle of the Street Cleaning Department said that he was compelled to drop temporarily 150 drivers in Manhattan because there was not enough work for them to do.

The number discharged from the Department of Parks is said to be in excess of 600 men.

The version given by many of the discharged employes is that Richard Croker and Tammany Hall are trying to break up the protective associations of the employes which have been formed in many of the city departments. The fight made against Capt. Clifford in the Fire Department and his discharge is cited to show the war which, it is said, Tammany Hall intends to make against these protective associations.

Is was also disclosed yesterday that an attempt was made before Mr. Croker sailed for Europe to break up the protective association in the Police Department. The answer of the heads of the Police Department Protective Association is said to have been a practical defiance of the power of Mr. Croker and the Tammany leaders. The effort to break up this police association was a very determined one. The fact that such a fight was carried on by Mr. Croker is shown by several interviews given out before he sailed in which he told how strong the police were when banded together, and that the department was stronger by far than Tammany Hall ever could be, through the protective associations of the men.

Street Cleaning Commissioner Nagle, when seen by a NEW YORK TIMES reporter, said:

"There is no truth in any of the statements in regard to breaking up the labor unions in this department. On the other hand, I have tried to show all my men that I am in favor of such organizations."

"Why have so many men been discharged?" was asked.

"Well, you see, I have had about 160 drivers doing two or three days' work a week. I question whether I have the right to overwork the men long in such a way. As a matter of fact, the law forces me to drop temporarily the men last appointed, and in the list are many men whom I appointed."

Commissioner Keating was highly indignant when it was said that he had discharged over 800 employes in order to break up the protective associations of city employes. He said:

"Our records are here and open. We will show them. We have had to discharge a large number of employes because there is no work. Fifteen double teams and men were let go to-day. If I had the work I would keep the men on duty."

The men interviewed by a TIMES reporter around the Park Row Building nearly all claimed that the district leaders did not want to see the protective associations exist, because they would become practically political powers and would be in a position to make demands upon Tammany Hall during the next Mayoralty campaign. The fight, according to these men, has nothing to do with the labor organizations.

FIRE IN GRAND STREET.

Manufacturers of Women's Clothing Suffer a Loss of Nearly $30,000.

Fire was discovered shortly after 10 o'clock last night on the second floor of the seven-story building 64 Grand Street. When the firemen responded the flames had spread so rapidly that a second and third alarm was sent in. The two additional alarms brought Searchlight Engine No. 1 and Water Tower No. 1 to the scene. After several minutes' hard work the flames were got under control and put out.

The second floor, where the fire originated, is occupied by Wilson & Seaman, manufacturers of women's waists. The damage is estimated at $12,000, caused by fire and water. The third floor, to which the flames spread, is occupied by Beaman & Harris, manufacturers of women's underwear and shirt waists. Their damage is placed at $10,000; H. A. Rothman, manufacturer of ladies' waists, on the fourth floor, lost $3,000, due to water and smoke, and S. Ginsberg, who makes women's waists, on the fifth and sixth floors, suffered slight loss by smoke. The first and seventh floors of the building are unoccupied.

While the fire was in progress the sewer at West Broadway and Grand Street became blocked and the cellars of 54, 56, and 58 Grand Street were partially filled with water.

Earlier in the evening there was a slight fire in the basement of the six-story factory building 107 Greene Street, occupied by Shubkin & Price, manufacturers of hats and caps. The damage is estimated at $500.

SHOT THROUGH CAR WINDOW.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 30.—As the 1 P. M. train from here for New York was passing a point just south of the Scarsdale Station to-day, a small bullet struck a pane of glass in the smoking car on the east side, made a small hole through it, and covered the two passengers who were sitting in the seat with pulverized glass. Some one on the opposite side of the aisle said he heard the bullet strike the side of the car and fall down to the floor, but it could not be found. It probably fell behind the heating pipes.

Some of the passengers said they saw a group of Italians standing near where the shot was fired.

SENATOR DAVIS LIES IN STATE.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 30.—Thousands of people to-day passed through the Governor's Room in the Minnesota Capitol, where the body of the late United States Senator Cushman Kellogg Davis lay in State.

The main corridor of the building was draped with crêpe. In the centre of the chamber lay the body, underneath a chandelier hung with crêpe and smilax. Smilax, ferns, and potted plants occupied the corners of the room and were banked in the windows. The catafalque was draped with the National colors, and the casket was surrounded with floral tributes. At its head rested an oil portrait of the dead statesman; at its foot was the sword he carried through the civil war.

A double line of guards was formed about the bier, and all classes of society were in the line which passed in a continuous procession for hours, paying their last tribute to the dead.

W. H. OSBORNE A SUICIDE.

Clerk in French Cable Company's Office Goes to Poughkeepsie to Kill Himself—No Cause Known.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 30.—William H. Osborne, twenty-eight years of age, a clerk in the employ of the French Cable Company at 44 Broad Street, New York, committed suicide in the Nelson House, in this city, this evening by shooting himself in the right temple.

Osborne, who arrived in Poughkeepsie on Monday last, registered at the hotel as Hugh J. Wilson, and it was not until after he was found in his room that his true name was discovered, his identity being established by letters found on his person. These letters were from his father, H. Osborne, who is said to be manager of the French Cable Company's Cape Cod station at Orleans, Mass.; his sister, Ada C. Osborne of Providence, and from a woman who signed herself simply Florence. This last mentioned letter was postmarked New York and referred to the young man's requiring money.

While Osborne registered under an assumed name, he made no attempt to conceal his identity from telegraph operators and others whom he met outside of the hotel. On Wednesday night he called up 581 Harlem and had Miss Florence Day sent for. He had a conversation with her, which apparently had to do with the receipt of a letter and a telegraphic money order for $22 to-day.

About 5 o'clock this afternoon he got his key, and, asking to be called at 6:30 P. M., went to his room. Twenty minutes later a report was heard. The door was forced, and the young man was found lying on his bed in his shirt and trousers, clutching a revolver in his right hand and with a bullet in his brain. He was unconscious, and died in the ambulance on his way to Vassar Hospital.

Coroner Seifridge took charge of the body and the dead man's effects and notified his family.

At the offices of the French Cable Telegraph Company, 44 Broad Street, the manager in charge said last night that young Osborne had worked there for five or six years. So far as the night force knew, Osborne had no special cause for committing suicide. He had worked steadily up to last Saturday night, but since that time had not been seen at the office, and was not known to have sent any explanation of his absence to the men under whom he was employed. His position was that of a counter clerk, receiving messages.

Miss Florence Day lives at 246 West One Hundred and Twenty-first Street with her sister, Mrs. August Grenet. She had been on terms of very warm friendship with Osborne for about a year. They often talked with each other over the telephone.

Mrs. Grenet said Osborne seemed to her to have been despondent for the last month or two. She did not know why. All she knew of him that she could recollect was that he was a member of Company F, Seventh Regiment.

PERILOUS RIDE ON A LOG.

Man Has a Thrilling Experience in Kentucky River Rapids.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 30.—While Ezra Pigg was catching logs in a boom at Ford, Ky., he lost his balance and fell headlong into the river. He was nearly drowned before he succeeded in catching a log, on which he climbed.

The water was very swift, and it took two hours for two men in a skiff to overtake the log and rescue Pigg from his perilous position.

The log carried Pigg four miles down the stream, and through the Kentucky River rapids.

EPWORTH LEAGUE CONVENTION.

$50 Round Trip Rate Likely to be Made Between Chicago and San Francisco.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—The Trans-Continental Passenger Association held a meeting here to-day for the purpose of deciding upon a rate for the Epworth League Convention, to be held in San Francisco next Summer.

A fifty-dollar round-trip rate from Chicago and return has been proposed, and it is almost certain to be made, if not by agreement, by independent action on the part of one or other of the lines.

A new element has been introduced into the situation since the meeting in St. Louis last week. The proposition for the fifty-dollar rate was on the presumption that ticket holders would be compelled to go and return by the same route.

The Northern Pacific and the Great Northern have made it be understood that they are competitors for the business, and unless provision be made in the arrangements for allowing ticket holders going by the Southern route to return by the Northern one, or vice versa, they will see to it that they get a fair share of the business in both directions, irrespective of the rates that have to be made to get it.

MANILA'S CHIEF OF POLICE.

Office Tendered to Chief Campbell of St. Louis and Accepted.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 30.—Chief of Police John W. Campbell of St. Louis will probably be the first police chief of Manila under the civil government. The post was offered to him three days ago, and to-day he mailed his acceptance to Manila. It will reach the Taft Commission in three weeks, when it is confidently expected that Gen. MacArthur will cable his approval.

Chief Campbell is a Democrat, and his selection to the important post by the Administration is regarded as a recognition of the Gold Democratic element, which has strongly urged his appointment. He has the hearty support of many strong Republicans as well. The appointment is credited to Attorney James L. Blair, a prominent sound-money Democrat and brother of Frank P. Blair, attorney for Oberlin M. Carter. The Blairs are said to be extensively acquainted in the military arm of the Government.

John W. Campbell is forty-nine years old, and took an aggressive stand against mob violence in the recent street railway strike. He is a man of splendid physique and great physical courage.

SHOT WITH A PROPERTY GUN.

MATTEAWAN, Nov. 30.—With a gun which had been used in a play at the Matteawan Opera House last night, Philip Sirrene, a young man, nineteen years of age, accidentally shot George Decker in the breast, causing a serious wound.

Both men are employed in the opera house. After the performance Decker went to the front of the house, sat down on a chair, and dozed. Sirrene came from the stage with the gun in his hand. He told Decker to go home. Only half awake the latter mumbled something in reply, and Sirrene said, in a dramatic way, "Come on or I'll fire." The gun went off, and Decker rolled over on the floor. He was taken to the hospital, and Sirrene was placed under arrest.

Sirrene declared the shooting to be an accident, he not knowing the gun was loaded. In a statement to-night Decker absolves him from all blame. The gun was loaded with blank cartridge, but being held so close to Decker's breast the wadding inflicted a dangerous wound.

DEATH OF OSCAR WILDE

Is Said to Have Died from Meningitis, but There Is a Rumor that He Committed Suicide.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 30.—Oscar Wilde died at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the Maison du Perier, Due des Beaux Arts, in the Latin Quarter. It is a small, obscure hotel, at which Wilde had been living for several months under the name of Manmoth.

According to the accounts obtainable Wilde was operated upon six weeks ago for meningitis, caused by an abcess in the ear, which the doctors were unable to locate. He is said to have been unconscious for two days, and before that time to have been received into the Roman Catholic Church. Lord Alfred Douglas was with him when he died.

Le Journal says, however, that it is rumored that Wilde committed suicide.

Wilde will be buried in this city on Monday.

Oscar Wilde was born in Dublin in 1856. He was the son of Sir William R. Wills Wilde, M. D., surgeon-oculist to Queen Victoria, antiquarian, statistician, and man of letters, and of Jane Francesca, Lady Wilde, who achieved considerable reputation as a poetess. Oscar's first schooling was at the Portora Royal School, Enniskillen, and later he studied at Trinity College, Dublin, and at Magdalen College, Oxford University. The brilliancy of his parents was transmitted to him. At Trinity College he won the Berkeley gold medal for Greek, and he won many class honors at Oxford, chief among them being the Newdigate prize, with a poem entitled "Ravenna."

In 1879 he went to London, and soon became a celebrity through the aesthetic fad which he started. His craze for aestheticism was accompanied by eccentricities of dress, which soon made him one of the most talked about persons in London. He affected knickerbockers, and black silk stockings, and he wore a sunflower. He was caricatured by Du Maurier in Punch, and satirized by Gilbert in "Patience." In Punch he was labeled "Postlethwaite," in "Patience" "Bunthorne." The advertising he received was just what he wanted. He took advantage of it to effect a contract for a lecture tour in America. The tour was not the success he had anticipated, but he made some money out of it.

On his return to England Wilde dropped all his eccentricities of dress, but his other affectations became greater than ever, in the high social circles of London, to which he had entree, he was regarded as a brilliant conversationalist and poseur.

Wilde's first published book was his Newdigate prize poem, printed in 1879, and well received by the reviewers. After his return from the United States he applied himself industriously to literary work.

The most popular of Wilde's books was "The Picture of Dorian Gray," which has had an immense sale, both in the United Kingdom and this country. It appeared first in Lippincott's Magazine, in 1895, and was afterward issued in book form, with considerable additions, by Ward, Lock & Co. After the famous trial the London publishers withdrew it from circulation, although inundated with orders for copies.

Among literary people "Intentions," published in 1894, is regarded as Wilde's finest prose work. It is a collection of essays, and, though full of the author's favorite paradoxes, contains much art criticism which shows evidences of careful thought. Some of the essays, notably "The Decay of Lying" and "The Critic as Artist," had previously appeared in English reviews and had attracted a good deal of attention.

Wilde's poems were first published in 1881, and a new edition was issued at the Bodley Head about ten years later. Both editions were exhausted a very short time after publication. Many isolated stanzas and lines have been quoted to show that, had he possessed the necessary perseverance and steadfastness of character, Wilde could have been one of the great poets of the nineteenth century. Many persons have also noticed the remarkable forecast of his own life which the author wrote in the dedication to this volume of verse and the passionate regret there expressed that he had not used his gifts to better purpose.

Among Wilde's other published works, exclusive of his plays, are "The House of Pomegranates—Colored Poems in Prose," with illustrations by Arthur Ricketts and C. H. Shannon; "Salome," written in French, illustrated by Aubrey Beardsley; "The Happy Prince," a volume of fairy tales, and "Lord Arthur Savile's Crime," a collection of short stories.

After Wilde's release from prison a poem was published anonymously, entitled "A Ballad of Reading Jail." It created a great deal of interest and favorable criticism, and is now known to have been written by Wilde.

Wilde was spoken of as an aspiring dramatist long before any piece signed by his name was acted. His "Salome" was cast in the dramatic form, and "Guido Ferranti," a tragic piece briefly acted here by Lawrence Barrett, was reputed to be his work. There was a certain lyrical quality in some of its passages which created this report. His first acknowledged play, however, was "Lady Windermere's Fan," produced by George Alexander at the St. James's Theatre, in London, in 1893, and acted here soon afterward at Wallack's (then Palmer's) without setting the town ablaze. There was much verbal smartness in this piece, and it was no strong accession against its merit to say that its plot was antique and its stagecraft insufficient. But its insincerity and diffusiveness were not to be denied. After the first performance in London, Wilde appeared on the stage of the St. James's smoking a cigarette, and responded to a "call" that was not altogether friendly with imperturbable good humor and assurance. This served its purpose in giving the piece a unique advertisement.

His next play, "A Woman of No Importance," was acted first at the London Haymarket, under Beerbohm Tree's direction, and in New York, at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, with Rose Coghlan in the principal rôle. It was, indeed, a play of no importance, and Miss Coghlan wisely employed her famous brother Charles to patch it up and lend it some sort of theatrical value. "The Importance of Being Earnest," frankly a farce and full of nimble wit, on the other hand, missed a long run at the Empire Theatre because it was too dainty and fragile to suit the taste and understanding of the ordinary theatregoer, and "An Ideal Husband," admirably acted by Daniel Frohman's company at the Lyceum, while it made no one's fortune and lacked vigorous dramatic spirit, was a clever piece of work which aroused the critical admiration of W. D. Howells.

Lately, various plays, signed by others, have been credited by presumably malicious gossips to the pen of Wilde. Among these have been "The Case of Rebellious Susan," by Henry Arthur Jones, the same author's "The Liars" and "Mr. and Mrs. Daventry," by Frank Harris, lately produced in London by Mrs. Patrick Campbell. But no sensible person has ever permitted himself to believe such yarns. Men of the literary standing and ability of Mr. Jones and Mr. Harris do not sign their names to the work of others for any reason.

As a dramatist, Wilde was hampered by his utter lack of sincerity and his inability to master the technical side of playwriting. But his wit, his pleasing literary facility, and his droll views of life made some of his plays rather effective with a limited audience.

It was in 1895 that the great scandal broke which ruined Wilde. It came about through an action brought by the Marquis of Queensberry, whose motive was the protection of his son, Lord Alfred Douglas, over whom Wilde had exercised an evil influence. The evidence at Wilde's trial shocked the civilized world and covered him with disgrace which it was not possible for him to outlive. He was sentenced to prison for a term of years. At the expiration of his sentence he quitted England. It was later learned that he had settled in Paris. From a pet of society he had become the most despised of social outcasts. Recent reports from Paris were to the effect that he was living in abject poverty.

In 1884 Wilde was married to Constance, daughter of Horace Lloyd, barrister. They had two children, Cyril and Vivian, both of whom survive.

TO BUY A NEWPORT ESTATE.

Report that Cornelius Vanderbilt Will Erect a Handsome Summer Residence on the Property.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 30.—It is reported that Cornelius Vanderbilt intends to spend the greater part of each year in Newport, and to this end is about to purchase a large estate here and erect on it a handsome Summer residence.

The property Mr. Vanderbilt contemplates buying is said to be the so-called Hazard estate, which is now owned by the Newport Hospital as a bequest to that institution by the will of the late John Alfred Hazard.

The tract contains about forty acres of land, and is situated north of Ocean Avenue. On the property is the well-known Lily Pond used by the Newport Fishing Club, and which, in the event of his purchasing it, Mr. Vanderbilt will have the privilege of using. The grounds are well adapted for all kinds of sport in addition to the picturesque pond, where boating and fishing, and even bathing can be indulged in.

While nothing definite regarding the purchase is given out here for publication, it is positively known that it is Mr. Vanderbilt's purpose to acquire an estate here.

The news of the intended purchase has been received with great satisfaction by all the cottagers.

MR. ODELL'S APPOINTMENTS.

Adjt. Gen. Hoffman and John N. Partridge to Retain Their Offices.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Nov. 30.—Governor-elect Odell this morning made public his selection of Brig. Gen. Edward M. Hoffman of Elmira to be Adjutant General of the forces of the State and his Chief of Staff. Gen. Hoffman was appointed by Gov. Roosevelt last January to succeed Avery D. Andrews of New York.

Mr. Odell also announced the reappointment of John N. Partridge of Brooklyn to be Superintendent of Public Works.

DINNER TO MR. ODELL.

He Advocates a Shipbuilding Plant, and Offers to Take Stock in It.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Nov. 30.—The Business Men's Association of the City of Newburg gave a complimentary dinner to their fellow-member, Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., at the Palatine Hotel this evening. There were 150 guests present, among them being Governor-elect Odell, his secretary, James G. Graham; his stenographer, J. C. McKnight; Judge William D. Dickey of the Supreme Court, Mayor J. D. Wilson, and ex-Mayor Benjamin B. Odell, father of the Governor-elect. William Cook Belknap, a representative of the oldest business house in the city, presided. The Rev. Dr. William K. Hall of the First Presbyterian Church invoked the blessing.

While the dinner was in progress there was singing by the guests, under the leadership of Prof. N. S. Taylor, of a dozen old-time melodies, principally plantation songs. Major Wilbur H. Weston presided at the exercises, introducing as speakers of the evening Mr. Hirschberg of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, Creswell MacLaughlin, editor of The Schoolmaster, Job E. Hedges of New York, and Col. Charles W. Fuller of Bayonne, N. J.

Mr. Odell, on being introduced by the toastmaster, spoke briefly to the toast, "Our Next Governor, Our Honored Guest; B. B. Odell." In course of his remarks he said there were important legislative matters to be looked after during the next two years, most important of all that of taxation. He also referred incidentally to the fact that there was a great field for the association in building an enlarged shipbuilding plant where the largest vessels of the world may be constructed. During the evening it was stated by the toastmaster that Mr. Odell had announced his willingness to take $100,000 of stock for such purpose, and that movements were already on foot for the construction of the plant in Newburg.

ORGANIZED LABOR IN CHICAGO.

Industrial Union Members Affiliate with Building Trades Council.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—At midnight yesterday the National Industrial Trades Union ceased to exist, and its members will hereafter affiliate with the unions of the Building Trades Council. President Symms, in a valedictory, hopes that the members will work as hard for the upbuilding and maintenance of organized labor as they have fought against it during the life of the Industrial Union.

This action will gladden the hearts of organized labor. The Industrial Union was formed in February, being created by the contractors to aid them in their controversy with the Building Trades Council. At first the Industrial Union prospered and its membership increased to such an extent that steps were taken to enlarge the organization and make its scope National instead of local.

President Symms was bitter in his denunciation of the contractors, and said his experience with them had taught him that the Building Contractors' Council had been formed for the express purpose of destroying the unions in Chicago, increasing the hours of labor, and reducing the wages. He further said that he had become convinced that the union men had a just cause for their fight against the "bosses," and that the latter were only using members of his union to the bosses' own advantage.

The Bishops have named the following persons to prepare the book: S. F. Upham of Drew Theological Seminary, Chairman; S. C. Nutter of St. Albans, Vt.; Prof. C. T. Stuart of Garrett Biblical Institute, and Dr. C. M. Cobern of Denver.

Author of "Dooley Papers" Very Ill.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—Finlay Peter Dunne, author of the "Dooley Papers" and for many years an active newspaper man of Chicago, lies dangerously ill with pneumonia at St. Luke's Hospital. He was taken ill a few days ago in his apartments, in the Virginia Hotel, but later was removed to the hospital, by the advice of his physician. Inquiry at St. Luke's Hospital to-night elicited the information that Mr. Dunne's condition was unchanged. The attendant physician said the patient was resting easily.

TRUNKS SEIZED AT THE BREVOORT HOUSE

There Were Nine of Them, and They Were Filled with Dutiable Goods.

NOW IN APPRAISER'S STORES

Proprietor Jaimes's Tragic Attitude Caused Much Excitement at the Hotel—His Mysterious Explanation.

Nine trunks filled with dutiable goods, mostly table and bed linen, were seized at the Brevoort House last night by a Deputy United States Inspector, armed with a search warrant issued late yesterday afternoon from United States District Attorney Burnett's office.

The seizure was intended to be a secret one, and the preliminary steps were conducted with great secrecy, but when Charles Jaimes, proprietor of the hotel, was confronted by the deputy shortly before 6 o'clock, and a demand was made for the trunks, Mr. Jaimes proclaimed aloud to the guests, who happened to be in the office, into a state of considerable alarm by declaring that if the property was taken from the hotel it would be over his dead body.

"Well, we won't have any trouble about it, there's no reasoning for that," the deputy is reported to have replied. "You just walk to the police station with me and I'll show you that I have the necessary authority, and incidentally we'll see about the trunks."

Proprietor Jaimes was greatly excited over the departure of the deputy, and would go to the police station with him. He started out, leaving the guests wondering what had come over the man who had been so genial but a few minutes before. Inside of half an hour he returned, and in the hotel office explained to the guests that he had been under the impression that the deputy was a thief, but that he had found out his mistake, and that the man was all right. Proprietor Jaimes exhibited a search warrant and a number of blank warrants.

"I don't know anything about it," he said, "I don't know what you may have heard, but I had been assured before the deputy came that he was a thief, and I was going to have him arrested. I am sorry to say that I have been deceived in many men in my time, but I have never been deceived in any more than I was in this man. You know the rest."

Proprietor Jaimes then went to his room, where he remained for some time. Meanwhile the deputy, with the assistance of a number of detectives, began the search of the trunks. They were found to contain dutiable goods, and were then sealed and taken away in a cab.

Proprietor Jaimes, when seen by a TIMES reporter, said that the trunks had been shipped to him from Europe by a friend, and that he had no idea that they contained dutiable goods. He said that he had not opened the trunks himself, and that he had no knowledge of what they contained. He said that he would have no trouble in proving that the goods were not his property.

"How about that seizure of nine trunks?" he was asked by

BANQUET OF THE ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY

Over 400 Scots Celebrate Its 144th Anniversary.

PATRIOTIC TOASTS AND SONGS

More than 450 loyal sons of the land of the heather gathered about the banqueting board in Delmonico's last night to celebrate the one hundred and forty-fourth anniversary of the St. Andrew's Society. The dinner was one of the largest that has ever been held in the history of the organization, and much of its success was due to the efforts of its President, Andrew Carnegie, who presided.

In front of the President occupying the post of honor was the historic ram's head of the society, and during the evening a flavor of the old times was added to the proceedings by the bagpipe playing of MacDonald of Glengarry, a Herculean Scot who had seen service in the Black Watch. There was also added picturesqueness to the scene from the fact that many of the diners wore the national costume, the bright plaids of which contrasted strongly with the sombre dress coats of the others at the board.

Mr. Carnegie received an ovation when he arose to open the feast of reason and the flow of soul" part of the proceedings. Waving aloft a miniature bottle of Scotch whisky which he said had just been sent to him, he believed with the National poet of Scotland that "whisky and freedom gang together." "And in the United States, at least," he added, "it will be admitted that whisky goes with great freedom."

Mr. Carnegie spoke of the night that was being celebrated and begged those of American birth to bear with him. The assembled gave much attention to the land they loved. "If we did not love Scotland so much," he said, "we could not be the loyal citizens that we are in the land of our adoption. The man who forgets his mother will never be worthy of his wife." [Great applause.]

Mr. Carnegie then proposed the health of the Queen, and after the cheering had died away the voices of the diners were raised in unison to sing "God Save the Queen."

Next came the toast of "The President," and amid tremendous applause the diners sang "The Star-Spangled Banner."

SCOTCH VOTE THE AMERICAN VOTE.

"The Land o' Cakes" was the first toast, and the Rev. Dr. Donald Sage Mackay made the response, during the course of which he said, "We here hear sometimes of a German vote, and once in a while of an Irish vote, but we never hear of a Scotch vote. The reason is easy of explanation. The Scotch vote is the American vote, and with it Scotchmen show their allegiance to the State and to the municipality. To-day Scotch presbyter stands with American Bishop to make this city a clean city rather than a station on the rapid transit system down to hell." [Great applause.]

Hamilton W. Mabie responded to the toast "The Land We Live In." He said to the best of his recollection it was Gen. Porter who said some years ago before the St. Andrew's Society after he had listened so much talk about the heather and the Clyde: "The Clyde may be a very noble river, but the whole of it would not make a gargle for one of the mouths of the Mississippi."

Mr. Mabie said that he was one at least of those who protested against a statement once made by Senator Hanley that America was the result of the average man. "If it is that," he said, "then it is the inferno of the superior man. Countries are not made for average men, but for superior men. No country has a richer heritage of the imagination than we have. No country in the world is girdled by a greater record of heroism, of devotion, and of idealism than is this country of ours. Could there be a greater sample of audacious idealism than this very Government of ours? It is so audacious that I sometimes believe that had our fathers realized the audacity of their undertaking they might never have entered into it.

"I speak for the land that we live in, not because it is great in riches, not because it is great in area, not because of the full dinner pail, for after all the only importance of the full dinner pail is its relation to the man who carries it; [cries of 'Good!' and applause,] but because I believe it has the same qualities that made Greece great, that made Judea great, that made Scotland and England great, and that these qualities will develop a new National character, a National life, and a National history."

Bishop Potter entered the room just as Mr. Mabie finished talking. At once the diners rose to their feet and gave him a greeting. When he had reached his place Mr. Carnegie arose and proposed "Three cheers for Bishop Potter," which were given with a hearty will.

Whitelaw Reid spoke to the toast, "The English-Speaking Race," drawing a picture of the ultimate unity of all English-speaking peoples, and President Patton of Princeton spoke to the toast, "Scottish Literature." Then there were loud cries of "Reed, Reed," which Mr. Carnegie quieted by announcing that "Tom Reed" would now speak to "The American in Scotland."

EX-SPEAKER REED'S ADDRESS.

"I want," said Mr. Reed, "to add a little addendum to what my namesake has said. If ever the English-speaking people unite it will be because the principles of the United States have permeated England rather than that the principles of England have permeated the United States. [Tremendous applause.]

"When I was told about this toast I thought it would be well to find out something about my subject, and after the habits of political persons whose ways I have abandoned, but whose habits I have not quite lost, I got an encyclopedia; and in order that justice might be done you by any impartial person, I selected a French encyclopedia and found out all about your ancestry. I cannot talk to you in Scotch like Dr. Mackay, so you will have to be satisfied with the imperfect medium of the English language.

"These ancestors of yours were a pretty wild and pretty savage race. They were not only content to fight with each other, which might have been a public blessing, [laughter,] but they proceeded to sally forth and take the property of the Lowlander as well as each other's. Then, instead of wearing the habiliaments of the decent Christian I learn that they wore a phillibag, which is an arrangement that comes down to the knees at tartan and half trousers, which are concealed by the phillibag. I am sorry that your ancestors saw fit to make that concealment, for it has given rise to the injurious suspicion that they didn't wear them at all.

"I also learn that the people of Scotland, like the natives of Maine, have a powerful tendency toward migration. [Laughter.] I see before me some very good-looking men. Some of you are bankers and merchants and rich people generally, and you owe it to your power to get away from Scotland, even though you do carry your traits with you.

Mr. Reed then took issue with a statement made by President Patton, who said that Saintsbury had made some harsh criticisms on Carlyle. "When somebody says that Carlyle has passed away it is my impression that that somebody has never come on," said Mr. Reed. "He taught men to despise cant, to love truth, and to be manly. He said his say in the world, and that is worth while. A man who has done that can afford to die."

In conclusion Mr. Reed paid a glowing tribute to Burns, Mansfield, and Lord Erskine. He said that he had often stood in wondering awe before the picture showing a line of flying gray horses and inscribed "Scotland Forever." Yet it was not fighting, he said, much and glorious as had been the Scots' record in that that would make Scotland Forever, but the integrity, the manliness, and the loyalty of the sons of the land of the heather.

Bishop Potter, who was not on the toast list, and who said that he had had no idea when he came to the banquet that he was to be called upon, was asked by Mr. Carnegie to make an address. The Bishop confined his remarks to a sketch of some personal recollections of Mr. Carnegie in the days when the Bishop was a clergyman in charge of his first pastorate in Greensburg, Penn.

At the conclusion of the banquet the diners rose and sang, "Auld Lang Syne," after having drunk the health of John Sloan, the ex-President of the society, who is ill at his home.

ACTED AS HIS OWN POLICEMAN.

William Belvin, a guest at the New York Hotel, 30 East Forty-second Street, who said he lived there at the expense of Oliver H. P. Belmont, was hurriedly driven to Police Headquarters yesterday morning a prisoner. As the cab drew up to the curb a tall, red-mustached man jumped out of it dragging a struggling little man after him up the steps and into the corridors. There he asked the officer on watch for the Captain's office.

"This fellow has 'touched' me," the big man cried, excitedly, "and I want to see the Captain and explain the case."

The policeman took the men to the Detective Bureau, where they were closeted with Sergt. Phelan for nearly two hours. The man who claimed he had been robbed said he was Mervin M. Murray of 31 Nassau Street. He said he had been attracted to the prisoner because of his stories about his work in the campaign of Mr. Belmont, and because he spoke of the Vanderbilts as backing him financially during his stay in New York.

Murray said that he had been in a Warren Street poolroom early in the evening, and had there lost $40. From there he went to a saloon in Murray Street, where he met Belvin, who captivated him with his stories. The men drank together some time, when, remembering his money, Murray put his hand in his pocket and found that $135 was gone. He accused the little man of robbing him. The latter declared himself innocent, but he was seized and dragged into the street by the big man and marched to Broadway and Murray Street, where a cab was hailed, into which Belvin was thrown. Murray told the cabman to drive up Broadway until he met a policeman. They drove to the corner of Thirty-first Street before they encountered one. He was leaning against a lamppost there, and Murray took his prisoner out of the cab and to the policeman. To explain to the policeman, who told him to go to Police Headquarters. He called a second cab and was taken to Mulberry Street.

Detective Phelan searched the prisoner, but found only 35 cents in his pockets and decided to let him go. When Belvin was released he ran at top speed out of the station. Presently the other man came out. He was weeping, and between sobs said: "They stood in with the other fellow in there." Then he explained that he was a traveling agent for the Bankers' Life Insurance Company of 31 Nassau Street.

At the New York Hotel it was said nothing was known of Belvin except that he had registered there from Richmond, Va., a month ago.

CLAIMS ON TURKEY SETTLED?

Reported that an Irade Has Been Promulgated Looking to Payment for Armenian Massacres.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 29.—The opinion is expressed in diplomatic circles that the American claims arising from the Armenian massacres "may now be regarded as practically settled, as an irade providing for the building of a cruiser in the United States is officially promulgated."

The question of the Consulate at Harpoot remains open, the Porte persisting in its refusal to grant an exequatur to Dr. Thomas H. Norton. The moral effect, however, created by the presence of the United States battleship Kentucky at Smyrna in support of the representations of the American Legation, taken in conjunction with the settlement of the other claims, leads the legation to hope for an early arrangement of all outstanding differences.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—"It is probable," says the Constantinople correspondent of The Standard, "that the contract for a cruiser to be built in the United States will be canceled as soon as the Kentucky departs, for it is difficult to see how the money is to be found."

A Reuter dispatch from Constantinople says it is suggested that Russia is prompting the Porte to refuse to grant an exequatur to Dr. Norton. The dispatch adds: "It is an open secret that they dislike the foreign Consuls in Asia Minor, especially the Americans, whom they suspect of aiding the American mission work in Armenia."

Nothing in regard to the United States battleship Kentucky is coming direct from Smyrna. The authorities there are evidently censoring all dispatches.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 30.—Official affirmation of the report that the Cramp Shipbuilding Company of this city had been awarded the contract for the construction of a cruiser for the Turkish Government has not been received by that firm. A monthly meeting of the Directors of the corporation was held in the Bourse Building this morning, but beyond a discussion of the negotiations now pending with the Turks for the building of a war boat and surmises as to the truth that the contract had been awarded, nothing relative to the subject was done.

Charles H. Cramp said the firm knew nothing more than what he read in the newspapers. "It is true negotiations are pending," said the shipbuilder, "but whether we will get the contract or not is something I cannot say. The clause in the cabled report that the price agreed upon will give a sufficient surplus to pay the American indemnities I do not understand at all. I cannot see how the price of a boat for the Turkish Government will secure the penalties demanded by our Government for any breach of international courtesy that may have been committed."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—No proposition has come to the United States Government from Turkey looking to the payment of the missionary claims under the guise of an order for a warship to be built in the United States. While it is hardly expected that any formal proposition of this kind will be forthcoming, it is, of course, beyond the power of the State Department to prevent or interfere with any arrangement that the Turkish Government may enter into with American shipbuilders and individual claimants.

The point is, after all, to have the claims paid, and the State Department officials are not very particular as to the form in which the payments are made. Perhaps they are indifferent in this respect because of knowledge of the fact that the Turkish Government might be much embarrassed by the pressure of European creditors were the United States Government to insist upon certain forms of procedure in this case.

There are no developments in the negotiations respecting the exequatur of Dr. Norton, United States Consul at Harpoot. The matter is still one of correspondence, and the authorities here are confident that the Turkish Government will, in the end, yield on this point.

MOLER AND DRAKE ASSIGN.

New York Men File Suit Against Columbus Dry Goods House.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 30.—Albert Friedlander, Tefft, Weller & Co., Julius Loewenthal, and Eugene, George and Max Galland of Gallan Brothers, all of New York, filed a petition in the Federal Court today asking that the dry goods firm of Moler & Drake, the most extensive in this city, be declared bankrupt.

The firm, whose store occupies an entire new building, made an assignment last Tuesday, and the New York creditors insist that in the light of the figures shown the house is bankrupt.

The Friedlander claim is $1,924.25, Teft, Weller & Co.'s $179.49, Mr. Loewenthal's $106.24, and Galland Brothers' $453.63, the aggregate being $2,660.61. The store is in the hands of Butler Sheldon and Attorney Henry J. Booth, who hold the goods for the benefit of the creditors, and an inventory is in progress.

Moler and Drake claim that the suspension is merely temporary and that they will reorganize and incorporate in February. According to the schedule, the assets far exceed the liabilities.

DETAILS OF THE ROOT BILL

Radical Change in Method of Appointing the Staff.

ROTATION IN ARMY PROVIDED

Officers of the Line to Serve on the Staff for a Time and Then Return to the Line.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Details of Secretary Root's Army bill, now in the hands of the House Committee on Military Affairs, were made public to-day. The measure provides for a Lieutenant General, six Major Generals, and fifteen Brigadier Generals. The number of Captains, First Lieutenants, and Second Lieutenants of the cavalry and infantry is increased from twelve to fifteen for each regiment. Three of the Captains shall be available for detail as Adjutant, Quartermaster, and Commissary; three First Lieutenants for Squadron and Battalion Adjutants, and three Second Lieutenants for Squadron Quartermasters and Commissaries.

Provision for the discontinuance of the artillery arm, as at present organized, is made by organizing an artillery corps to be known as coast artillery and field artillery. Officers of artillery are to be placed on one list for promotion, according to seniority. The corps will have a Chief of Artillery, detailed from the Colonels, and while serving in this capacity he will have the rank and pay of a Brigadier General. There will be, in addition, 8 Colonels, 13 Lieutenant Colonels, 39 Majors, 182 Captains, 198 First Lieutenants, and 192 Second Lieutenants. The Captains and Lieutenants, when not required for duty with batteries, will be available as staff officers. Each battery of coast and field artillery shall be organized as at present. The increases in the artillery shall be 20 per cent. each year for five years, until the maximum of 18,920 men is reached.

INCREASE IN DEPARTMENTS.

The Adjutant General will have the rank of Major General, and his corps is increased 1 Lieutenant Colonel and 10 Majors. The Inspector General's department is increased 1 Lieutenant Colonel and 6 Majors. The Judge Advocate's department is increased 1 Colonel and 3 Majors. The Quartermaster's department is increased 2 Colonels, 1 Lieutenant Colonel, 4 Majors, and 24 Captains. To fill the grade of Captains, volunteers not over thirty-six years old may be appointed.

The Subsistence Department is increased 1 Colonel, 1 Lieutenant Colonel, 1 Major, and 13 Captains. The Medical Department is increased 2 Colonels, 2 Lieutenant Colonels, 10 Majors, and 10 Captains and First Lieutenants. The Pay Department is increased 1 Colonel and 1 Lieutenant Colonel, and the number of Majors is fixed at 9 instead of 20, as at present, with 27 Captains. The Majors in the Pay Department at present will hold that rank, but no promotions are to be made until the number of Majors is reduced below 9. No. 11 of the vacancies, men serving as Additional Paymasters not over forty years old may be selected.

The Engineer Corps is increased 5 Captains, 14 First Lieutenants, and 21 Second Lieutenants. Promotions are to be made by seniority, and vacancies are to be filled from the regular army. The Ordnance Bureau is increased 1 Lieutenant Colonel and 7 First Lieutenants. The Signal Corps is increased 2 Majors, 4 Captains, 9 First Lieutenants, and during the present emergency the President is authorized to continue for duty in the Philippines 10 First Lieutenants and 10 Second Lieutenants as volunteer signal officers.

CHANGES IN THE STAFF.

All promotions in the staff created under the act are to be made from the present staff corps, and when vacancies occur by retirement or otherwise the promotions shall be made by seniority. Vacancies that cannot be filled by such promotions are to be filled by detail from the line of the army, the details lasting four years, after which the officer shall not be available for staff duty until he has served two years in the line. The provision for filling vacancies at the head of various staff corps is as follows:

That upon the occurrence of a vacancy in the office of Adjutant General, Inspector General, Judge Advocate General, Quartermaster General, Commissary General, Paymaster General, Chief of Ordnance, or Chief Signal Officer the President may appoint the chief of any of said departments or corps from the officers of the army at large not below the grade of Lieutenant Colonel;

Provided, That chiefs of staff corps, or departments shall be appointed for terms of four years, unless sooner terminated by the President, and while so serving shall have the rank, pay, and allowances now authorized for chiefs of said corps or departments; and,

Provided, That when any officer having detail as chief of a staff, corps, or department is retired he shall be retired with rank and pay now authorized for the chief of such staff, corps, or department.

It is provided also that officers below the grade of Lieutenant Colonel in any of the above-named departments shall serve one year in the line, but shall not lose their places in the staff corps.

The above quoted provision is one of the most important and radical of the changes proposed by the bill. It amounts, in effect, to the abolition of the staff corps as a permanent institution in which officers now serve throughout their military career. The proposition is that line officers shall be appointed to do staff duty for a definite period and, at the conclusion of that term, return again to the line, has been strenuously advocated by many of the best military authorities in this country for years. It is a pet idea of ex-Secretary of War Proctor, now one of the members of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs.

According to the provision, as it now stands, the full effect will not be worked out for several years, as it is not proposed to make the provision, if it should be enacted into law, applicable to present members of the staff corps above the rank of Lieutenant Colonel.

An official statement in connection with the bill was issued at the War Department to-day. It explains certain provisions, and is as follows:

"There has been considerable difference in the promotions in various staff corps since the war of the rebellion, which has led, from time to time, to special legislation with a view to rectifying inequalities. In the new bill, which has been presented to Congress, the Secretary of War has caused to be adopted a ratio as follows: To each Colonel there shall be one and a half Lieutenant Colonels and three Majors, and to each Major of staff, three Captains.

"This has been made to apply to the departments, except the Engineers and Medical Department. The Engineers already have a greater proportion of high grade officers than would be authorized under this scheme, but no reduction has been made in the corps. The increase has been made at the bottom. The duties of the engineers are largely connected with river and harbor improvements."

PROVISION FOR FILLING VACANCIES.

The provision for the filling of vacancies that may occur by reason of the increase of officers under the proposed act is as follows:

That vacancies in the grade of field officers and Captain, created by this act, in the cavalry, artillery, and infantry shall be filled by promotion according to seniority in each branch, respectively. Vacancies existing after the promotions have been made shall be provided for as follows:

A sufficient number shall be reserved for the next graduating class at the United States Military Academy. Officers now holding commissions in the volunteer army and who are not exceed thirty-two years at the date of the passage of this act, may be ordered before boards of officers for such examination as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War. Volunteer officers who establish their fitness before these examining boards may be appointed to the grade of Second Lieutenant in the regular army. Volunteer officers so appointed to the grade of Second Lieutenant shall be arranged according to rank, on a separate list.

All vacancies then existing in the grade of First Lieutenant in each arm of the service shall be filled from this list and the lineal lists of Second Lieutenants, according to seniority, as determined by length of prior commissioned service; but nothing herein contained shall change the relative rank of officers heretofore commissioned as Second Lieutenants in the regular army.

When the vacancies in the grade of First Lieutenant shall have been filled from the two lists, the names of the remaining Second Lieutenants shall then be placed on one list in each branch, arranged as to seniority, according to the dates of their commissions, and promotions hereafter shall be made as provided for in existing law.

Provision is made for the retirement of any officer who has been suspended from duty. This would apply to Gen. Eagan, Commissary General.

The President is authorized to enlist and organize natives of the Philippine Islands in organizations similar to the cavalry and infantry to the number of 12,000, the officers for such organizations to be selected from the regular army. The highest officers in command of the natives shall be Majors. When natives by their service and appointments in the grade of Second and First Lieutenants. A regiment of Porto Ricans also is authorized.

Cadets Expect Early Graduation.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, Nov. 30.—Cadets who are in close touch with Washington have been informed that the class of 1901 will be graduated not later than the end of February, and possibly a few weeks earlier. The reorganization of the army will cause a heavy demand for capable officers. There are seventy-four men in the class of 1901. Many of them are needed at the present moment to fill existing vacancies.

ADVOCATES A NAVAL RESERVE.

Commander Southerland Says a National Organization Is Necessary.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—In a special report to the Navy Department Lieut. Commander W. H. Southerland, the officer in charge of the Naval Militia, sets forth facts to make obvious the necessity of a National naval reserve, in addition to the present militia organizations, calling particular attention to the fact that this proposed innovation is not suggested with any view whatever of displacing the present Naval Militia.

The general Government of the United States, says Commander Southerland, has no directive control whatever over these naval militia bodies. They are State bodies pure and simple, organized under State laws, and thus it is that no member is under obligation to answer the call of the President for any naval service.

"Then, too, it is pointed out that our opponent in a possible war of the future may be a thoroughly equipped, first rate naval power in striking contrast to our adversary of 1898, and that, therefore, it behooves the Navy Department to create some sort of reserve force, organized under the provisions of Federal law, and operating under the direct control of the Navy Department, ready at a moment's notice to reinforce the regular fighting strength of the navy.

"The status of the national reserve officer would be well defined. He would hold a commission in the navy, signed by the President, and his name would be borne on the Navy Register. The primary, in fact the sole object of the First Naval Reserve, the report says, would be the manning of the fleet; the overflow, which would form the second reserve could be utilized by the Navy Department on many kinds of duty.

RECORDER REVOKES ORDER.

Now Insists that Michael Davis Be Tried on All Indictments.

To the already peculiar court history of the case of Michael Davis, the alleged proprietor of the notorious resort known as "The Black Rabbit" was added another unexpected chapter yesterday, when Recorder Goff, revoking his order of Wednesday discharging Davis on his own recognizance, at the motion of District Attorney Gardiner, on two felony indictments and sentencing him to eight months in the penitentiary on a charge of keeping a disorderly house, to which he pleaded guilty, caused the prisoner to be brought to court from Blackwell's Island, rearraigned, and given an opportunity to withdraw his plea and stand trial under all three indictments. Davis refused to plead, and was returned to the prison, and bench warrants were issued for his arrest.

Recorder Goff's action was taken because of his determination to grant no motions discharging prisoners in actions where one or more co-defendants have been tried before other Judges.

In revoking his previous order, the Recorder says that he is of the opinion that Davis and Sheldon should have been taken before one of the Judges who presided at the trials of their co-defendants, who heard the evidence, and who, from their knowledge of the case, would be in a position to adequately judge it upon its merits.

Assistant District Attorney Le Barbier told the Recorder that, notwithstanding the latter's latest ruling, the District Attorney is still convinced that the action of his office in moving for the discharge of the defendants was the proper course to pursue.

Recorder Goff explained that, in revoking his order, he intended no reflection on the District Attorney or his assistants, but believed the ends of justice would be best subserved by his action. District Attorney Gardiner said that the Recorder alone, of all the Judges, held that co-defendants should be tried in the same part of General Sessions and before the same Judge.

PROGRAMME IN THE SENATE

Senators Meet in Washington and Discuss Order of Business.

SHIPPING BILL TO THE FRONT

Determined Effort to be Made to Advance It—Nicaragua Canal May Be Displaced.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—There were a number of Republican Senators at the Capitol to-day and they were in informal conference during the greater part of the time concerning the business likely to come before Congress during the approaching session. Among those who participated in these meetings were Senators Allison, Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations; Aldrich, Chairman of the Committee on Finance; Frye, President pro tem. of the Senate; Lodge, a leading member of the Foreign Relations Committee; Platt of Connecticut, a member of the Finance Committee, and Hale, Chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs. They were not all together at any one time, but there was no effort to conceal the fact that there was a general exchange of views.

Prominent in their deliberations were the contemplated amendments to the war revenue law. Senators Aldrich, Allison, and Platt were together for some time on this latter subject, and had with them Representatives Payne and Dalzell of the House Committee on Ways and Means. It was stated at the close of this talk that the discussion had been on very general lines, and that as the House Committee has not completed its measure and the Treasury estimates have not been received, no conclusion was reached.

So far as the Senators expressed themselves their expressions were favorable to making the revision so thorough as to relieve the work entirely of the possibility of having it considered of a temporary character. They expressed the opinion that whatever changes are to be made should be made at the present session in order to prevent the reopening of the subject in the next Congress, as they think that if the question should be entered upon at the beginning of a long session an entire revision of the tariff might be attempted. This they would avoid.

They also gave some indication of their views of the changes to be made, in a general way favoring the removal of the extra tax from articles not returning a large revenue and leaving it on the more productive articles. The tendency seemed to be against any removal of beer or tobacco taxes, and also against the removal of the tax on exchange transactions.

There was also considerable discussion of the Shipping Subsidy bill, and it was made evident that there would be a strenuous effort to have this measure made the unfinished business in place of the Spooner bill for the regulation of public administration in the Philippines. There is said to be no doubt now that this substitution will be attempted at the first meeting of the Committee on Order of Business, which probably will occur Monday next after the adjournment of the Senate.

Senator Frye, during the day, was in consultation concerning the Shipping bill with representatives of the Merchants' Association of New York, who argued that as the bill stands it will be injurious to the export trade, while Representatives of the New York and Pacific Steamship Companies, who were also with the Senator, expressed the opinion that unless full subsidies were granted to foreign built ships they would be operating at a loss.

A meeting of friends of the measure will be held in this city to-morrow to consider these and other objections to the bill, but for the present, no meeting of the Committee of Commerce will occur to consider the bill in any particular. Senator Frye said that the bill was now in as perfect shape as seemed possible to get it, and that he did not see the advisability of making any amendments.

He is giving his especial attention to this subject, and expresses his determination to crowd the bill as fast as possible. All Senators seen spoke of the inutility of the Spooner bill and said that for the present, at least, no effort would be made to legislate along the lines suggested by that measure. The effect of this decision will be to leave the Philippine questions entirely in the hands of the President.

If this programme can be carried into execution, the Nicaragua Canal bill also will be displaced, at least temporarily. The canal bill is only a special order, and could not be used to displace unfinished business except upon a vote or by general consent. With reference to the canal bill, there was manifest in the various talks some disposition to have it await action on the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, and the suggestion was made on the part of at least one Republican leader that the canal legislation of this session should be confined to an authorization to acquire a properly right of way for the canal.

There was more or less discussion during the day on the wisdom of filling the committee vacancies caused by the deaths of Senators Davis and Gear. Senator Frye reiterated his desire to remain at the head of the Committee on Commerce, and his aversion to accepting the Foreign Relations Chairmanship, which by virtue of seniority would become his if he chose to accept it. If the Maine Senator persists in his refusal it now seems doubtful whether the place will be filled speedily.

If not, Mr. Frye, for the time, will hold two important Chairmanships in addition to being President of the Senate, as he would be Acting Chairman of the Foreign Committee as well as actual Chairman of the Committee on Commerce. Senator Cullom is the next member in rank on the Foreign Relations Committee, but there is talk of an adjustment by which he might remain at the head of the Committee on Inter-State Commerce, which would have the effect of giving the Foreign Relations Chairmanship to Senator Lodge, whose friends say the proper time will press him for the position.

In case Senator Cullom should be transferred Senator Chandler would become Chairman of the Committee on Inter-State Commerce under the rules of seniority.

PROGRAMME OF CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The President and Speaker Henderson had an extended private conference this morning. They took a long drive together, at which, it is understood, the programme for the coming session of Congress was discussed.

The President had driven to the station with Mrs. McKinley, who left at 10 o'clock for New York, and upon his return to the Executive Mansion found that Speaker Henderson was awaiting him. At the President's request the Speaker entered the carriage, and they drove off together. They were gone almost an hour.

A large number of Senators and Representatives were awaiting the President when he returned, and the Cabinet had assembled, but they left without seeing him.

TRIED WAIST ON FOR COURT.

Mrs. Kate Gillooney of 675 Second Avenue ordered a tailor-made waist and shirt from Max Jacobovitz of 565 Third Avenue election day, and after she had made him change it nine times, she summoned him to the Yorkville Court to make him pay her for the money she had put out for the cloth. Mrs. Gillooney took the goods to court with her yesterday, accompanied by her husband. The tailor, a very small man, appeared. When the woman had told her story, Magistrate Pool said:

"I know something about dresses. I have enough to do with them at home, so I'd like to see how it fits myself."

As there was no privacy to be secured in the courtroom, the Magistrate had the woman taken down into the kitchen of the prison and put the waist on. When she came back she declared it hurt her under the arms. The Magistrate had her turn around so he could examine it from all sides.

"It's somewhat shrunken," he at length said. "You'd better pay back the money for the cloth."

"Ten dollars and a half!" cried Mrs. Gillooney, triumphantly.

Then there was a medley of voices of all sorts, from the Magistrate's low tone to the high key of the woman. The man tried to say he would try once more to fit the waist. He shouted that he was a poor man with a family, and that he had no money to pay the woman.

"Pay or go to prison," said the Magistrate.

"But I'll alter it for her," persisted the tailor.

"You've tried it nine times."

"The tenth may bring it," insisted the tailor.

"Oh, we'll settle this to-morrow," said the Magistrate, and he sent them all away.

SIRES GET THE CASINO.

Litigation Between Them and Lederer Ended by Agreement.

After many months of litigation over the possession of the Casino between George W. Lederer and the Sire Brothers, both interests came together yesterday and the differences were amicably adjusted. The theatre was turned over to Mr. Sire last night by Mr. Lederer, who voluntarily vacated the premises. Mr. Lederer will remain in London four weeks longer. Before returning he will have completed the organization of a large syndicate which was practically agreed to build him a modern theatre in this city.

H. B. Sire, when seen at the New York Theatre, reiterated the statement made by Mr. Oppenheimer that an amicable adjustment of the difficulties between him and Mr. Lederer had been made, and he was now in absolute control of the Casino. Regarding the future of the house, Mr. Sire said that the present attraction, "Florodora," would continue as long as it was deemed advisable, after which a thorough renovation would take place.

"Among the many alterations which will be made," said Mr. Sire, "is the vacating of the café, which he does not think adds any dignity to the house." Mr. Sire will direct the management of the theatre himself.

The securing of the Casino by the Sire Brothers gives them the possession of three Broadway theatres, the Bijou, the New York, and the Casino, while they sublet the Criterion to Rich & Harris and Charles Frohman.

The history of the Casino dates back to 1882, when it was constructed by the Bixby estate for the Casino Theatre Company, of which Rudolph Aronson was President. In the first year of its existence the Casino Theatre Company became involved in financial difficulties which subsequently resulted in their being dispossessed. A few weeks later this company again secured possession of the property, but regained it only for a short time, when George W. Lederer and the late Thomas Canary came in control of it.

In 1895 Mr. Canary withdrew from the enterprise, and Mr. Lederer conducted it alone until he took George B. McClellan into partnership, which partnership continued until three years ago, when he withdrew. Since then Mr. Lederer has managed the house.

CITIZENS CHOSEN AS ANTI-VICE LEADERS

JAMES C. CARTER TO PRESIDE

A Proposal to Enlarge the Committee—Suggestion that It Be Made a Permanent Body.

The Committee of Fifteen to undertake the work of the repression of vice was made known yesterday by Charles Stewart Smith, upon whom devolved the task at the meeting of citizens at the Chamber of Commerce last Tuesday of making the selections. The committee comprises:

James C. Carter.	William H. Baldwin, Jr.
John S. Kennedy.	Alexander E. Orr.
Dr. Felix Adler.	Adrian Iselin, Jr.
Jacob H. Schiff.	The Rev. Dr. Robert L.
John Jarsen Rhoades.	Paddock.
Alfred T. White.	Robert W. De Forest.
Joel B. Erhardt.	Frederick D. Tappen.
George Foster Peabody.	Charles Sprague Smith.

Formal notices were sent out yesterday by Mr. Smith to the various members informing them of their appointment, although it is understood that each man on the committee had signified his intention of accepting before Mr. Smith announced the names. The committee is, of course, nonpartisan, and only one name, that of Jacob H. Schiff, was on the Committee of Seventy selected in 1894.

When he gave out the names Mr. Smith said that he had received a large number of letters from friends recommending persons for appointment, many of whom he would have been glad to add to the list if the limit as to number had permitted. Mr. Smith added that when the committee is organized, and should it be deemed wise to increase its number, he would be glad to send in these names. He said he thought it might prove to be a wise step to enlarge the committee by adding to it a numoer of young and aggressive men, making a committee of twenty-five.

"The committee I have appointed," said he, "is the best that could be drawn together. They are all men of solidity and prominence in the community, and, moreover, are workers. I have had many offers of money to carry on the work, and so I am convanced that whatever funds are necessary will be forthcoming."

Mr. Smith is not a member of the committee, nor has he anything now to do with it. It is likely, however, that when the committee gets together it will decide to increase its numbers, and in that event Mr. Smith's will be one of the first names selected.

All the members who were seen yesterday were reticent and took refuge in the statement that as no official word had been received as yet that they had been appointed, they had nothing to talk about. Mr. Baldwin said, however, that he was glad to be able to work with the committee, and made the statement that it ought to be a permanent body in order to wage constant warfare on vice and see that the laws are obeyed.

James C. Carter is regarded as the leader of the New York Bar. He has never been an office holder, but has been on several important Government commissions. Mr. Carter is a gold Democrat.

John S. Kennedy is one of the original promoters of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, and is now one of its principal stockholders. He is well known in the business world, and is connected with a number of enterprises. He is also a gold Democrat.

Dr. Felix Adler's connection with the Ethical Culture Society is well known. He has been for several years connected with movements for the betterment of moral conditions in the city. He is said to be an independent Democrat. He voted for Mr. Bryan at the last election.

Jacob H. Schiff is senior member of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. He is a Republican. Mr. Schiff, it is said, originated the Chamber of Commerce meeting last Tuesday. He is a large contributor to organized charity in the city.

John Jarsen Rhoades, a Republican, is President of the Greenwich Savings Bank.

Alfred T. White is a merchant in Manhattan; his home is in Brooklyn Borough. Mr. White was at one time Commissioner of Public Works in Brooklyn. He is a Republican.

Joel B. Erhardt is President of the Lawyers' Surety Company. He was once Collector of the Port of New York, and at another time Police Commissioner. He has always been a Republican.

William H. Baldwin, Jr., an independent in politics, is President of the Long Island Railroad and is active in benevolent and charitable affairs.

Alexander E. Orr is President of the Rapid Transit Commission and is a Director or officer in a number of financial and other institutions. Mr. Orr is a gold Democrat.

The Rev. Dr. Paddock is rector at the Pro-Cathedral, in Stanton Street, and may be said to have been the innocent cause of the present crusade. It is understood to be the personal representative of Bishop Potter on the committee.

Mr. Carter, who by virtue of being named first in the list, will call the committee together, said yesterday that he had not decided when this will be done. It will not be before Monday, and possibly several days will elapse before the committee assembles for the first time.

POLICE BOARD MEETING.

The Police Board met last evening, and after a session of two hours and a long discussion between President York and Commissioners Abell and Sexton, it was announced that no business other than the consideration of routine matters had been transacted. No call on the Municipal Civil Service Commissioner for an eligible list of Sergeants from which to appoint Captains was made.

Ex-Judge W. M. K. Olcott was at Police Headquarters, examining records and procuring data to serve in the preparation of charges against Inspector Cross and Capt. Herlihy for inefficiency and neglect of duty in the Twelfth Precinct. Commissioner Hess's health has improved greatly, but it is not likely that he will be at Police Headquarters before next Wednesday, when it is possible that the eligible list of Sergeants will be before the board.

EAST SIDE EVIL ABATED.

Messrs. Keller and Platzek Report to the Tammany Committee—Owners of Houses Warned.

There was a full quorum of Mr Croker's Committee of Five at its meeting in the Germania Bank Building yesterday. The session was partly executive and partly public. Messrs. Keller and Platzek, the sub-committee appointed to report on the information received from Isidor Straus, President of the Educational Alliance, in regard to vicious conditions in the Twelfth Precinct, reported in conference with its commander, Capt. Titus, when lists of disorderly places compiled by the committee were compared with his list, and Capt. Titus declared—on Wednesday—that every such resort was closed.

The sub-committee's report was that it believed that the evils in the precinct had been abated, and that the vicious characters had been driven out. It had, however, obtained evidence of ownership of the places complained of, and Capt. Titus is serving notices like the following to the owners or agents:

New York, Nov. ... 1900.

Dear Sir: —— take this means of notifying you that information has been imparted to me whereby it appears that the premises ——, or a part thereof, are used for immoral purposes and are frequented by prostitutes or people of bad repute.

I am also informed that you are the owner or agent of said premises. It is unnecessary for me, therefore, to call your attention to the law in reference to the matter, and I therefore ask you to see that this evil is remedied at once, otherwise I shall be compelled to take such action as the law will warrant. Respectfully,

Captain,
Twelfth Precinct.

The report added that there was reason to believe that responsibility as to ownership or agency had in many cases been disguised, and that efforts are being made to overcome this bar to satisfactory action. The report ended:

Your committee has no hesitation in stating that to the best of its knowledge and belief the Twelfth Police Precinct is now comparatively free of those forms of vice that had aroused the indignation of the self-respecting and law-abiding residents of that section of our city.

Paul Klopstock a lad, who is a member of the Shakespeare Literary Society, said that the games at dance halls in the Twelfth Precinct were factors in immorality. He named two immoral resorts in Rivington Street which were open Thursday night. The information was sent to Capt. Titus.

COULD CLOSE DENS OF VICE.

Governor's Secretary Confident of Results if He Were District Attorney.

William J. Youngs, secretary to Gov. Roosevelt, said at the Fifth Avenue Hotel last night that he knew of no movement looking to his appointment as legal adviser to Gov.-elect Odell.

"But," continued Col. Youngs, "if I were District Attorney of New York I would clear out the dens of vice here. I closed the dirty spots in Queens and Nassau Counties, and I could do it here."

Capt. Titus Testifies Against a Woman.

Police Captain Titus appeared as complainant in the Court of Special Sessions yesterday against Fannie Brown, the proprietor of a disorderly house at 24 Stanton Street. The woman was convicted and sentenced to nine months in the penitentiary. In this house Fannie Wilner, fifteen years old, of 318 East Third Street, was detained against her will.

SPRINGFIELD'S LONG NINE.

How, Led by Lincoln, They Secured the Capital of Illinois.

From The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Two men who were boys "when Lincoln broke the quorum" sat on a bench in the old State House yard at Vandalia and compared recollections of that event. An old settlers' reunion brought the Rev. Ben McMahon and Uncle John McConnell together. And when the comparison of recollections got fairly under way it carried the pair back to the thirties. Vandalia was the capital of Illinois. Lincoln was a member of the Legislature. The fight over the question of removal of the capital was the dominating issue throughout the session.

The State House stands in just about the form it did then, with the columns and the spacious portico. Stone sills for the wooden have been substituted below the windows and some modernizing of the interior has taken place. But where the parson and Uncle Johnny sat was not two rods away from the second-story window which had a place in the culminating exploit of that memorable session. Naturally enough, the two old settlers talked of the incident which was on every tongue when they were boys.

Edward D. Baker, afterward a United States Senator, was a member of that Illinois Legislature. So were Stephen A. Douglas, James Shields, and John A. Logan, all in turn Senators and of National fame. The last surviving member, Gen. John A. McClernand, died a few weeks ago. But what those men did has been forgotten, while the local memory of "how Lincoln broke the quorum" lives.

Vandalia, on the bluffs of the Okaw, had been the State capital twenty years, succeeding Kaskaskia; the last ruins of which tumbled into the river only last Summer. Removal to Vandalia was made under an act which provided that the capital should remain there for a period of twenty years. At the expiration of that time the Legislature was to determine whether Vandalia or some other locality should be the seat of government. As the time neared for the show of strength the contest waxed warmer and warmer. Springfield was the chief competitor. The county sent that Legislature two Senators and seven Representatives, who became known as "the long nine," and thereby hangs the quorum-breaking tale.

Lincoln was the tallest in the lot. The combined height of the nine was 55 feet. Throughout the session everything else was made subservient to the question of capital removal. The joint meeting of the branch of the Assembly to which Lincoln belonged was a Vandalian. It became necessary to watch him closely lest he take advantage of conditions to give his place the advantage in the time of voting. The issue had been postponed several times, and the session was approaching the end. To this day the inhabitants of wax indignant when they recall the hard things that were said of Vandalia and the surroundings by those who favored removal. Half a dozen members in the course of several sessions had sickened and died. These deaths were ascribed by the enemy to the unhealthy conditions.

"The trouble was busthead whisky," said Parson McMahon. "I have heard them tell that at Ebenezer Capps's store, which was the resort of the statesmen of the day, a barrel of liquor was kept with the head knocked out and a dipper hanging on a nail, so that members could help themselves. I have seen some of the old accounts of Ebenezer, showing a bill of $80 for the entertainment of members of the Legislature in a single evening."

"They used to say, too," added Uncle Johnny, "that those fellows who died came down here and ate too many hazel nuts."

But, notwithstanding the campaign of education which champions of Springfield carried on against Vandalia, only the quick wit of Lincoln prevented the action of the Legislature which would have kept the capital where it was another twenty years.

One morning, when the body had been called to order, the presiding officer suddenly laid before the members the question of the capital location. Lincoln, who was the leader of the Springfield faction, saw that his side was in the minority. Several Springfield members had left town, and had not returned. He saw, too, that the number present was barely a quorum. The friends of Vandalia to a man were on hand. At the door stood a burly Sergeant at Arms, who had evidently received instructions to stop any members trying to leave. It was plain that the Vandalia people meant to rush through the bill to make no change in the capital. Preliminary proceedings proved it.

Lincoln had taken the floor, only to find how powerless the minority was. The situation looked hopeless. The tall, gaunt leader nodded to his followers, and hurried to the corner window. A wooden sill twenty inches wide made a projection beyond the wall. Before his purpose could be divined and the officers of the house could reach him, Lincoln had stepped through the window and let himself down until he hung by his hands from the sill. The distance to the ground was less than five feet. Lincoln dropped.

"No quorum!" the Springfield minority shouted. Proceedings were blocked for the time being. Subsequently when the absentees had returned, and when the session was about to close, it was impossible further to postpone the vote. Springfield won.

Uncle Johnny showed the window and described the scene in detail. The parson listened with a little smile, and nodded as he commented: "Yes, that was the way it was."

GRAND JURY REPORTS ON MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS

Does Not Consider Present Water Supply Dangerous.

Body Discharged After Hearing 313 Cases and Finding 246 Indictments —Complimented by Recorder.

Five presentments, making certain recommendations concerning the affairs of several municipal departments, were handed up to Recorder Goff yesterday by John P. Faure, foreman of the November Grand Jury, just prior to the discharge of that body. Careful investigation of the Water Department, the erection of a municipal filtration plant, the settlement of the controversy between Commissioners Keller and Kearny, the erection of a new Harlem Hospital, and the improvement and looking to proper care of the Criminal Courts' prison pens were called to the attention of the proper authorities. Regarding the water supply, Foreman Faure said that the Grand Jury, after questioning the Water and Health Department officials, had arrived at the opinion that there is no imminent danger of typhoid as a result of drinking Croton water, although he conceded that a long continuance of an impregnated water supply would be likely to produce disease.

The conclusions reached by the Grand Jury are that the only effective and permanent means by which a remedy can be applied to existing evils consists in the adoption of a system of filtration. Concerning the Water Register's office, the Grand Jury suggests a thorough overhauling of the business methods at present in vogue and the establishing of methods which would prevail under individual or corporate ownership.

"That adequate revenue and satisfactory administrative results are not now obtained is obvious," read Foreman Faure. "The accounts of this office should be kept in such a way as would be easily understood. It is the sense of the Grand Jury that a competent authority should speedily undertake a searching examination into the affairs of the Department of Water Supply with a view to the rectification of what appears to be a most unfortunate state of affairs."

Recorder Goff having called the attention of the Grand Jury to the fact that the prison pens on the Franklin Street side of the Criminal Court Building were not properly protected, and that the danger of a wholesale jail delivery was quite possible, handed up a presentment stating that Commissioner Kearny of the Department of Public Buildings, Lighting, and Supplies, when questioned concerning the remedying of the conditions mentioned, had said that his department could not proceed in the matter until officially notified or until requested to do so by a Judge of General Sessions, sitting in court, or by the Commissioner of Corrections.

Touching on the delay of Commissioner Kearny to turn over the new Gouverneur Hospital building to the Charities Department, the Grand Jury says:

"The fact that the Hon. John W. Keller, the Commissioner of Charities, appeared before us and testified that the work of completing the hospital building was in the hands of Commissioner Kearny, and that the delivery of the building was promised by Dec. 1. The Grand Jury has no official knowledge as to the prospects for fulfillment of this prophecy, but from the information available it believes that the long delay in the completion of this hospital is due to the division of authority and responsibility which has characterized the work from the beginning and which seems still to be in evidence."

The Recorder stated that copies of the presentments would be sent to the Mayor and other proper officials, and suggested the propriety of calling the attention of the Charter Revision Committee to this conflict of authority.

Foreman Faure read also a presentment in which Commissioner Keller, in answer to questions, terms the present Harlem Hospital Building a "burning disgrace to the city," on account of its size, location, inadequacy, and non-adaptability to hospital purposes.

Having begun its sessions on the 5th of November, devoted three days exclusively to the consideration of election cases, and observed two legal holidays, the Grand Jury had only nineteen days to devote to routine business. During this period 313 cases were heard, 67 complaints dismissed, and 246 indictments found.

Recorder Goff complimented the Grand Jury upon its diligence and faithfulness, after which a complimentary luncheon was tendered Foreman Faure at a down-town restaurant.

INSURANCE MAN ARRESTED.

Montreal Agent of the New York Life Charged with Obtaining Money by False Pretenses.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Nov. 30.—J. Caldwell Meyer was arrested this morning on a charge by John McLaren, who claims that the accused obtained a promissory note from him for a life insurance policy under false pretenses.

The amount involved is $5,653. Meyer is the agent of the New York Life Insurance Company. He has been living in good style at the Windsor Hotel for some months, and he boasts that he easily makes $50,000 a year. He has written an enormous number of policies in this city, aggregating, he himself says, about $1,000,000. Many of the people he has insured declare that they are dissatisfied with their policies, and say that they are not what were promised by Meyer.

Meyer was arrested by Sergeant Detective Campau of this city and Chief of Police Adams of Brockville, who started with him for Brockville to-night.

F. S. MacLennan will defend the accused, and J. N. Greenshields will prosecute. Meyer has been cutting a big dash on the Stock Exchange here, and it was there that he was arrested. He is an Englishman, who has lived for some time in New York. His customers say they expected to receive endowment policies, but obtained only ordinary policies.

Officials of the New York Life Insurance Company had received no advices regarding the arrest of Meyer up to the close of business hours yesterday afternoon, but they expect to receive information early to-day.

CIGARMAKERS ON STRIKE.

Threatened Reduction Causes 500 Men to Go Out.

A second strike took place yesterday in one of the large cigar factories involved in the series of strikes which began nine months ago with a strike of 2,500 cigarmakers in the factories of Kerbs, Wertheim & Schiffer. Since this series of strikes began the strikers have received nearly $300,000 toward the strike fund, but the stream of money ceased to flow and most of the strikers returned to work.

The new strike is in the factory of the Wilson Company, Thirty-eighth Street and First Avenue, one of the firms which compromised with the strikers. Five hundred employes quit work against a reduction of $1 per 1,000.

Andrew Crawford's Will Filed.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—The will of Andrew Crawford has been filed for probate. It disposes of an estate of $1,000,000. The property was left in trust to the widow, Sarah L. Crawford; a daughter, Jessie C Barnes, and Theodore C. Keller. The trustees are to manage the estate, which is distributed equally to the widow and five children.

Skeptical as to American Competition.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Sir Lowthian Bell, the well-known iron and steel expert, addressing a meeting of engineers in London last evening on the iron and steel industries, expressed skepticism as to the "ability of our friends across the Atlantic to sweep those of us on this side out of existence."

EVILS OF THE SWEATSHOP

Subject Discussed Before the Tenement House Commission.

Much Sickness in Camps During Spanish War Due to Infected Garments —Conditions Experts Found.

The Tenement House Commission, at its session last night in Assembly Hall of the United Charities Building, took up the subject of "sweatshops" in the tenements. The first witness called by Chairman James B. Reynolds was Mrs. Frederick Nathan, the President of the Consumers' League.

Mrs. Nathan said she had made a study of the condition of garment workers in the tenements. The rooms in which garments were made were always overcrowded, usually filthy, and the hours of labor were long. Little children, she said, were often obliged to help their parents with their work. Often it was found that garments were being made in houses where there was contagion.

"In one house," said Mrs. Nathan, "a member of our league, who is a trained nurse, found a woman working on garments while her child lay stricken with scarlet fever on a bed in the same room. The nurse told her she ought not to take garment work while her child was sick with a contagious disease. 'I must have the money to buy medicine for my child,' she said."

Mrs. Nathan gave it as her opinion that no tenement should be used for the manufacture of clothing. It was not only the cheap garments which were finished in the tenements, some of the highest-priced garments were also finished in sweatshops. Existing laws, she said, were not enforced. She suggested that the Board of Health and the Factory Inspection Board should be brought into close touch, and that all "sweatshop" goods should be labeled as such.

Henry White, Secretary of the United Association of the Garment Workers of America said the most crying evils were the rear tenement sweatshops. These buildings, as a rule, were unfit for habitation, and always unfit for workshops. Yet the rents charged for them were exorbitant. In such cases a single floor rented for from $25 to $30 a month. The rents were as high, in proportion to space, as some places in Broadway. Most of these were fire traps.

The Rev. Francis J. Clay Moran, Chairman of the Sweatshop Committee of the Church Association for the Advance of the Interests of Labor, gave his experiences in investigating sweatshops.

"When Secretary Alger issued an order that all clothing for the army must be made in regular factories," said the Rev. Mr. Moran, "we were pleased, but our gratification was short-lived. Under the second contract made by the War Department for clothing for volunteers in the war with Spain, much of the work was done in the sweatshops. It is my opinion, based on my investigations, that the germs of scarlet fever and measles which prevailed in the camps were carried to the camps in the sweatshop clothing."

He said there ought to be much more stringent regulations with regard to the inspection of sweatshops, and the manufacture of any clothing in sleeping apartments should not be permitted.

Meyer Schoenfeld, the former general manager of the Garment Makers' Union of New York, surprised the commission by the statement that not 10 per cent. of the clothing trade was now being carried on in the tenements. The bulk of the trade had been driven out of the tenements, he said, by the division of labor, which made it necessary for a number of persons to work different parts of the same garment, and by the labor organizations.

"I believe that one hundred of the Broadway dealers were to say to-morrow, 'We will give no work to sweatshops,' the sweatshops would soon become a thing of the past."

Mr. Schoenfeld thought factories ought to be built in the suburbs. He also advocated the abolishment of the footboard machine. Steam machines could now be put into tenements. He further advocated a regulation that no female should be permitted to work in a factory after 7 o'clock in the evening.

Herman Grossman, the agent of the United Brotherhood of Cloakmakers, said some of the finest garments sold in the city were made in sweatshops. He described one shop, in which there were ten beds in three rooms and a number of cots hung on the walls, to be taken down for use at night. Those who worked on coats, he said, made about 35 cents for ten hours' work.

DADY DEFEATS WOODRUFF.

That the will of Lieut. Gov. Timothy L. Woodruff is not law with the leaders of the Republican organization in Kings County is believed to have been demonstrated last night when it was decided that Michael J. Dady and Walter B. Atterbury would be continued as Chairmen of the County Executive and General Committees, respectively. This decision was reached at a conference of the members of the Executive Committee held at the home of Mr. Woodruff on Eighth Avenue.

The outcome of this conference was surprising to those who have been led to believe that Mr. Atterbury, at least, and probably Mr. Dady, were to be "turned down" and new men acceptable to a certain element in the party put in their places. Although Mr. Woodruff denied last night that he had made such assertions, he has been repeatedly quoted during the past week as saying that Mr. Atterbury would not succeed himself as Chairman of the General Committee, and that a man satisfactory to all factions would be chosen for his place. The name of James McKeen, President of the Hamilton Club, was mentioned as the man slated to succeed Mr. Atterbury. Mr. McKeen, however, declined to be a candidate for the Chairmanship.

Another cause for surprise at the outcome of the matter, it is felt, is the fact that Mr. Atterbury himself, only a few days ago, publicly stated that he would not be elected to succeed himself; that he did not wish to be. The inference drawn from his remarks by those interested was that Mr. Atterbury had been given to understand that he could not be re-elected, and that for the work ahead new leaders were needed.

At a dinner given to Naval Officer Sharkey at the Brooklyn Union League Club a few nights ago, Mr. Woodruff, who was one of the speakers, said in effect that a desire for new leaders in the county for the important campaign approaching had been expressed, and that Mr. Atterbury had been the first to volunteer to step aside. A man who could draw together all the elements of the party, he added, would be chosen to succeed Mr. Atterbury.

With all these things fresh in their minds, local Republicans were, as stated, greatly surprised to learn last night that both Atterbury and Dady were to be continued as Chairmen. It was said that Mr. Dady, who returned on Thursday night from Mexico, had much to do in effecting the change in the reported plans.

After the conference last night Mr. Woodruff gave out a statement. He said, in part:

"With the hearty co-operation of Mr. Atterbury and several other district leaders I have made an earnest effort during the past ten days to obtain the consent of some conspicuous independent Republican to take the office of Chairman of the committee, which Mr. Atterbury was at all times ready to relinquish, if such a successor could be secured. In view of the condition growing out of our inability to secure such a man as was sought, it was the consensus of opinion at the meeting of the district leaders this evening that Mr. Atterbury should reconsider his determination as heretofore expressed, not to again accept that office, and that he should become for another year the Chairman of the Kings County Republican General Committee.

"In the absence of Mr. Dady during the consideration of this matter and the selection of a Chairman of the Executive Committee, it was taken for granted that, in view of the probability that Mr. Dady would be away from Brooklyn much of the time hereafter, he would not be a candidate for re-election as Chairman of the Executive Committee. As soon as he returned and said he was in a position to carry on the work of the office and desired to continue in it, the members of the Executive Committee all declared themselves in favor of him in preference to any other one of their number."

SMALL-POX!

Householders Cautioned.

Rely Upon Platt's Chlorides to Disinfect Your Premises.

As usual at this time of the year Zymotic diseases increase—Diphtheria, Scarlet Fever, Typhoid, and Small-pox particularly. Thorough household disinfection is of the greatest importance now to maintain health in the home. For over twenty years Platt's Chlorides has been relied upon by Boards of Health, physicians, trained nurses, and careful housekeepers. It is pleasant and safe to use, having neither smell nor color, and it costs but little, a quart being sufficient to last an average family a month. It is sold in quart bottles only, by druggists, high-class grocers, and house-furnishing stores.

Because of its great sale and extended use there are many imitations. Be sure to procure Platt's and you will not be disappointed.

JOSIAH QUINCY'S IDEAS

Boston's ex-Mayor Explains Them to the People's Institute.

Influence of Cities on the Politics of the Nation—Civil Service and Municipal Ownership.

Advanced theories of municipal government were discussed by ex-Mayor Josiah Quincy of Boston in the great hall of Cooper Union last evening at a meeting held under the auspices of the People's Institute.

When Mr. Quincy became Mayor of Boston it was the tenth time that one of his name and family had entered upon the discharge of the duties of that office. He introduced radical changes in the government of the city and fathered many public improvements which added much to the delights of Boston as a place of residence for those in moderate circumstances, but which were the despair of the taxpayers and which had a serious effect upon the credit of the city.

He defended his administration in his address, saying that his successors had adhered to his methods as closely as could be expected, seeing that they were political opponents. He made no reference whatever to what it had cost in money.

"As the great cities of the country are coming to exercise an ever-growing power and influence over the politics of the Nation," said he, "the problem of American Government in the twentieth century must resolve itself very largely into securing good, progressive Government in those municipalities.

"The government of American cities, whether good or bad, is a product of American institutions and amenable in the long run to the will of the masses of the American voters. That is the hopeful side of the question. In order to move the masses ahead at all, it is necessary for some to propose a radical programme, and though the mass does not follow it wholly it becomes leavened with the spirit of progress.

"Selfishness on the part of municipal employes is not wholly bad, for it exerts an improving influence upon the wages paid by private employers, but in so far as the factor in municipal life is subject to political manipulation and assumes any form of an effort to extract as much as possible from the Municipal Treasury, and to give as little as possible in the way of service it is an evil."

The ex-Mayor favored the extension of the civil service rules in municipal service, and said it was wrong that Americans were placed at a disadvantage in competition with the Filipinos, for the Chairman of the Philippine Commission had boasted that there was a more rigid civil service system in those islands than anywhere in the United States.

Mr. Quincy said a great step toward making the political organization the creature instead of the master of the party is to establish a primary election which shall be conducted for both parties at the same time and just as much under public regulation and under the control of the law as the main election is at the present time.

He condemned the present method of making a man choose his party a year before the election and before issues had been framed or the candidates discussed. He favored the direct nomination of candidates without the intervention of the political convention. "The professional politician can beat the amateur every time," he said.

He said that the care and control of the criminal and dependent classes should be removed from the field of political influence, and urged the employment of the best experts in every branch of city work.

Every city, he said, should insist that its water supply and distribution of water should never pass into private control, and he favored tentative progress in the direction of public ownership of other franchises.

Many questions were asked of Mr. Quincy, and in answer to one he said: "I think you have some of the most expert municipal rascals here in New York that you will find in any city of the country."

RAILROAD TO USE TELEPHONES.

Northern Pacific First Western Road to Substitute It for Telegraph.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 30.—The Northern Pacific Railway has decided to substitute the telephone for the present telegraph system of the road and will build and equip long-distance and divisional telephone lines to take the place of the telegraph, wherever it shall be deemed practicable. The officials of the road believe that most of the telegraphing that is now done in connection with the traffic department can be as well, or better, performed by telephone.

The plan is to place each station in a division in direct communication with the division headquarters, and the various division headquarters are to be connected with the general offices by long distance lines.

In this way much information of importance to the traffic and operating departments which, on account of the limitations of the telegraph system, must now be sent by mail, can in the future be telephoned. Telephones are now used quite extensively and with marked success on some Eastern roads. The Northern Pacific, however, will be the first of the Western lines to adopt this system.

PLATT DEFENDS BIDWELL

No Charges Preferred Against Collector of the Port.

Opposition of Some Republicans the Basis of the Report—Changes in Federal Posts Rumored.

No charges of any character have been lodged at Washington against Collector George R. Bidwell. He will serve out his term and probably be reappointed.

Some months ago Republicans in the Fourteenth Congress District, who favored the nomination of Adelbert H. Steele for Representative, complained that Collecter Bidwell had been "perniciously active" in the interest of William H. Douglas, and that "terrorized" Federal employes into voting for Douglas against their inclination.

Mr. Douglas was nominated and elected.

It was said at the time that charges would be preferred against the Collector, but no one could be found to father them. A morning newspaper has stated that Collector Bidwell was to be removed on charges preferred by Prof. George Gunton, who is active in Republican politics in the Nineteenth Assembly District, of which Collector Bidwell is leader.

Senator Thomas C. Platt, who left for Washington yesterday, was interviewed by a reporter before his departure and informed of the stories afloat.

"No truth in them," he replied, decisively.

"Will Collector Bidwell be removed?" the Senator was asked.

"Not so long as I live," Senator Platt replied, with emphasis. "Prof. Gunton wrote a letter to me complaining about Bidwell, but there is nothing in the charges."

"Will Surveyor Croft and Appraiser Wakeman be reappointed?"

"I have not come to that," replied Senator Platt. "But Mr. Bidwell has been attacked, and I speak for him. He has done nothing to be punished for."

A NEW YORK TIMES reporter called on Prof. Gunton at his home, 101 West Seventy-eighth Street, last night. He declined to discuss the matter.

Collector Bidwell when seen said:

"I know of no charges against me, and I am not at all uneasy. We nominated Mr. Douglas in our district and renewed it. But, really, I don't care to discuss the matter in any phase."

While it is true that no charges have been preferred against Collector Bidwell, it is not improbable that there will be marked opposition to his reappointment. The report has long been current that Surveyor Croft will get his place.

The revival of the report of the charges against Mr. Bidwell has caused a renewal of the rumor that friends of Capt. F. Norton Goddard intend to make a fight against the reappointment of William Henkel as United States Marshal Mr. Henkel is leader in the Eighteenth District, and some Republicans charge that he is too friendly with Charles Murphy, the Tammany leader. Henry Birrell, who is said to be slated to succeed Henkel, denies that he is a candidate for the place.

Other changes in Federal offices are said to be contemplated, involving the official decapitation of Internal Revenue Collector Ferdinand Eidman of Manhattan, Postmaster Wilson and Internal Revenue Collector Moore of Brooklyn, and Naval Officer Robert Sharkey.

NO RADICAL POLICE BILL.

Impression Growing that the Republican Organization Has Changed Its Plans—Mr. Hess's Successor.

The impression grows that the Republican organization will not attempt, through the Legislature, any radical changes in the police system in this city or in any other municipality in the State.

The term of Commissioner Jacob Hess, who is confined to his house by illness, will expire this month, and there have been rumors current that he would be succeeded by ex-Commissioner Thomas L. Hamilton or Charles S. Wilbur. Ex-Senator Gibbs, who is a personal friend of Mr. Hamilton, said last night:

"The Republican organization of New York County will present no name to Mayor Van Wyck as the choice of the organization for Police Commissioner. Senator Platt and Gov.-elect Odell will sign no recommendation for Charles S. Wilbur."

There was some comment yesterday that Mr. Gibbs withheld his statement until after Senator Platt's departure for Washington. Mr. Gibbs wants Mr. Hamilton appointed, but no politician can be found who believes that Mayor Van Wyck, having once removed Hamilton as Police Commissioner, will reappoint him to that place.

REPUBLICAN CLUB PRESIDENCY.

Gen. Tremaine May Succeed Senator Depew—Opposition Wants Olcott.

The report is current that Gen. Henry E. Tremaine will be named by the Nominating Committee of the Republican Club for President to succeed Senator Depew. The nominations will be reported about the 15th of this month.

The opposition will give him a fight, and it is said to be their purpose to support ex-Judge W. M. K. Olcott. The election will occur in January.

CADET DYING FROM HAZING.

Oscar L. Boez Said to Have Been Maltreated at West Point.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 30.—A dispatch from Bristol, Penn., says that Oscar L. Boez, a young man twenty-one years old, lies at the point of death at his home, in Cedar Street. About a year ago Boez was appointed by Congressman Wanger to the West Point Military Academy, and the parents declare that hazing administered at that time was of such an atrocious nature that the death of their son may result.

After the hazing Congressman Wanger's appointee was left in such a physical condition that he had to resign his cadetship. It is alleged that tobasco sauce was poured down Boez's throat, red pepper was thrown in his eyes, hot grease poured on his bare feet, a tooth knocked out, and fiendish operations generally indulged in.

The Boez family have no hesitancy in declaring that the hazing received by Oscar is responsible for his precarious condition.

Colombian Rebels Surrounded.

COLON, Colombia, Nov. 30.—The latest advices from Cartagena announce that the Government forces, numbering 4,000, with artillery, now surround the Liberal, or insurgent, forces, at Corozal, in the Habana region of Bolivar. The insurgents are under the command of Gen. Uribe, whose request to treat for peace has been rejected.

Masterpieces of AMERICAN ART

A Collection of Twenty-five of the Greatest Paintings of Leading American Artists Reproduced in the Highest Style of Photogravure

The time has come for Americans to be proud of the prestige of American genius. The work of our own painters has attained a high position in the realm of art. About a year ago the effort was made to secure the exclusive right to reproduce the acknowledged masterpiece of twenty-five of our leading artists.

This has now been accomplished in a most highly artistic manner. And so low is the price, and so easy the selling plan, that every American home can be beautified and refined by the acquisition of this collection of twenty-five photogravure reproductions.

$1 Is the Only Immediate Payment Required

The balance of the price, which is not half their real value, may be paid in easy monthly instalments that average only ten cents a day.

Here is more particular word about the photogravures:

How the Reproductions Were Executed Before the artists agreed to the arrangement, it was specially stipulated that the work of reproduction was to be done in the very highest style of photogravure to the entire satisfaction of each individual artist.

There was reason for this, since the reputation of a painter depends, in a great degree, upon the impression his work makes upon those who see it, and he is naturally very sensitive with reference to reproduction.

Why Artists Dislike Photographs For this reason the artist looks with disfavor upon a photograph of his painting, since it presents, at the best, only outlines and the broadest effects of light and shade. All the elements of tone and texture, all fine gradations, all color-values vanish before the camera, and a brilliant picture becomes flat and uninteresting.

Photogravures the Nearest Approach to Paintings Not so, however, with the carefully executed photogravure, for in this delicate process the color-values in the picture are etched into the plate, and the result creates in the mind of the onlooker the identical effect produced by the painting itself. The photograph is to the photogravure what the rough pencil-sketch is to the finished picture in colors.

Under the Eye of the Artist But the photo-engraver himself, unless thoroughly in touch with the subject upon which he is working, will often fail to catch the spirit of the picture. The artist well knows this, and in the reproductions of the present collection the painter of each picture touched up with brush and paint the first proof, so as to bring out every detail and afterwards exercised personal supervision over the engraver, whose task it was to satisfy the artist. As artists are proverbially hard to please with reference to their own works, one may well be confident that the results in the present reproductions are everything that could be desired. As a matter of fact the collection is undoubtedly the finest set of photogravures ever produced in this country. They represent the combined skill of the artist himself and of the best engravers that money could procure.

The Color of the Photogravures Each subject is reproduced in the tint best adapted to the painting, as, for instance, a marine subject is shown in a dark rich green, as near as possible to the color of the ocean; a fall landscape in a light brown. Some are best in blue, others in black, and so on, thus adding beauty, harmony and variety to the entire collection.

Care in the Choice of Pictures It is hardly necessary to say that there is a vast difference in the class and character of the art produced in these days, so that it becomes a matter of greatest importance as to what subjects, and the work of which artists, are selected. There are trashy pictures as well as trashy books, and one is quite as bad as the other. The Masterpieces of American Art contain no selection which will not hold a proud place in any collection of pictures anywhere. They have been chosen with great care and with a view to variety and beauty, as well as technical excellence. Each one is well worth a fitting frame, while the collection as a whole, if preserved in portfolio form, will prove an unending source of instruction and delight to every member of the household.

Hints on Framing The photogravures are of various tints, sizes, and shapes, and should not all be framed alike. No small part of the art-effect of a picture depends upon the framing, which should not be so obtrusive as to detract from the subject itself, but which should be selected so as to artistically harmonize, and thus enhance the pictorial effect. They have been carefully experimented with in this respect—various tints for mats, and gilt and different woods and colors for frames, and a little pamphlet "Hints on Framing," is published, giving the result of fullest investigation. This will be sent on request to those who secure the collection, and it will be seen that the question of economy has been so carefully considered as to enable the possessor of these photogravures to embellish the home with a series of framed works of art which it would be impossible to match anywhere at the cost.

An Account of Each Artist and Painting Accompanying each picture is a description of the painting, a portrait and biographical sketch of the artist, an interesting account of his early studies, how he was led to take up art as a profession, and in what schools and under what masters he received his instruction. It tells of his sojourns abroad, where and when his paintings were first exhibited, and the honors they received in Europe and America. It also gives a list of his most notable paintings, tells where they now are, and, in many instances, who owns them.

An Art Education All of the above information is not only exceedingly interesting, but instructive, as well, and will be much appreciated by all art connoisseurs and by those who are taking up art as a study. In this connection, moreover, one finds, side by side, the best specimens of different styles of art in historical, landscape, portrait, figure, genre and marine painting, thus affording a criterion by which to judge other paintings in each class. The collection, therefore, not only delights the eye and kindles the imagination, but also trains the judgment and educates the taste.

A Veritable Fine-Art Bargain You have read about the sales of these paintings, and the enormous prices that many of them brought, but, doubtless, never dreamed that you could obtain a perfect facsimile, reproduced in such superb form and at such a moderate price, to adorn your parlor or drawing room.

These master productions would sell at any art store at $5 each, but they can be purchased only from us, as the publishers absolutely control the copyrights.

How to Best View The Photogravures In examining these reproductions, you will observe that they, being exact copies of the original paintings, so far as maintaining the true color-values, perspective and atmospheric effect is concerned, can, like all oil paintings, be seen to best advantage by looking at them from a little distance (say 8 to 10 feet). This is only an additional proof that they are perfect reproductions.

One Dollar—with satisfactory business references—brings you the complete portfolio of twenty-five reproductions—two of which are genuine water-color paintings, by a competent artist, inspected and signed by original artist—the others are photogravures of the highest artistic quality. If possible, call at the store to-day, and see the pictures. If you can't come to store, fill in the coupon, and mail with the dollar to-day, so that a portfolio will be reserved for you.

Men's Shirts, 75c Each

$1 to $1.50 Values

The selling of the last two weeks has played havoc with the tremendous quantity we started out with. First it was colored shirts, then white ones, till now the combined forces make just about enough for a Saturday's selling. As we've told you before—they're splendidly made by a conscientious maker and beautifully hand-laundered. The colored shirts are of percale, in handsome patterns, with detachable cuffs, and are good $1.25 values. The white shirts have pure linen bosoms, and were made to sell at $1 and $1.50. Sizes 14 to 17½.

Men's High Grade UNDERWEAR

All of this relates of imported underwear—the finer goods of leading English manufacturers, Allen Solley & Co., particularly. It is not cheap underwear, if you think only of the price. Consider its general excellence, its durability—and you approve the saying that the "best is the cheapest."

There are good assortments here of both the hand-made underwear and that produced by machine. It's interesting to make a comparison. The latter is fine goods, but it requires the deft hands of the expert weaver at the loom to bring out the finest possible results. Shirts or drawers in various grades and weights including the following more popular kinds.

Medium weight natural wool hand-made.
Medium weight natural color, silk and wool.
Heavy weight white merino, hand-made.

Comfort in Bath Robes

The Raglan The comfort derived from the Raglan sleeve in an overcoat, and the steadily increasing popularity of the style, led us to search for possible extensions of the principle. Our first experiment was the Raglan Shirt for men, which justified its existence by scoring an immediate success. This we have followed up with a blanket bath-robe built on Raglan lines, which represents the highest notch of bath-robe comfort. It is made in our own factory, and we believe, by us alone.

The shoulder is self-adjusting, the fit is perfect, and every detail is looked after with greatest care,—much more so than the price would lead you to expect. Material is a soft, warm, gray blanket, with striped border of black, red, pink, brown, light or dark blue. It has a wool girdle, with wide straps to hold it in place, two pockets, and sailor collar. And yet this bundle of comfort and warmth is priced at only

COURT DENOUNCES FRAUD

Real Estate Dealer Condemned by Justice Burr Mattice.

In a decision handed down yesterday afternoon by Justice Burr Mattice, in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, Frank A. Barnaby, a well-known local real estate broker, was declared to have committed fraud in a real estate transaction involving property on Fifth Avenue, Manhattan. The case in which the decision was rendered was that of James B. Healy, as Montague Street tailor, against Barnaby, W. Clarence Martin, C. Grayson Martin, and James W. Golden. Healy sought to be relieved of a real estate contract, in negotiating which he alleged that fraud had been committed.

Healy, in January, 1899, engaged Barnaby to negotiate for the purchase of a piece of property at Fifth Avenue and Nineteenth Street, Manhattan, owned by William Reed. A few days later the property was purchased by the Martins for $250,000. Although the property had already been sold to the Martins, Barnaby, as alleged, told Healy that Mr. Reed would sell for $250,000. Healy agreed to pay the price, and is alleged to have given Barnaby $250,000 and to have made up the difference by giving deeds to James W. Golden, represented to him to be the private secretary of Mr. Reed, for property worth $50,000 in Brooklyn and making over a mortgage for $50,000 to the wife of Barnaby.

Healy later discovered that the property was no longer owned by Mr. Reed, that it had been bought by the Martins for $250,000, and that the Martins, with Barnaby, had worked together to get from Healy $100,000 more than that price on the property. Healy brought suit to have the mortgage given to Mrs. Barnaby canceled, and the parcels of land he had transferred returned to him. Justice Mattice, in his decision, says:

"It does not appear, and may never appear, how much the Martins knew of or participated in Barnaby's fraud, and it is not necessary to inquire. The very fact of this division, whereby Barnaby gets property amounting to over $40,000, convinces me that the Martins knew that the agent was practicing a gigantic fraud on his principal. I am convinced that the final division of what may properly be termed the 'spoils,' was the reward the Martins received for active participation in Barnaby's fraud. Judgment for the plaintiff, with extra costs of $1,000."

Golden, it was alleged, was merely a dummy in the transaction. Mr. Reed, the original owner of the property, only knew that he had sold it to the Martins and was unaware of the negotiations between Healy and the others.

By the court's decision, Healy retains the property, the mortgage held by Mrs. Barnaby is canceled, and Healy gets back his parcels of Brooklyn property.

BITTEN BY A TARANTULA.

Told by Two Doctors They Could Do Nothing for Him, Miegel, Recovering, Started on a Journey.

Charles Miegel, who boards at 22 Mercer Street, Jersey City, is employed as a boxmaker at Isaac Vanderbeek Sons' lumber yard and factory at Greene and Steuben Streets. Miegel, who is twenty-five years old, is an amateur entomologist. Some time ago he found a tarantula among some Southern pine received at the yard. He succeeded in capturing the insect. Carrying it home, he placed it in a bottle.

One night last week the insect escaped from the bottle and bit Miegel on a finger of the right hand. Exactly when this happened is not known. On Saturday last Miegel called at the office of Dr. S. B. Sprague of 283 Grove Street. He said nothing about a tarantula, but told Dr. Sprague that he had been bitten by a poisonous insect. Dr. Sprague treated the wound, and the next day when Miegel called his condition was greatly improved. Dr. Sprague lanced the wound and told Miegel to return on Monday. He did so, but Dr. Sprague was out.

Miegel then told Mrs. Sprague that he had been bitten by a tarantula. He said he had not told Dr. Sprague because he had previously called on two physicians, whose names he declined to give, and when he told them he had been bitten by a tarantula they replied that they could do nothing for him. He said he was afraid Dr. Sprague would tell him the same thing. He also told Mrs. Sprague that he was much improved and would not return, as he had been summoned to Arizona by the illness of his mother.

This latter statement was corroborated at Miegel's boarding house last night, except that it was said that Miegel did not leave until Wednesday night. He told his landlady, she says, that he was going to Connecticut.

TO UTILIZE TUNNEL DIRT.

Lehigh Valley Railroad Has New Plan for Reclaiming Meadows.

Dirt obtained in excavating for the New York underground railroad will be used for filling in New Jersey meadows and reclaiming them, if a scheme of the Lehigh Valley Railroad is carried out. The company is preparing to erect another big grain elevator beside the ones it now operates at Cavan Point, Jersey City. The contract has been awarded to Holmes & Cogan, but Mr. Holmes said yesterday that work would not begin on the structure until next Spring.

The company will also make extensive improvements by reclaiming the adjacent meadows, the filling for which will be obtained from the New York tunnel. The details of the plan will not be given out until the work is begun.

TRAIN HURLED HIM 20 FEET.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 30.—William A. Gordon, a milkman, living in this city, was struck by a fast passenger train at the New Street crossing of the Pennsylvania Railroad here this morning. Gordon was walking across the tracks, carrying a case in which were six bottles of milk. The train hurled him across two tracks, a distance of about twenty feet.

The engineer stopped and the crew ran up to the man. They found him sitting up and examining his case to see how many bottles were broken. The blood was pouring from the man's head, but he took no notice of it as he investigated his case. Only one bottle had been broken.

Gordon was carried to the Wells Memorial Hospital, where he was examined by Dr. H. R. Baldwin and Dr. H. G. Cooke. They found that, beyond a few scalp wounds, he was uninjured, and permitted him to go home.

Rogers Works at Paterson Closed.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 30.—The Rogers Locomotive Works closed down finally this afternoon. At noon to-day there were fifty men at work. They finished shipping two locomotives to Chile at 1 o'clock. When the crates containing the parts of the engines had been loaded upon flat cars the last work in the shops had been done. Mr. Rogers was present and witnessed the closing of the shops.

MRS. R. A. McCURDY'S ESCAPE.

Her Carriage Struck by Runaway Freight Cars at a Crossing.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Nov. 30.—Mrs. Richard A. McCurdy, wife of the President of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York City, had a narrow escape from serious injury and perhaps death at Morris Plains last night.

Mrs. McCurdy was in a closed carriage, and as the vehicle reached a siding, near the Lackawanna station, two runaway freight cars, heavily laden, rushed down a steep grade. The driver of the coach did not see the cars, but one of the trainmen on the cars shouted a warning. The driver urged his horses on, but was a trifle too late. The cars caught the rear wheels of the carriage, entirely demolishing them and nearly upsetting the carriage.

Mrs. McCurdy and the coachman escaped injury. The cars continued on down the tracks, and later collided with two other loaded cars.

HOGAN ARRESTED IN NEWARK.

He Is Wanted in This City on the Charge of Swindling.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 30.—The police of this city to-night arrested a man named John W. Hogan at his boarding house, 58 Clinton Street. Hogan is wanted in New York by Chief McClusky on charges of fraud and grand larceny.

The Newark police were informed by the Chief of the New York Detective Department that Hogan had run a fake express line in New York. He had several wagons with the name of a well-known transportation company printed on them, and his game was to get goods to forward and then make off with them. One of the specific charges against Hogan is the larceny of 300 yards of silk from a New York merchant named Eisner. It is understood that he sold his wagons before coming to Newark.

MASQUERADED AS NUNS.

Angry Crowd in West Hoboken Wanted to Lynch Five Italians.

Five young men connected with the Italian Filodramatic Club of West Hoboken nearly created a riot Thursday evening by appearing in the streets in the garb of nuns and giving a burlesque religious performance near the Passionist Monastery. A crowd gathered and threatened to lynch them, when they were rescued by a squad of police which had been sent to the scene. The young men were compelled to discard their nuns' garb, and were then released, on their promise to repair to their homes.

The crowd followed them, however, hooting and jeering at them as they went. Finally, one of the young men seized a paving block and threw it at the crowd. It hit no one, but the masqueraders were then placed under arest. At the police station they registered as Victor Brieschi, Alfreda Porta, Louis and Morrio Pochettino, and Albert Fronchi. They were fined $5 each on a charge of disorderly conduct.

BURGLARS' HARD LUCK.

WOODBURY, N. J., Nov. 30.—Three safe crackers visited Penns Grove this morning before daylight. They dynamited the safes of E. G. Green, hardware dealer; H. G. Brick, feed dealer, and one in the office of the Wilmington Ferry Company. From the three safes they obtained less than $10.

They then made an attack upon the National bank, but the watchman saw them trying to force an entrance and they ran away. The watchman secured aid and a posse was organized and chased the burglars, but was unable to overtake them.

Vice President Hobart's Monument.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 30.—The design for the monument to Vice President Garret A. Hobart has been decided upon. It is by Philip Martin, and shows Mr. Hobart standing, with a gavel in his hand and leaning forward slightly, as if listening to a speaker. It will be of bronze, and will be about nine feet in height. It will stand upon a pedestal in front of the City Hall.

GROCER FOOLED AND ROBBED.

Lured from Store by Plausible "Customer" While Drawer Was Looted —Valuable Papers Returned.

Charles Blomgren, who keeps a grocery at 476½ Monmouth Street, was robbed of several important papers and $40 in money yesterday. A plausible young man wanted a bag of coal sent to his house, but did not know the number, as he had just moved in. The house was only in the next street, he said, and if Blomgren would go to the corner with him he would point it out. Blomgren went. Showing him the house and giving minute directions as to how the coal was to be taken into the cellar and sent up the elevator, the man hurried toward the building, while Blomgren returned to his store.

He found that, in his absence, the money drawer had been forced and emptied. Besides the $40, the thieves secured a wedding ring belonging to Blomgren's dead wife, two life insurance policies and one fire insurance policy, the deed of the building his store is in, another for two lots in Charlottesville, N. C., and a third for three lots in Breslau, L. I. At the house the young man pointed out to Blomgren he was not known.

Last night Blomgren received by mail a bulky package, which had been posted in New York. It contained all the stolen deeds and insurance policies. The thieves retained only the $40 and Mrs. Blomgren's wedding ring. The inclosure contained no message of any kind.

RUNAWAY GIRL'S FABLES.

Bertha Yehle Now Tells Another Story Which the Police Do Not Believe.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, Nov. 30.—The police to-day investigated the story of twelve-year-old Bertha Yehle, who returned to her parents' home yesterday, after being mysteriously absent for ten days. The girl told her stepmother she had been living at the home of Mrs. Timothy Fitzpatrick of 46 Mott Street. Mrs. Fitzpatrick indignantly denied that she had kept the girl, or that Bertha had even remained over night in her house.

Bertha, this morning, on being cross-questioned by Detective Jerolemon at length, admitted that she had lied in saying she was at Mrs. Fitzpatrick's. She said she had slept in hallways and under stoops. The police do not believe this, but are at a loss to know where the child could have staid.

Perished in a Burning House.

RAHWAY, N. J., Nov. 30.—William Burns was burned to death early this morning in a fire that destroyed a house situated two miles outside the city limits. Burns was arrested in 1887 in connection with what was then known as the great Rahway murder mystery. A young woman, who was never identified, was found murdered, and suspicion pointed to Burns. There was not sufficient evidence on which to try him, and he was released.

To Improve Long Beach.

LYNBROOK, L. I., Nov. 30.—The plans of the new syndicate of capitalists who a short time ago got control of Long Beach are taking shape, and by next season many important changes and improvements will have been made at that resort. The syndicate now controlling Long Beach is composed of men who are understood to be identified with the Pennsylvania Railroad, and it is their aim to make Long Beach the Atlantic City of the Long Island coast. It is said this was contemplated when the Pennsylvania Railroad Company secured a controlling interest in the Long Island Railroad.

Declines Presidency of Iowa College.

GRINNELL, Iowa, Nov. 30.—Prof. Frank K. Sanders of the Chair of Biblical Literature at Yale, who was elected early in the Fall by the Trustees of the Iowa College to the Presidency of the institution, to succeed Dr. George A. Gates, has written to the Trustees, saying that on account of his duties and obligations at Yale it will be impossible for him to accept. No other candidate is under consideration.

RECEIVER NAMED FOR A TRUST COMPANY

Former Judge Block Now in Charge of the Guardian.

J. W. GATES, PETITIONER

A. E. Stillwell, the President, Says He Will Organize a New Company to Finance His Railroad Deal.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 30.—Judge Amos Thayer in the United States District Court has appointed F. M. Black of Kansas City receiver of the Guardian Trust Company, of which A. E. Stilwell is President.

The appointment was made in Judge Thayer's decision in the suit recently brought by John W. Gates of Chicago and other stockholders.

The petition for a receivership was filed in Kansas City on Oct. 23 last—the day before the stockholders were to have held a meeting to elect a new Board of Directors. The Gates petition also asked for an injunction to prevent the holding of the meeting. Judge John F. Philips granted the injunction, and set a later date for a hearing on the receivership question.

The petitioners contended that Stilwell took advantage of them in the character of securities placed in a reorganization of the company. The bonds of the old Kansas City, Pittsburg and Gulf Railroad (now the Kansas City Southern, in which Mr. Gates is interested,) figured in the bill, and the contention was made that the stockholders were in danger of losing $1,000,000 if Stilwell were allowed to carry out his plans.

When apprised of the appointing of a receiver to-day Mr. Stilwell declared that he had expected the action and is preparing to form a new company, which will, he declared, finance the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient Railway, which he is promoting.

In his opinion Judge Thayer says in part: "The proof shows with reasonable certainty that the officers and Directors of the defendant company have made a practice of organizing other corporations to engage in various enterprises of a highly speculative character; that funds of the company to a large amount have been invested in the stocks and lands of such concerns, which had at the time no market value; that money in considerable sums had been loaned to such companies, sometimes upon their stock as collateral and on other occasions without any security; that some of these enterprises have proved absolute failures, and that the money invested therein had been wholly lost, while other of such enterprises are in a precarious condition and the outcome thereof is doubtful and uncertain.

"In addition, the proof shows that the defendant company has made large investments in real property apparently without a shadow of authority under its charter.

"Furthermore, the Court entertains no doubt that the defendant company has paid one, and probably several, dividends, out of its general fund that were not earned, such payments being made for the purpose of allaying suspicion as to the condition of the company and creating a false impression that it was in a prosperous condition."

The Court expressed the opinion that the act creating trust companies does not authorize the acquisition of securities by such companies either as an investment or as collateral for loans, unless they have an ascertainable market value and may be properly termed "investment securities," and finds that it is unsafe for the company to continue the further transaction of its customary business until it has realized upon some of its assets and liquidated its indebtedness. The receiver's bond was placed at $100,000.

OFFICERS SHOT BY COLLEAGUES.

North Carolina Posse Mistook Returning Party for Moonshiners.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 30.—It now transpires that United States Revenue Cutter Officers Chapman and Gee of the Virginia District, who were shot in Mecklenburg County, Thanksgiving Day, were not shot by moonshiners, as at first supposed, but by mistake by a posse of revenue officers from North Carolina.

Both parties had located the same still and the North Carolina party thought the Virginia party were returning moonshiners. Gee is shot in the wrist and Chapman is dangerously, though not necessarily fatally, shot in the body.

CLYDE, N. Y., Nov. 30.—Last night, a fire which started in Orcutt's bargain store, on Glasgow Street, did damage to the extent of nearly $15,000. The fire burned through a partition into the dry goods store of George A. Wright & Co., damaging stock to the extent of about $12,000. The stock in Orcutt's store was valued at $2,500.

SAW GULDENSUPPE'S GHOST.

Peter Piernot Fled from Woodside House and Boarded Train in Scant Attire.

Peter Piernot was fined $2 yesterday in the Magistrate's Court in Long Island City. He asserted he saw the ghost of Gilliam Guldensuppe, the man murdered and cut up by Mrs. Nack and Martin Thorn. He lives with the family which now occupies the house on Fifth Street, Woodside, in which Guldensuppe was done to death.

On Thursday Piernot, it appears, mixed his celebration by drinking wines from home and then indulging in American whisky. He ate heartily of turkey and its accompaniments, and also rich puddings.

After the evening meal the occupants of the house sat talking with visitors. The talk drifted to the tragedy of which the cottage was the scene, and the visitors were shown the rooms in which the principal events occurred.

When Piernot went to bed he had, it is said in his excuse, a mixed idea of turkey, whisky, pudding, and bloody knives and sections of a body floating around the harbor. Two hours later a nightmare came upon the scene, and Piernot leaped from his bed, shouting that Guldensuppe was in his room and looking at him. He wrapped a blanket about himself and fled. The other inmates of the house tried to stop him, but failing, dressed and gave chase. Piernot ran to the railroad station and jumped on a train that was about to pull out. Word was telephoned to Long Island City and Detective Sheridan was waiting at the station.

On the train on the way down Piernot told a blood-curdling tale of Guldensuppe appearing to him and mixed the tale up with many details and notes about other things. Detective Sheridan lodged him in a cell, assuring him that Guldensuppe could not get in there. Piernot was still attired in his blanket when arraigned in court. He was penitent. After the fine had been imposed his friends from Woodside arrived with his clothing and paid his fine.

THE WEATHER.

LOCAL FORECAST.—Fair, fresh west to north winds.

A disturbance of considerable intensity was central last night over Alberta; elsewhere the pressure was generally high, except over Western Ontario. Fair weather will prevail to-day, except in the South Atlantic States, where it will rain, and in Western Montana, where there will be rain or snow. There will be rain or snow to-night or to-morrow in Northern New England, and probably snow to-morrow in the extreme Northwest and Wyoming, accompanied by lower temperature. On the New England and Middle Atlantic Coasts the winds will be mostly fresh northerly. On the South Atlantic Coast they will be fresh north to east.

The record of temperature for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from THE NEW YORK TIMES's thermometer and from the thermometer of the Weather Bureau, is as follows:

SECOND RICE WILL FILED

ITS PROVISIONS KEPT SECRET

Patrick's Counsel Says that Under It the Accused Lawyer Will Have Only $250,000 from the Big Estate.

The so-called last will of William Marsh Rice, under which Albert T. Patrick, the lawyer who is now in the Tombs awaiting trial on the charge of forging various checks on the accounts of the late millionaire, is the principal beneficiary, was filed in the Surrogates' Office yesterday. Heirs under what is alleged to be the only true will have for several weeks been trying to force the production of the later will, which placed Patrick in control of the property. The Surrogate was to have handed down his decision to-day on the application, but this was discounted by Marx E. Harby of the law firm of Logan, Demond & Harby, filing the disputed will for probate.

The contents of this second will were made public shortly after the arrest of Mr. Patrick and Valet Jones. The document is dated June 30, 1900, and is witnessed by Morris Meyers of Mr. Patrick's law office and David L. Short, who also witnessed a deed of assignment given to Mr. Patrick by the late millionaire. William M. Rice, Jr., of Hyatt, Texas; Capt. James A. Baker of Houston, Texas, and Albert T. Patrick are named as executors without bond. The "William M. Rice Institute for the Advancement of Literature, Science, and Art" of Houston, Texas, is to get property to the amount of $250,000, providing it has not already received the same from the testator prior to his death. As a matter of fact, this amount has already been given to the Institute. The testator's brother, Frederick A. Rice, or his heirs, get $50,000. Twenty-five thousand dollars is given to each of the brothers and sisters of the decedent, and $5,000 each to his nephews and nieces. Several minor bequests are made, and then the principal sections of the will appear. These are the tenth and eleventh, and are as follows:

Tenth—The foregoing provisions of my will are upon the express condition precedent that the above-mentioned legatees, respectively, will accept without contest in the courts or otherwise, all the conditions hereof, and that they will execute such conveyances and release of any and all of my estate wheresoever situated and of whatsoever nature, to the said Albert T. Patrick, as he may demand; and any legatee not so doing is forever barred from taking under this will or in any manner inheriting any portion of my estate, and such portion shall inure to the said Albert T. Patrick.

Eleventh—I give, devise, and bequeath to Albert T. Patrick, formerly of Texas, all the rest and residue of my estate, real, personal, and mixed, heretofore and hereafter accrued and wheresoever situated.

With this will is the usual petition for probate, setting forth the date of death of the testator and the probable heirs under the will. In addition to this usual form there is the following peculiar paragraph:

Your petitioner further states that the estate given to the petitioner in and by the said last will and testament of William M. Rice must be taken subject to a trust in favor of certain purposes and beneficiaries intended to be benefited by the said William M. Rice. This trust is a secret trust created by the instructions of the said William M. Rice, with the promise of the petitioner made to him, so that there is a trust fastened upon the fund at the disposal of the petitioner herein. Counsel for the petitioner are now preparing for execution by him a paper in which petitioner may, in due legal form, make effective the said instructions constituting the secret trust which will hereafter be filed herein.

This "secret trust," according to Mr. Harby, was partly in writing and partly a verbal communication. Just what it amounts to will not be known until about Dec. 18, when Mr. Patrick will file a deed of trust arranging for a disposition of the trust funds.

"Under this deed of trust," said Mr. Harby, "Mr. Patrick will not get more than $250,000 for himself out of about $5,000,000, which is only a fair legal fee for the work he has done."

Mr. Harby refused absolutely to say anything about the secret trust arrangement, which Mr. Patrick was to undertake. Whether the trust fund is for charitable purposes or to be used to make additional bequests to friends and relatives is a matter, said Mr. Harby, which will not be made public until Mr. Patrick is ready to file the deed which is now being prepared for him by his lawyers.

The filing of the will, which has come to be known as the "Patrick will," was not devoid of excitement. As soon as Probate Clerk Washburn had received the document from one of Mr. Harby's clerks, Lawyer Potter, representing the executors under the will dated Sept. 26, 1896, and Handwriting Expert Kingsley, who accompanied him, began to examine it. Mr. Kingsley produced a small manuscript and peered at the signature "W. M. Rice."

"I object to this," said the clerk from Mr. Harby's office.

"This is now a public document," answered Mr. Potter, "and any person has a right to look at it."

Clerk Washburn decided to allow a superficial examination of the signature without requiring an order of the Surrogate. Mr. Kingsley continued his work, comparing the will just filed with the other will. He produced a pair of compasses and was about to measure the signatures.

"I object!" shouted Mr. Harby's clerk. "I object to making any chemical analysis of the document. This is not fair."

"I am using no chemicals, and I am not hurting the document," retorted Mr. Kingsley.

After a rapid exchange of comments, the expert discontinued his examination of the will, saying, "I would like permission to look at the will again without having to look down the muzzle of a shotgun at the same time." With that Mr. Kingsley left the Surrogates' office. He refused to say whether he had arrived at any conclusion from his examination.

Mr. Harby declares that the one he filed is the "only original" will, saying: "We don't admit that the first will placed on file is a will at all. We will prove that it has no value, not even as an expression of the testator's mind."

Before Mr. Harby had arranged to file the will he had prepared at considerable expense a printed brief entitled "Affidavit of M. E. Harby, and Brief on Behalf of Albert T. Patrick, in Opposition to Application for Discovery." This brief was against the motion asking that the will be filed. It was given out yesterday, and the clerks in the Surrogates' office and lawyers who saw it declared it to be a most extraordinary production. In it Mr. Harby directly charges the District Attorney with allowing himself to be used in criminal proceedings in order to force a settlement of the Rice estate and in almost the same paragraph it is declared that an effort is being made to use the Surrogates' office to further a criminal prosecution. Mr. Harby quotes liberally from the published history of the Rice-Patrick case, and charges all sorts of dire things against the various newspapers of the city, declaring that they endeavored to blacken Mr. Patrick's character. This brief was given out for public distribution early yesterday morning, but its service in the court will be of no effect, as the will has already been filed.

The citations under the first will filed are returnable next week, but it is probable that the real fight will be delayed for several weeks.

One of the heirs under both wills, Frederick William Rice, a nephew, was supposed to be dead. When last heard of he was living at Hartford, Conn. This was a number of years ago. Late yesterday afternoon Mr. Potter received word that Mr. Rice was now at Saranac Lake, where he is engaged as a photographer and boat builder.

CLAIMS RICE'S ESTATE.

Inmate of St. Joseph's Home Thinks She Is Dead Man's Sister.

Miss Kate Rice, an inmate of St. Joseph's Home, on Fifteenth Street, near Seventh Avenue, has decided to make a claim for a share of the millions of William Marsh Rice. If she can prove that the millionaire was born in Kilkenny County, Ireland, she is certain that she can convince the courts that he is her brother, William Rice, who left the old home more than sixty years ago, came to America, and is supposed to have settled in the South.

The newspaper accounts of the mysterious circumstances surrounding Mr. Rice's death first suggested to the old woman that the millionaire may have been her missing brother. She intrusted to her niece, Mrs. Bridget King of 225 East Sixth Street, the task of bringing the suit. Mrs. King has retained Lawyer E. W. Childs of 71 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, as counsel. Mr. Childs is the successor in business of the late Lawyer Carley, who settled the estate left by a Mrs. Jewett, a sister of Miss Kate Rice. An effort will be made to ascertain whether William M. Rice received any portion of this estate.

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS.

Extensive Improvements Planned by Lackawanna Officials.

It is said about the offices of the Lackawanna Railroad that important changes are to be made on the main line of the system. This now starts from Hoboken and runs to Dover by way of Paterson and Boonton. From Dover it runs to Hacketts-town, at which point it turns southwest and runs to Washington. At that place it turns back toward the northwest again to Delaware Water Gap.

Between Waterloo and the Gap the road makes an almost perfect "V," with Washington as the lower point. The main feature of the proposed alteration is the striking of an air line, or as nearly so as the nature of the country will permit, from Waterloo to the Gap. Two corps of engineers are at work on this surveying the land and selecting the route. It is said that the line as proposed will require the cutting of a tunnel two miles long. Besides this shortening of the line, which it is estimated will reduce the running time from Hoboken to Buffalo by forty-five or fifty minutes, it is said that numerous curves are to be straightened on the line of the road and that some of the steeper grades are to be reduced by trestling or cuts. Beyond Water Gap other extensive improvements in the line of shortening the running time are said to be under consideration.

MEXICAN RAILWAY TARIFF.

Government Creates a Revising Board to Consider Rates.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 30.—A dispatch from Monterey, Mexico, says:

"The officials of Mexican railway lines here have been notified by the Mexican Government that, acting in accordance with the instructions of President Diaz, the National Department of Communications has created a Railway Tariff Revising Board, which will enter on the discharge of its duties to-morrow, Dec. 1.

"The board will consist of two lawyers, a technical Railway Inspector, an official of the Department of Communications, an official of one of the railway companies, a member of the National Chamber of Commerce, a member of the National Agricultural Society, and a Secretary.

"Only the five members of the board named first will have a vote at the meetings, but the other members will be allowed to give their views on all subjects relating to railway rates that come before the meeting. Under the Mexican Railway law all the railway companies of Mexico must revise their tariffs of rates every three years, and it will be the duty of this new board to decide as to the acceptance of these revised rates as well as to consider other matters relating to changes of rates."

RAILROAD COMPANY APPEALS.

Pennsylvania Company Thinks Its Riparian Lands Are Overtaxed.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey has appealed from the assessment levied by the Jersey City Tax Commissioners on its riparian lands in that city for 1899. The property is in two parcels along the Communipaw and was valued at $2,374,000. The State Board of Taxation will be asked to cut down the assessment to $1,175,000.

The appeal shows that the city assessed the same property in 1898 at $1,882,000 and that the State Board reduced the amount to $1,075,000. The city claims that the company several years ago made this property the security for a loan of several million dollars obtained in London.

BRIEF RAILROAD ITEMS.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey has ordered two new ferryboats from the Harlan & Hollingsworth yards at Wilmington, Del. The boats are to be double-deckers of the same style as those now used by the Pennsylvania Company. They are to be propelled by twin screws, and they will be used on the Liberty Street ferry line. The boats are to be ready next Summer.

The votes of all the roads in the Trunk Line Association regarding the proposed changes in the official classification have been received by Chairman Gill of the official Classification Committee. All the suggestions submitted by the committee have been adopted and the new classification will be ready for distribution by Dec. 15. The classification will take effect on Jan. 1, 1901.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad is extending its system of electric automatic switches to its entire main line and the principal branches. It has also contracted for the erection in Jersey City of a new elevator, to cost $100,000.

The New York office and headquarters of the Pennsylvania Railroad in the American Exchange National Bank Building will be formally opened to-day.

Surveys have been completed for the new line of the Wabash Railroad, which is to connect Toledo with Montpelier. Grading will commence as early in the Spring of 1901 as possible, and the line will be then completed as rapidly as possible.

Routine business only was transacted at the Directors' meeting of the Southern Pacific yesterday. Regarding the expiration of the contract between the Panama Railroad and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, President Tweed of the latter company said that no proposition had as yet been made by the Pacific Mail for the continuation of the contract. It was reported that the Panama Railroad had made arrangements for the purchase of new steamers, which are to take the place of Pacific Mail steamers.

The Michigan Central Railway Company has decided to test the plan of sprinkling its roadbed with crude oil to render it dustless. Nine miles near Battle Creek, Mich., have been treated in this way, 18,000 gallons of oil having been used.

Passenger officials of lines between the Missouri River and Colorado points are considering the advisability of establishing an interchangeable mileage ticket for that territory. There is a difference of opinion as to whether the mileage system of the Western Passenger Association should be extended or whether an independent system should be established.

WIFE SLAYER FOUND GUILTY.

Otto Wolf Convicted of Manslaughter in the First Degree.

Otto Wolf, charged with murdering his wife by cutting her throat in the billiard room of the residence of Milton Knapp, a grain broker, at 113 Remsen Street, Brooklyn Heights, on Sept. 30 last, was last evening found guilty of manslaughter in the first degree. The woman, who was not living with her husband, was employed as a servant in the Knapp household. Wolf called at the Knapp residence to see his wife, and while alone with her in the billiard room cut her throat.

The window shades were up at the time, and a man passing in the street witnessed the killing. He ran into the house and seized Wolf, who was turned over to the police. The Knapp family were asleep upstairs, and knew nothing of what was going on below until the police patrol wagon rattled up to the house and Wolf was taken away.

Suing to Secure Feigenbaum's Release.

Justice Fitzgerald, in the Supreme Court, yesterday reserved decision in the habeas corpus proceedings brought in behalf of Louis J. Feigenbaum to obtain his release from the Insane Pavilion of Bellevue Hospital. Mr. Feigenbaum was a confidential clerk in the employ of I. & A. Wormser. About a year ago he became ill and was sent abroad for his health. He returned home by the next steamship, and since then, it is alleged, he has been acting in an erratic manner. He was committed to Bellevue at the instance of his wife. Counsel who appeared for him yesterday argued that no Police Magistrate had the right to commit any person to an institution for the insane, as the power to do this rested entirely with the Supreme Court.

MAY BE EX-GOV. MOSES

Now Charged with Swindling—Has Long Criminal Record—Picture in Rogues' Gallery.

"William J. Ferguson," who was arrested on Tuesday last on the complaint of Dr. Jarman of 54 West Seventy-fifth Street, who alleges that "Ferguson" swindled him out of a small sum of money by representing himself to be a physician from Galveston who had been ruined by the flood, was arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Shields and held in $1,000 bail.

"Ferguson" had been turned over to the Federal authorities for requisition to Washington, D. C., where he is wanted on charges of swindling and obtaining money under false pretenses. When "Ferguson" was arraigned yesterday, Dr. A. R. Shands of Washington said he identified him as the man who had victimized him among many other Washington physicians.

The most important feature of the hearing came when Dr. Shands further identified "Ferguson" as none other than ex-Gov. Franklin J. Moses, Jr., of South Carolina, the notorious Governor of that State during the reconstruction period, whose record is in every police headquarters in the country. Central Office Detectives Davis and Dunn, who were present, also said that "Ferguson's" appearance tallied almost exactly with the description of Moses in the New York police records.

Assistant District Attorney Ball, who was in South Carolina during the height of Moses's career, declared that he was positive the prisoner was none other than ex-Gov. Moses. Secret Service Chief Hazen added that he had seen Moses in Washington about five years ago, and is positive that this is the same man.

"Ferguson" tells a long story, in which he denies absolutely that his name as given is assumed, and that he is the ex-Governor of South Carolina. He declares that he never was in Charleston, and that he has not been in Washington for two years.

He then told of having ben a practicing physician in Galveston, and said that at the time that city was swept by a tidal wave his wife and daughter were killed and that he lost all of his effects. When arrested, he said, he was trying to get sufficient money together to go to Glasgow, Scotland.

Moses was graduated from Columbia College and served as private secretary to the Governor of South Carolina for two years. At the close of the civil war he was one of the first men in the State to submit to the Reconstruction act, and he was, after serving as Speaker of the House for two years, made Governor, holding that office for two years. Shortly after his term of office expired Moses started in victimizing friend and foe alike. He was first arrested in this city in October, 1881, when he was sentenced to the penitentiary for six months for swindling Nathan Berzman of 292 Fifth Avenue out of $25. On June 6, 1882, he was sentenced for six months for swindling E. W. Crowell of 195 Broadway out of $150 through a bogus check. Central Office Detectives Haley and Ruland, who made these arrests, are both dead.

Moses was next arrested in Chicago, in 1885, and taken to Boston, where he was sentenced for six months for swindling. In October, 1885, he was arrested in Boston on a charge of swindling Col. T. W. Higginson out of $25. For this offense he was sentenced to State's prison for three years. He was pardoned in 1887 by Gov. Ames on the representation that he was in poor health and was not likely to live long. His photograph is in the Rogues' Galleries of both this city and Boston.

TUCKAHOE TEACHER HELD.

Duffy Chased by a Detective in Forty-second Street After Attempting to Escape Arrest.

William M. Duffy of Tuckahoe, manager at the Beacon Heights school from which the pupils were removed by agents of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, was placed under arrest yesterday as a suspicious person. Detective McLoughlin, who arrested him, found him a very troublesome prisoner, and is at present nursing a stiff neck, the result of an attempt made by Duffy to escape. When he arraigned his prisoner in the Yorkville Police Court he found, to his surprise, that Duffy was not wanted by the Tuckahoe authorities. He charged him with disorderly conduct, however, and Duffy was held in $200 bail.

Duffy was discovered wandering about the streets near the Grand Central Station. The detective recognized him and arrested him.

"What do you want with me?" asked Duffy.

"I know you," said the detective. "You're Duffy, and you're my prisoner."

"Duffy is not my name; I am Marcus H. Ahrens of 408 Manhattan Avenue. Come along to a telephone and I'll prove it by my wife," said Duffy.

McLoughlin led his prisoner into a drug store and sat down at the telephone. As he bent over to pick up the receiver he was struck on the back of the neck with such force that he nearly fell from his chair. When he got on his feet again Duffy was running through Forty-second Street. The detective gave chase and caught him after a run of several blocks.

COMPLAINS TO THE GOVERNOR.

Citizens' Protective League Says Clubbing by Police Continues.

The Citizens' Protective League, which was formed as a result of the west side race riots which took place last August, has issued a pamphlet embodying affidavits of negroes who claim to have suffered injuries at the hands of the police. Copies of the pamphlet, accompanied by special letters, were sent to Gov. Roosevelt, to District Attorney Asa Bird Gardiner, to Mayor Van Wyck, and to the Board of Police Commissioners.

The communication sent Gov. Roosevelt includes a copy of a letter sent to Mayor Van Wyck demanding an investigation other than the perfunctory one which it is claimed was made by the Police Commissioners and declaring that the witnesses called by the Police Department, some thirty in number, deliberately perjured themselves. The league complains to the Governor that the clubbing of negroes continues throughout the city whenever a black man falls into the hands of officers.

John S. Marks, a grocer, is Clark's accuser. He alleges that the defendant embezzled $8,900, which had been intrusted to him in payment of ground rents and mortgages. Marks further alleged that Clark forged false indentures and certificates of record, using the names of Recorder Virdin and the latter's predecessors in office, John J. Curley and William M. Geary.

DENVER WATER BONDS HELD UP.

Injunction Restrains Delivery of $4,700,000 Recently Sold.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 30.—At 1 o'clock this morning President Shackelford of the Board of Public Works was served with a copy of a writ of injunction issued by Judge Riner of the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Colorado. The writ was issued at the complaint of Fannie Josephine Grant and is directed to the officials of the City of Denver, the National Bank of Commerce of New York, and Denison, Prior & Co.

It restrains the delivery of the $4,700,000 city water bonds recently sold to Denison, Prior & Co. The National Bank of Commerce of New York is the city's agent in the transaction.

The city already has received payment for $100,000 of the bonds. Another $100,000 was to be paid for in New York to-morrow. The writ is returnable Dec. 7. It is not known why the writ was served in the middle of the night.

NO SNOW REMOVAL CONTRACT.

A Storm Would Handicap Commissioner Nagle—The Uvalde Company's Proposals.

There is no contract for the removal of snow, and in case of a severe storm Commissioner Nagle of the Street Cleaning Department would be placed in a dilemma. He said yesterday:

"The matter of the contract for removing snow from the streets in the Borough of Manhattan is before the Supreme Court on claims made by bidders that the bid of Kelly & De Marco was illegal because not properly signed. The question is before Justice Andrews, and I hope for an early decision."

It was stated that the cleaning of the streets would be done by the Uvalde Asphalt Company, which corporation had the contract last year. It was said that Kelly & De Marco were ready to surrender the contract to the Uvalde Company on the payment of a small amount of money.

An attempt was made yesterday to discover the political backing of the Uvalde Company. In Controller Coler's office it was said that, although the bills for removing snow from the streets by the Uvalde Company were delayed for over nine months, no politician came to try to expedite the payment of the claims. The name of Senator George W. Plunkitt has been connected with the Uvalde Company, but he has denied that he has any interest in the corporation.

It was said by a high city official that the backers of the Uvalde Asphalt Company were the financiers who have control of the Berwind Coal Company. Last year this company had the contract for removing the snow at 38 cents per cubic yard. It was said that with only two small snowstorms the Uvalde Company did not make any profit on the work. If this company takes the Kelly & De Marco contract and does the work for 36 cents per cubic yard this year a heavy fall of snow during the Winter will net the company a large profit.

Controller Coler said that the contract for removing snow from the streets of Brooklyn would go to John F. Maillie at his bid of 50 cents per cubic yard.

MORE SPITE FENCES TO GO.

Complaints Reach Fire Marshal Brymer in Brooklyn Borough.

Since the announcement on Wednesday that Fire Marshal Brymer of Brooklyn had ordered the removal of two alleged "spite" fences on First Place, that borough, as being dangerous in case of fire, many complaints of similar obstructions to light and air have been made to Mr. Brymer. Yesterday three complaints of this character were made to the Fire Marshal.

Thomas B. Dunn complained of a fence 30 feet in height at 775 Lafayette Avenue. Thomas McGoldrick of one of 25 feet at 58 Carlton Avenue, and Mrs. Hannah Schaefer of a brick wall 16 feet in height at 22 Veranda Place. The Fire Marshal said that he would investigate the complaints, but he was inclined to think that no action could be taken with regard to the brick wall, which was not dangerous, by means of spreading fire.

The Pianola is an instrument by means of which any one can play the Piano.

When you stop to consider that the program given at to-day's recital can be rendered by any one, even if he literally does not know one note from another, the means by which this is accomplished must at once command interest.

The question then arises how well the various selections may be played.

The remarkable achievements of the Pianola are supplemented by the still more remarkable fact that they have been indorsed by practically every musician of note, and that their popularity is as extensive among the musically cultured as among the unskilled.

The recital to-day affords you an opportunity to judge the instrument from actual performance, and to hear an enjoyable musical entertainment.

RELIGIOUS NEWS AND VIEWS

Bishop Potter to Speak on Civic Righteousness at the Pro-Cathedral Next Wednesday.

The Episcopal Parish of the Incarnation will take steps at once to rebuild its mission in Thirty-first Street, near First Avenue. The mission consists of a small stone chapel and three dwellings, two on the west side of the chapel and one on the east side. It is purposed to replace these buildings with modern ones, fitted in every way for aggressive east side work. With the completion of this plant the whole east side, with St. Augustine's, St. George's, Grace, Calvary, St. Bartholomew's, and those further north, will be closely covered with work under Protestant Episcopal direction. The work proposed by the Incarnation will be more like that done by Grace Church in East Fourteenth Street than that done by St. Bartholomew's in East Forty-second Street. The rector of the Incarnation, the Rev. Dr. W. M. Grosvenor, is to lay the whole matter before his congregation in a sermon to-morrow morning, preparatory to securing funds for the same. The chapel is conducted by a subordinate organization of the Incarnation's Vestry, and the priests in charge for the last two years, and under whom the work has grown, are the Rev. Henry R. Wadleigh and the Rev. Horace C. Hooker. To-morrow the last named begins as assistant at the parish church, the Rev. Thomas F. Davies, Jr., who has been assistant for three years, resigning to go abroad for study.

Next Wednesday evening Bishop Potter is to be one of the principal speakers at a meeting of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, to be held in the Pro-Cathedral, in Stanton Street. Archdeacon Tiffany of New York will preside, and the subject will be "Civic Righteousness." The other speakers will be the Rev. Dr. W. M. Huntington of Grace Church, the Rev. R. L. Paddock of the Pro-Cathedral, and Mr. R. Fulton Cutting.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Copyright, 1900, by John R. Whitney.

SUBJECT.—Bartimeus Healed.—Mark, x., 46-52.

When "the Young Ruler," in last week's lesson, came to Jesus "he was very rich," and it seemed as if he would certainly go away a great deal richer and full of joy. But he "went away grieved"; Jesus looked after him and "loved" him, but He could not enrich him with "durable riches" (Proverbs, viii., 18) because he voluntarily turned his back upon Him and would not do the "one thing" that He required. Instinctively we say, How blind he was to his own best interests!

His case is repeated in multitudes even to-day. Physically, their eyes are open. Mentally, their understanding is clear. Morally, their character is above reproach. But spiritually, they are in utter darkness. The riches of earth they can see and appreciate, but the riches of heaven they cannot see, and so they turn away with no comprehension of their reality or of their value.

At the time when the incident now brought before us occurred, the Apostles themselves were, to a very remarkable degree, in this same blind condition. Jesus was on His way with them, for the last time, to Jerusalem. They had been for more than two years His almost constant companions, hearing His teaching, seeing His miracles, and feeling the impress of His character. For several months—ever since they left Cesarea-Philippi—He had time and again taken them aside to tell them of His death and resurrection. Now, as they neared Jericho, the record is—"He took again the twelve" (Mark, x., 32) "apart in the way" (Matthew, xx., 17) "and began to tell them what things should happen unto Him, saying, (Mark, x., 32,) "Behold, we go up to Jerusalem, and all things that are written by the prophets concerning the Son of Man shall be accomplished." (Luke, xviii., 31.) But "they understood none of these things—and this saying was hid from them, neither knew they the things which were spoken." (Luke, xviii., 34.) In fact, so blinded were they by their own preconceived opinions, and the opinions of others, that two of them actually came to Him just after He had thus spoken to them, with the earnest request that He would give them places of importance in the earthly kingdom which they were sure He was about to set up. (Mark, x., 35-45.)

BLINDNESS OF APOSTLES.

This persistent blindness of the Apostles, as profound as that of Bartimeus, is one of the most mysterious revelations of the Gospel narratives, as that of "The Rich Young Ruler" is one of the saddest. Yet we find the condition of the Apostles as often repeated in our day as that of "The Ruler." With all the light of nineteen centuries around them, multitudes still have no just conception of either the person or the work of Jesus Christ. It is this blind condition of men which is brought before us in this lesson.

It is a very prominent subject of consideration in the Gospel narratives, and we find that the miracle of restoring sight to the blind was performed on more occasions and upon more persons than any other, excepting, perhaps, the cleansing of lepers. But in the case of the lepers, while ten persons were cleansed at one time, yet, as we have recently seen, only one received the full benefit of the healing. The record of the more prominent cases is as follows:

Healing of Fever—Two cases; two persons benefited.

Cleansing of Lepers—Two cases; eleven persons benefited.

Restoring Deaf and Dumb—Three cases; three persons benefited.

Raising the Dead—Three cases; three persons benefited.

Healing Demoniacs—Three cases; four persons benefited.

Healing the Blind—Four cases; six persons benefited.

Each of these cases where sight was restored to the blind is marked by some special and peculiar features which are worthy of careful attention. Let us briefly examine them.

The first case is recorded by St. Matthew alone. (ix., 27-31.) It occurred as Jesus was leaving Capernaum, after the raising of the daughter of Jairus. Then "two blind men followed Him, crying and saying, Thou son of David, have mercy on us." But He seems to have paid no attention to them. They followed Him "into the house," and again presented their need to Him. Still He did nothing for them, but, as if there was some doubt concerning their faith which needed to be removed, He asked them, "Believe ye that I am able to do this?" At once they answered, "Yea, Lord." "Then touched He their eyes, saying, According to your faith be it unto you." Their eyes were at once opened. He charged them not to tell any one of what He had done, but their gratitude could not be restrained.

Another case is reported only by St. Mark. (viii., 22-26.) It occurred near Bethsaida. In this case the man does not appear to have had any desire himself to be healed. All the effort on his behalf was made by others. His friends brought him to Jesus, "and besought Him to touch him." Then He took him "by the hand and led him out of the town." When He was there alone with him, He anointed his eyes and put His hands upon him. But it was not until He had done it a second time that he saw clearly, and even then, when he was told not to speak of his healing, as in the previous case—so far as the record is concerned—he remained perfectly silent. No enthusiasm or joy appears to have marked his recovery.

OF HIS OWN FREE GRACE.

The third case is reported by St. John alone. (ix., 1-41.) It occurred near the City of Jerusalem, and was the case of a man who "was born blind." At the time he had grown to manhood, and was "of age." He seems to have become so accustomed to his condition that he was perfectly indifferent. But, without any solicitation on his part, or any effort on the part of others on his behalf, Jesus Himself drew near to him one day as he "sat and begged." Of His own free grace He anointed his eyes, and bade him "Go, wash in the pool of Siloam." At once he obeyed, and returned seeing. He not only entered into a new life, and had new views of everything about him, but he now saw, as he had never done before, the dreadfulness of the condition from which he had been delivered. "I was blind," he said, "now I see."

The fourth case is the one assigned as the subject of our present study. In it the great points of emphasis appear to be the blind man's deep sense of his wretchedness, and his unbounded confidence in the power of Jesus to deliver him. Sight is the one thing that he needs, the only thing that he asks Jesus to give. Let us examine the case in its details.

It is recorded by St. Matthew, (xx., 29-34,) St. Mark, (x., 46-52,) and St. Luke, (xviii., 35-43.) There are some differences in these narratives, but for our purpose they are comparatively unimportant. As for instance, whether the miracle took place when Jesus entered Jericho, or when He left it—whether there were two miracles, one as He entered and another exactly like it when He left—whether the blind son of Timeus had a companion in misery who did exactly as he—are not vital questions. Because one evangelist speaks of "two blind men," and the others of only one, they do not necessarily contradict each other, for if there were "two," there must necessarily have been "one," and he may have made himself so prominent that the other was not noticed. And as regards the duplication of the miracle, Dean Trench says: "I Bengel, as I must needs believe, with his usual tact, has selected the right reconciliation of the difficulty—namely, that one cried to Him as He drew near to the city, whom yet He cured not then, but on the morrow at His going out of the city cured him together with the other, to whom in the meanwhile he had joined himself."

We need only note, therefore, that near Jericho, either on one side or the other, this "blind Bartimeus, the son of Timeus, sat by the highway side, begging." If he had a companion, as intimated by St. Matthew, he lost his personality in the vehemence of his friend. The presence of such blind beggars on the highway was no uncommon sight. They were then, and are still, to be found at all places of greatest course in or near all large cities and towns. If they were able to walk they took their places regularly themselves; if not, some kind friend placed them in the way, where they could most successfully appeal to the sympathies of the passing crowd. There was no other provision made for their support or comfort. So this man sat that day where he had often sat before, "by the highway side, begging."

AN UNUSUAL COMPANY.

But that day an unusual company passed along the highway, and—as the deaf hear with their eyes, and the blind see with their ears—the quick-sighted ears of Bartimeus at once detected the difference. They told him that it was not only an unusual company, but that it was a company bent on some very unusual errand. It was evidently not merely a set of pilgrims going up to Jerusalem to attend the Passover, and it was just as evidently not a company of Roman soldiers going up for the protection of the city during the feast. With such companies he was familiar, and had often probably received from them the alms for which he begged. Now, however, there was something very peculiar not only in the tread of those who passed by, but in the tone of their voices. They were not the voices of those engaged in conversation, but in praises. They were loud voices, making the air ring with gladness and rejoicing. They were certainly escorting some great person whom all delighted to honor, and for whom some glory was awaiting greater than any he had as yet received. For probably the cry was already beginning to go up from the multitude, which reached its full volume and power when Jesus made His triumphant entry into Jerusalem—"Hosanna to the son of David! Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord! Hosanna in the highest." (Matt. xxi., 9.)

With eager interest "he asked what it meant."

"They told him Jesus of Nazareth passeth by." (Luke xviii., 37-38.)

The news evidently filled him with high hopes. The golden opportunity for which he longed had at last come within his reach. Seated as he had been for many years in this place where people from all parts of the country passed on their way to and from Jerusalem, he was not ignorant of the mighty miracles which this "Jesus of Nazareth" had wrought, nor of the opinion held by many that He was, indeed, the long-expected Messiah.

In addition to what he thus heard from time to time through common report, he was also undoubtedly familiar with the regular reading of the Scriptures in the synagogue, for he was not shut out from religious privileges on account of his blindness, as lepers were on account of their leprosy. So he had often heard such prophecies as these: "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light"; "For unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given, and the government shall be upon His shoulder"; "Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end upon the throne of David." (Isaiah ix., 2-6, 7.) "I the Lord have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles, to open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness out of the prison house." (Isaiah xlii., 6-7.)

Meditating on such prophecies and linking them with the reports he had heard, it would have been very strange if his soul had not been all aglow with earnest anxiety and hope when he heard who it was that was passing by. And if the air was full of shouts of "Hosanna to the son of David!" all of this anxiety and hope would be greatly intensified. No wonder, therefore, that he at once cried out with earnestness—not Jesus of Nazareth—but "Jesus, Thou Son of David, have mercy on me!" (Mark x., 47.) And then joined by his companion, with one voice they repeated the cry: "Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou Son of David!" (Matt. xx., 30.)

NO ONE OPPOSED THEM.

But now a feature in his case is seen which is not seen in any other case. When the two blind men of Capernaum came to Jesus they had no difficulty in approaching Him. They were not rebuked on the street, nor refused admittance to the house. Their cure was only delayed to test the sincerity of their desires and strengthen their confidence.

So with the man of Bethsaida. Apparently he had no deep sense of his need, and put forth no efforts himself to secure his healing. But no one opposed his coming to Jesus. They rather helped him.

With the man of Jerusalem also there was no crying for help, and there was no one to take enough interest in him even to bring him to Jesus. But no one made the slightest objection to his being healed when Jesus came to him, or interfered to prevent him from going to the pool of Siloam.

But with Bartimeus, not only was there none to help him, but every hindrance was put in his way to prevent him and his companions from being healed. As soon as he began to pray, the multitude began to rebuke, and "charged him that he should hold his peace." Many spiritually blind have had the same sad experience when they have tried to turn to the light.

This blind son of Timeus, however, was not to be turned back by any opposition of others. He knew the desperateness of his condition, and the preciousness of his opportunity, too well for that. So the more he was rebuked, "the more a great deal" he cried: "Thou Son of David, have mercy upon me." His cry was not in vain. Such a cry never is. "Jesus stood still, and commanded him to be called."

At once he obeyed the call, and, "casting away his garment," he "came to Jesus." It was but a beggar's dress, a "filthy garment," but it was all that he had, and to have retained it would have hindered his steps. In casting it away, he did just what Jesus had bidden "The Rich Young Ruler" to do. So he stood before Him, of whom he had so earnestly asked mercy. It must have been a very thrilling moment with him.

The question which Jesus put to him, "What wilt thou that I should do unto thee," had probably often been put to him before by others, and then he had only "asked an alms." (Acts, iii., 3.) That was all that they could give. It was all that he expected to receive. But now his answer shows that he realized that he stood before One who was able to give vastly more, and it tells us not only how deeply he felt his condition, but also how confident and simple was his faith. It was "Lord, that I might receive my sight." It was a very brief petition, but it covered infinite blessings, and at once it received the gracious answer: "Go thy way, thy faith hath made thee whole."

There was no need to test his faith as with the men of Capernaum, for his persistence in the faith of opposition had proved that he believed that Jesus was "able to do" all that he desired. Neither was there any necessity for taking him aside as with the man of Bethsaida, for his very cry showed that he had long in spirit sat with Jesus by the wayside. Neither was there any need to send him to Siloam, for he was ready at once to be healed. So he was simply biddsn to go his way, and that way was to follow Him, "glorifying God." (Luke, xviii., 43.)

QUESTIONS ON THE LESSON.

What condition is brought before us in this lesson, and how is it illustrated?

What were the characteristics of the case recorded by St. Matthew?

What were the peculiarities of that recorded by St. Mark?

What marked the case reported by St. John?

By whom is the case now brought before us recorded, and what is said of the differences in their accounts?

What is said of Bartimeus, and of men in his condition?

What attracted his attention this day, and what did he do?

What knowledge had he of Jesus of Nazareth, and what did it lead him to cry?

What new feature now appears in his case, and how does it compare with the others?

What did this opposition lead him to do, and why?

What question did Jesus ask him, and what is said of it?

What was the result, and why was it sufficient?

INTERNAL REVENUE REPORT.

Charles H. Treat, Collector of Internal Revenues for this district, yesterday made public his monthly report. Internal revenues to the amount of $1,426,408.37 have been collected during November, as against $1,188,015.25 for the same month last year, and $1,233,459.87 for October, 1900.

Collector Treat called attention to the large increase in the sale of documentary stamps for the past month, the sum being $1,010,012.70, an increase of nearly half a million dollars over the amount sold during the three or four months previous. He stated that this large increase was due to the revival in business circles, and in Wall Street. The highest amount of documentary stamps ever sold in this district was in January last, when the sales amounted to $1,262,575.02.

LECTURES ON SHAKESPEARE.

Will Be Given for Benefit of Home for Crippled Children.

The first of a series of lectures on the "Three Great Tragedies of Shakespeare" to be given by Marshall Darrach for the benefit of the Settlement Home for Crippled Children will take place next Monday afternoon at the Berkeley Lyceum, 19 West Forty-fourth Street. The subject of this first lecture, which will begin at 3:30 o'clock, will be "Julius Caesar." The second lecture will have "Hamlet" for its subject, and will take place on Dec. 10. The third of the series will be given on Dec. 17, and the subject will be "Macbeth." Tickets for the entire course may be had for $2.50.

The Settlement Home, which was started by private individuals, has been instituted to give shelter to the homeless cripples of the city who, but for this refuge, would have to go to Randall's Island or sink to licensed beggary. The institution has no endowment, no State or city aid, and has no salaried officials. It is in need of many things, and gifts of furniture, clothes, and money will always be gratefully received. The house of the institution is at 247 West Sixty-ninth Street.

SANITY OF MR. NEWCOMB.

His Wife's Application for a Commission Vigorously Opposed.

The case of H. Victor Newcomb, the ex-railroad President, came up in the Supreme Court, before Justice Fitzgerald, again yesterday on the application of his wife to have a commission appointed to inquire into his mental condition. De Lancey Nicoll, who represented Mr. Newcomb, opposed the motion. Burton N. Harrison appeared for Mrs. Newcomb.

Mr. Nicoll declared that the appointment of a commission was not necessary now, and that some of the physicians named for appointment were men who in past proceedings had sworn that Mr. Newcomb was suffering from an incurable malady and that Mr. Newcomb objected to having these same men pass on his case again. The lawyer pointed to the fact that at present a referee was taking testimony as to Mr. Newcomb's condition, and that the present application was premature.

"Fifteen lay witnesses," said Mr. Nicoll, "besides a number of expert alienists have appeared before the referee and declared that Mr. Newcomb is perfectly sane and capable of caring for himself and his property. The lay witnesses include two bank Presidents, as well as social and business friends of Mr. Newcomb."

Mr. Nicoll also declared that Mrs. Newcomb had no right to come into the case now, as Mr. Newcomb is at present in the charge of a committee and the proceedings already begun before the referee were to find out if the committee should be discharged.

Mr. Harrison contended that Mr. Newcomb should be examined again so as to determine his present condition and that the commission suggested was made up of men who knew the history of his case. Justice Fitzgerald reserved decision.

MR. MANLEY AFTER OFFICE.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The question of appointing a Commissioner of Internal Revenue to succeed the late Commissioner Wilson came up during the meeting of the Cabinet to-day.

It was disclosed that Joseph H. Manley of Maine probably would be an applicant for the place.

Mr. Smith to Remain in the Cabinet.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Attorney General Griggs is the only Cabinet officer who will not accept the President's invitation to remain with him during his next Administration. Mr. Griggs's business interests call him away. For some time it was reported that Postmaster General Smith would leave the Cabinet for the same reason, but it is now stated on high authority that Mr. Smith has succeeded in arranging his business affairs so that he can stay in the Cabinet. Mr. Root's family, it is said, are anxious to have him retire, but there has never been any doubt that he would remain. His health was impaired by his labors during the Summer, but is now completely restored.

PHILLIPS CLEARED $300,000.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—November corn, with the support of George H. Phillips withdrawn, opened at 38 to 37 cents to-day, compared with Wednesday's close at 41 cents, and dropped by noon to 35½ cents, where it closed.

Mr. Phillips said to-day that his personal profits through the deal are $300,000, about half of which was made in the last week.

The market declined on the liquidation of scattered holdings aggregating 200 000 bushels. Most of this corn was held through the advance at 51 cents and was sold at a loss.

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE COMMITTEE.

JAMES C. CARTER,
JOHN S. KENNEDY,
Dr. FELIX ADLER,
JACOB H. SCHIFF,
JOHN HARSEN RHOADES,
ALFRED T. WHITE,
JOSE B. ERHARDT,
CHARLES SPRAGUE SMITH,
GEORGE FOSTER PEABODY,
WILLIAM H. BALDWIN, Jr.,
ALEXANDER E. ORR,
ADRIAN ISELIN, Jr.,
The Rev. ROBERT L. PADDOCK,
ROBERT W. DE FOREST,
FREDERICK D. TAPPEN.

This is a very strong committee. Every member of it has won the cordial respect and confidence of the community. It includes representatives of a number of classes, each one capable of supplying, under the lead of its representative, energy and resources of its own for the prosecution of the work. We think that it would be very difficult to select an equal number of men of greater influence, of more varied and recognized ability, or of higher character.

There is much significance in the recent statement of Mr. W. H. BALDWIN, Jr., that this body would not be transitory, but permanent. Of course, such a committee and the organization behind it must be maintained as long as it is necessary to watch, prod, and expose those whose official duty it is to enforce the laws. No one doubts that this is now necessary, or that a merely temporary effort would do little good and might do harm, since, when it had collapsed, the evildoers would feel more secure than ever, and would be right in so feeling. The spirit expressed by Mr. BALDWIN is undoubtedly that of the whole movement: The men who are engaged in it are men of responsibility and standing in the community. They could not afford to enter so conspicuously on a movement of this sort and let it drop without accomplishing results worthy of their reputations and of the influence they have earned in the city. Nor are they men that need this consideration to urge them to the effective performance of all obligations that they assume. They have much too clear an idea of the extent and the origin of the evils they have undertaken to combat to go into a sham fight with them. They know that they have to deal with a very large number of desperate and unscrupulous men, with a great deal of money at their command, with great interests at stake, and, above all, with a powerful influence over the actual officers of the law and the political organization that dominates these officers.

At the same time, while it is plain that the committee and those whom it represents cannot be content with a merely ephemeral campaign on vice and on those who live by vice, it is equally plain that the city cannot depend permanently on such an organization for the decent administration of its affairs or the preservation of purity in its government. The very obligation to thoroughness in its work must compel the committee to direct its efforts ultimately to the destruction of the system under which the loathsome evils have grown up and by which they have been established and sustained. That system is political. It is not entirely partisan; it is in fact bipartisan in more ways than one. But it is unquestionably political, and in the long run it can be abolished only by the people in the exercise of their political rights.

The work of the committee will have to be performed with a clear conception of this fact. Otherwise all that they can do will have to be done over again. As has been often pointed out by THE TIMES and by others, and as was particularly emphasized by ex-Mayor HEWITT at the Chamber of Commerce meeting, the immediate cause of the evils with which the committee will have to deal is the corruption of the police. But whatever may have been the case in the time of Mr. HEWITT'S administration, that corruption is not now that of the patrolman, or of the "ward man," or of the Captain. Very probably these are still in some degree and in some instances corrupt. They are the instruments, and it would be strange if they did not profit by the dirty business to some extent. But we believe that the great body of the patrolmen and many of the officers are honest and would gladly do their duty honestly if they were allowed. The headquarters of the vile business is Tammany Hall; the men immediately controlling it are powerful in Tammany Hall; the officials who connive at it willingly or unwillingly are the creatures of Tammany, from the patrolman to the Mayor. It is Tammany that in the long run must be reckoned with. The real work of the committee will be to prepare for this reckoning. The facts must be as fully ascertained and as widely and clearly made known as possible. If in the course of that operation any of the guilty can be punished, if Tammany shall prove to be ready to throw over some of them, by all means let that be accomplished. Every such instance of tardy sacrifice will but show more plainly that the whole thing could have been prevented. Meanwhile it may be relied on that the ultimate dealing of the people of the city with Tammany will be thorough and effective in proportion to the completeness of their knowledge of the facts.

THE DUTY ON HIDES.

A fiscal policy that remits the tax on bank checks and retains the duty on the hides from which the boots and shoes of the people are made cannot be successfully defended before any representative audience. Yet this is only one of a multitude of criticisms which the proponents of a reduction of $30,000,000 in the internal revenue taxes must meet before they can reach a safe point of justification. The schedules of the Dingley tariff teem with duties on raw materials or materials partly manufactured abroad which become the materials of our manufactures. Hides are only one instance out of many, but it is a glaring one.

The Shoe and Leather Reporter in its issue of Nov. 22 tells the history of the 15 per cent. duty on hides and speaks the protest of the trade against its continued imposition:

> One of the first acts of the Administration of President MCKINLEY was to call Congress in extra session for the purpose of passing a new tariff bill, and one of the features of the tariff that was enacted was a duty on hides. There had not been a duty on hides for a quarter of a century. Free from a tax on its raw material, the tanning industry had grown and prospered, and a large export trade in leather had been built up. The cattle-raising industry had also thriven during the same period. There was no demand apparent anywhere for duty on hides. * * *
> Prominent representatives of the leather trade journeyed to Washington, appeared before the Committee on Ways and Means, pointed out the injury of the proposed new legislation to the very large industry which they represented, and gave strong and what should have been convincing reasons why the duty should be placed upon hides. Their arguments fell upon deaf ears. A power which did not manifest itself, and which, therefore, they could not overcome, was secretly at work against them. The matter seemed to have been arranged in advance. Their efforts were fruitless. The duty on hides became an ugly fact which hamstrung the shoe manufacturers would have to consider in making their business calculations.
> Time has not lessened the harmful results to the trade of this legislation. It has, on the contrary, but deepened the sense of them felt by those connected with the leather and shoe fraternity. They are coming to understand more and more that the duty is a serious impediment to them in their efforts to procure a supply of raw material at reasonable prices. The supply of domestic hides has steadily been growing less. There are fewer cattle in the country now than at any time during the past ten years. The requirements of tanners grow with the growth of population. They are obliged to look to foreign avenues of supply, and these are found to be blocked or impeded by the duty on hides. Possibly never before in the history of the country would this duty have been so injurious as at the present time.

In the fiscal year ended June 30 last we imported hides to the value of $19,108,417. The duty collected was nearly $3,000,000. Until that unjustifiable tax has been repealed there can be no warrant for the removal of any of the stamp taxes collected under the Internal Revenue act of 1898. The hide duty is not only a tax upon one of the common and universal necessaries of life, but it is an obstacle in the way of our manufacturers who are now striving to extend the sale of American manufactures in foreign markets. They can get a foothold in foreign markets only by meeting the competition of low-priced goods made in Germany, France, and Great Britain. A customs duty on their raw material adds to the cost of production and handicaps them in the struggle for export trade.

It does not require any argument to show that this is bad taxation, a short-sighted and stupid National policy. What is the use in talking to intelligent men of the "annoyance" of a stamp tax on bank checks, perfumery bottles, and hair dye, so long as the absolute raw material of their boots and shoes pays a much higher tax, and a tax that burdens a great industry and hampers it in its efforts to add to the annual volume of our manufactured exports?

THE PIPE GALLERY DISCUSSION.

The Rapid Transit Commission is a body which, with good reason, is held in high respect by the public. Its work has been an object lesson in the management of municipal affairs. If it has consented to the abandonment of the pipe galleries proposed in connection with the Elm Street section of the tunnel, after their construction was fairly begun, we presume their reasons for doing so, against what we have understood to be the convictions of their engineer, their own judgment, and public opinion, seem to them good and sufficient. We do not believe, however, that the discussion is ended or the subject dismissed.

It is not difficult to discover what reasons the gas companies have for desiring that their distributing systems shall be left alone, as far as possible. There are many miles of mains in New York which would not bear the slightest disturbance, and which must be replaced with new pipes if in any way tampered with. The memorable explosion in the Boston Subway on March 4, 1897, was instructive. The normal leakage of gas mains is so great, and the gas distributed in New York, with its huge percentage of carbon monoxide, so dangerous to life and property, that the idea of carrying mains in subterranean conduits with no covering of earth to diffuse the "gas unaccounted for" and absorb the odor-imparting hydrocarbon enrichments, is calculated to cause great uneasiness in gas councils. The existing conditions are bad enough; but what we are accustomed to is always more tolerable, however bad, than that of which we have had no experience. If the Wall Street proverb, to the effect that "nothing is so timid as a million dollars, except two millions," is true, the timidity of fifty or seventy-five millions may be assumed to represent abject terror of any innovations involving expense and presenting unknown difficulties.

As to water mains, we can well understand that to put them where their leakage must be stopped, would revolutionize our whole system of municipal hydraulics. We may at some time in the iridescent future of our optimistic dreams have an administration of our Water Department which would welcome the demonstration that our present supply, with underground leakage eliminated, is ample for all the needs, public and private, of a city more than twice as large as New York; but no suspicion of this can attach to an administration which has neglected no opportunity to make the Ramapo job seem to be the only solution of New York's water problem.

We do not believe that the pipe gallery discussion is ended or the question decided. Until we are so assured by formal declaration of the Rapid Transit Commissioners, we shall be reluctant to think that the interested opponents of so important a reform in our city engineering methods have carried their point by the vis inertia of dogged opposition.

NATIVE TROOPS IN THE PHILIPPINES.

The question of how far it may be possible to enlist Filipinos for police and military service in the islands is an intensely interesting and important one. An article in The North American Review for December by Major L. L. SEAMAN, M. D., late Surgeon of the First United States Volunteer Engineers, treats of the subject, but not so conclusively as we could wish.

Major SEAMAN has devoted time to the study of the employment of natives by the English in their foreign possessions, and especially to the experiment in training the Chinese at Wei-hai-Wei, which has been remarkably successful. He does not seem to have studied the conditions attaching to the enlistment of the Filipinos themselves very carefully, or if he has, he does not express a definite opinion as to the expediency of that policy. He is clearly inclined to the idea of employing Chinese in the islands, either those now residing there, and especially the mixed Chinese and Filipino, or others obtained from China. That is a proposition to be considered very carefully. It may turn out to be one that should be adopted. Certainly as between sending American soldiers to garrison and police the islands and taking either native or imported Chinese for the service, there is much to be said for the latter plan. But it lacks the one advantage which the English have secured in the employment of the Sikhs and the Ghurkas in India, the Bagaras in Egypt, and the Houssas and Zulus in Africa. It does not enlist the natives themselves in the preservation of order and the execution of the law. There is an immense difference between restraining the natives by force from any other source, and getting them to do the work of restraint themselves.

It is not too much to say that the practical test of the success of our administration in the Philippines will be the ability to police the islands with a native force. For a long time it is probable that such a force would have to be officered by Americans. But if a force of the necessary strength cannot be made up of natives sooner or later, it will be because of one or the other of two facts. Either we have not succeeded in sufficiently winning the confidence of the natives, or the natives are radically unfitted for the work. The latter hardly seems probable, since Spain enlisted some 5,000 Filipinos in her army, and, according to Major SEAMAN, they proved faithful and efficient. He thinks that they might have been secured for the United States service immediately after the capture of Manila, and that the failure to secure them drove them into the service of AGUINALDO. However this may be, it is clear that the ultimate policy of the American Government will have very largely to depend on its ability to use the natives for police work.

CHILE AND BOLIVIA.

If it be true, as announced in a dispatch from Valparaiso yesterday, that the Bolivian Congress in secret session has rejected the Chilean proposals for a definite settlement of the contingencies growing out of the Peruvian-Chilean-Bolivian wars, then it rests with Chile to rupture the armistice now existing, and, after twelve months, to renew hostilities. Whether the threat launched by Señor KOENIG, the Chilean representative at Sucre, last September will be carried out is another question.

Evidence is not wanting to show that some sort of an anti-Chilean league probably exists between certain South American States. The publication of Señor KOENIG'S note was followed by the revelation that a secret offensive and defensive treaty had been in operation between Bolivia and Argentina since 1891. Evidently, too, the recent visit of the President of Brazil to Buenos Ayres is not without significance in the matter. In October Chile adopted a compulsory military system. This was followed by similar measures in some of the smaller States. All this means that any attempt of Chile to enforce the terms of the note would meet with considerable opposition. The rejection of them by Bolivia would seem to indicate that the little internal State is backed up by Argentina, and possibly by Brazil.

Freed from all questions of sentiment and of the sympathy that may be felt for a little country that is being coerced by a large and comparatively strong one, the matter simply resolves itself into this: Chile, fully aware of the natural resources of Bolivia, after sixteen years of waiting, finds it to her advantage to negotiate a permanent treaty which would deprive Bolivia of a Pacific port and at the same time place in Chilean hands the carrying trade of that country. On the other side, Argentina, too, wants this carrying trade, and could have easily secured it had she not been deterred from extending her railway system by the constant craving of Bolivia to secure a port on the Pacific and by the imminent designs of Chile which at length found expression in Señor KOENIG'S note.

In this alternative Argentina quite naturally supported the cause of Bolivia, for an unprotected Pacific port owned by Bolivia possessed less menace to her commercial expansion than would arise were Chile to gain the consent of Bolivia to divert the products of the latter through Chilean territory. In a word, the whole scheme of Chile, if carried to a logical conclusion, would be a severe blow to the commercial aspirations of Argentina, would, in time, practically discourage Bolivian commodities from seeking Atlantic ports, and would hence work more or less to the disadvantage of Brazil and the other South American States washed by the Atlantic. It is a curious situation and one quite likely to attract the attention of the Government in Washington, should Chile decline to modify her terms, in case they have actually been rejected by Bolivia.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Hawaii's selection of an anti-Administration Delegate to Congress, according to The Honolulu Bulletin, is something for which President MCKINLEY should blame nobody but himself. He insisted upon appointing a Governor closely identified with antagonism to native, as distinguished from foreign, ideas and interests, and though he had thus offended the prejudices and disappointed the hopes of a large majority of the islanders, he neglected to insure the political safety of the Dole faction by withholding the franchise from a part or all of their opponents. As a result the new Territory has struck a blow, decidedly humiliating, if not particularly important, at the man and party that so recently created it. It seems that many of the Hawaiian Republicans warned the President about the narrow limits of Mr. DOLE'S popularity, but their advice was not heeded, and even the measure that was expected to win the undying gratitude of the natives—the granting of manhood suffrage—was twisted into an effective argument against the Republicans. "Why," asked the ingenious WILCOX, "if the party honestly supports manhood suffrage, did the President appoint as Governor an opponent of that measure?" The question was obviously a pertinent one, and it had a great effect upon the suspicious and disaffected part of the islanders. The Bulletin is of the opinion that the natural tendency of the Wilcox or independent voters is toward the liberal ideals and sound principles of the Republican Party, and it finds in the outcome of the election simply a proof that "these voters will not accept, without protest, a governmental personnel which is to them much what the reinstatement of the monarchy by CLEVELAND would have been to the annexationists had CLEVELAND been successful." The situation is certainly a curious one, and it demonstrates again the beauties of consistency, the dangers of inconsistency.

—There may well have been political and military considerations that justified taking the risks incidental to keeping the Yosemite at St. Luis d'Apra during the typhoon season, but, that being the case, it will strike the average sailor man familiar with those waters that special and timely efforts should have been made to insure the safety of this and other vessels on the station. The dangerous character of the harbor has been known for centuries, and, of course, the Spaniards never did anything to improve it. They were content to use the beautiful bay at the season when no particular protection was needed, and to send their ships away whenever there were indications of heavy westerly winds. The officers of the Yosemite must have been aware of what was coming, for typhoons are not little thunderstorms that arrive unheralded. They also were familiar with the reefs and shallows that fill up so large a part of the bay, for these have all just been surveyed and charted with some care, preparatory to the extensive improvements which the Government has in mind, and which alone will render the island of any value as a half-way station between Hawaii and the Philippines. And yet they staid, the typhoon came, and the inevitable happened. At this distance it would be absurd even to intimate that the loss of the Yosemite was due to any lack of care on the part of her commander or his subordinates, but some sort of an explanation does seem to be in order from the person or persons who sent the vessel to Guam and kept her there during the perilous season. It may be all right; indeed, it presumably is, but on the face of things there is just the hint of a rather serious blunder.

—Bolivia, according to present reports, has fallen in with what certain lugubrious individuals regard as the fashion of a wicked age, and has ruthlessly seized, crushed, and otherwise maltreated the struggling "Republic of Acre." We have no reason to regard the "Republic of Acre" as anything more than the device of a few rubber dealers to avoid the payment of taxes and to impose that burden upon other inhabitants of the region they had monopolized, but they used the name sacred to liberty, and of course that makes them blameless in the eyes of the lugubrious ones to whom reference has just been made. Bolivia, therefore, is in for a lot of denunciation as the exterminator of a Government weaker than herself. In time, no doubt, we shall hear how the extermination was effected. Presumably a Bolivian Lieutenant or Sergeant marched a dozen or two soldiers through the woods till they came to a thatched shed, which may or may not have been labeled "Arleopolis," and the rest of the republic escaped in a rowboat. It was all very tragical, if viewed at the Bostonian angle, but then so few, so very few, people do view things at that angle, and, it is to be feared, that everybody else will see in the episode nothing except a rather impudent farce, happily brought to a summary termination.

—An enterprising resident of Mimico, Canada—wherever that may be—has taken the trouble, first, to register at Washington the words The Seer as the title of a newspaper, or magazine, and, second, to inform us that for a "fair consideration" he is ready to transfer to us the right to use this new title in any form we may prefer. The Mimican adds that The Seer is a name particularly appropriate and striking for any journal having or aspiring to have a very wide circulation, and he announces the expectation that we will "agree that this title, for euphony, suggestiveness, and general appropriateness, is superior to anything of the kind yet discovered," and his amazement that "it has not been pre-empted before." In conclusion he says: "I would respectfully suggest that it might pay you well to substitute this new title for the one you have been using; or, if you are interested in any new literary venture, here is a title far surpassing the hackneyed Post, Times, Mail, Herald, Star, World, &c." We doubt if among all her progeny the "Lady of the Snows" has a cooler child than this one, so we have no fears that he will become dangerously heated if we fail to snap up his offer, and we even venture to intimate that we do not share his enthusiasm for his discovery. The Seer might do as the name of a paper devoted to the interests of fortune tellers, but, credulous as is the age, fortune tellers are a widely scattered and innumerous class, and their unassisted patronage would hardly create the "wide patronage" which, as our correspondent hints, is one of the objects of journalistic ambition. Possibly this accounts for the fact that the title has not been "pre-empted before"—or behind. We suggest that the Mimico person write to Washington again and register The Sere and Yellow. There, now, is a title that might bring a good price. It would fit several papers that are struggling along under names lacking both novelty and significance. Our own readers do not clamor for prophecy—which is fortunate, as we confess inability to supply it.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"Cease ye from man whose breath is in his nostrils" were the words that occurred to me whem I read Mr. R. Fulton Cutting's nonsensical utterance which you so justly censure in your powerful editorial this morning. Mr. Cutting is a gentleman for whom I have always had a hearty admiration, and I cannot understand what possessed him to throw that bombshell into the ranks of the opponents of Tammany Hall. The Citizens' Union would do well to remind their excellent President that Mr. McKinley owed his success in part to his prudence in "bridling his tongue"; while poor Bryan's unruly member was his worst enemy. Croker predicted that his opponents would fall through their "internal divisions," and the only way to avoid that is to keep one and only one purpose before us, and that is to put an honest anti-Tammany man, with common sense and a backbone, into the Mayor's chair next year. Mr. Cutting will be our valuable helper if he sets his face like a flint toward that one supreme object. THEO. L. CUYLER.

A RESPECTFUL PROTEST.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I cannot bear to let go without challenge and protest a recent utterance of a great religious leader, as reported in your issue of the 22d inst. I refer to Bishop Potter's appearance at a late labor union dinner and his address there, in which he not merely tolerated, but strongly commended, the tobacco habit, and held that a true brotherhood of feeling could be fostered by it. I read the report with sorrow and incredulity, and I beg, as a fellow-laborer in the vineyard, courteously, but most earnestly, to remonstrate against an expression likely to be fraught with grave mischief as coming from such a source.

Surely a habit so nearly universal and so overmastering when established needs no encouraging. And how deplorable it is we need no reminding, not only in its general results as an enormous waster of the fortunes of the community and its at best doubtful effects on adults, but, worst of all, in its sapping, as practically all reputable physicians are agreed, of the life of our young manhood. Only the other day I saw in my walk a lad of nine or ten puffing his cigarette, and his air—and the ambition was noble enough—said plainly, "Am I not a man when I am doing this manly act?" And my heart ached, for I saw the chains, invisible to him, he was riveting upon him.

Of course, I am not defending the absurd position that only things proper for children to do are proper for adults, or that the one can be the measure for the other; and yet we cannot ignore the fact that in the present case the fight against the tobacco habit in the young is made immensely more difficult—often, indeed, practically hopeless—by the fact that older people, especially fathers and revered pastors, are upholders and practicers of it. When I appeal to a boy not to smoke, and his ready reply is, "My father smokes, and my minister!" of what avail the rejoinder, "Your father and your minister may well do many things unfit as yet for you," as compared with the case of another whose father, naturally revered in loco dei, is free from the habit?

The decent people of New York and Brooklyn are looking to the Bishop, in part, for leadership in the good fight of the coming political year. What if his great help could be won for the effort to abate this serious source of idleness and dissipation, and the twelve to fifteen millions of dollars (to speak with moderation and restraint) our city spends every year on tobacco could be saved from the office of lowering the physical tone and defiling the body and used to lift the sons and daughters of sorrow and ignorance to diviner life? Here in Brooklyn, to take but a single illustration, is the noble guild of the Trained Christian Helpers (nurses for the poor) gasping for breath for want of the dollars which are being burned up in any half hour in this great city. Think of Tuskegee and its sister points of light, hampered still in their divine work of solving the vexed race problem of the South. What noble enterprises of comforting or uplifting our friend in his great office must know of and sorrow for, struggling for maintenance and compelled to recur to all sorts of pitiful and morally doubtful devices for support. What if the money now worse than wasted on tobacco could be given to their help!

A physician of more than thirty years' practice, whose life has been a long consecration to the service of others, tells me that one of the saddest things in the sickroom, and one of the most trying to the sick, is the ministry there of clergymen given to the habit. Alas, that so many of my profession, of every denomination and body in Christendom, are included in the list! But I try to hope and believe that its hour is coming when we who are set to be examples to the flock shall so revere the temple of the body as to keep it free from every spot and soiling.

May not one respectfully remind this eminent religious and social leader of the untold possibilities, both for inspiration and mischief, of his commanding position at this moment in the eye of the public? And will he not recall or modify the words attributed to him, and thus make less difficult our humbler battle for the things lovely and of good report?

SOFT COAL ON ENGINES.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The perusal of the editorial in THE TIMES of this date, entitled "The Third Rail," and its citation of the use of electricity as a motive power to haul trains through tunnels, and thus relieve passengers of the obnoxious conditions pertaining to the customary methods of performing such transportation, giving as an example the system adopted by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, in its passage under and through the City of Baltimore, suggests to me the query, why, with that hauling being done by electric motors, it is the custom, and a very necessary one, for the porters upon the passenger trains to close all windows and ventilators of the cars before entering that tunnel, and to keep them so until the trains have emerged at the further ends?

That mode of query hardly puts the question as I would wish, for I know why the windows and ventilators are closed, viz., to keep out the black smoke and coal dirt which is thrown out by the engines! What I should have asked is, why should there be any such emanations from the engines at all, even were the hauling done by them, for the use, upon passenger engines of the vile soft coal, with its consequent clouds of thick black smoke, penetrating into not only every part of the cars, but into the eyes, noses, and into the clothing of the passengers, is a disgrace to modern methods and civilization. Even those engines, which burn anthracite coal, are chargeable with this same effect, only to a much less degree than the others.

Ought there not to be legislation by which the use of soft coal upon the engines of passenger trains shall be prohibited? It might cost more than the use of soft coal to burn anthracite, but what of that? These roads have valuable and exclusive franchises, for which the people have received nothing, (no matter what amount may have been paid to legislators, in their acquirement,) and the people have the right, supported and enforced by the law, to have their travel made as free from annoying conditions as it is possible to make it.

It is too much like the old wood burning engine days to compel passengers, traveling over such wealthy and otherwise up-to-date railroads as the Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio, to make the trip from New York to Washington enveloped in a cloud of filthy black smoke, even with windows closed, and what it is with windows open can be easily imagined. Stop the use of soft coal.

MISERY IN SOUTH AFRICA.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Under the caption of "A Plea for Oom Paul," in your issue of 28th inst., "A Constant Reader" writes: "Every reader of Mr. Krüger's speech, of course, (excepting the editor of THE TIMES,) was aware that the old statesman was not referring to the war as carried on in the beginning, (when these Frenchmen were present,") &c.

I wonder how "Constant Reader" knows that "every reader was aware" of this. I, for one, took precisely the same view of the speech as set forth in your editorial. As a regular war the South African conflict is a thing of the past, the fact that the Frenchmen returned would point that out, and I pity the intelligence of any one who can see any hope for the Boers in the present situation.

Whatever the merits of the question at issue between Boer and Briton, one fact stands prominently forth; that is, that the Boers were prepared for the war and invaded British territory. In doing this they caused "unspeakable misery" to many British women and children. I read in the public press at the time of even Boer children spitting on their fellow-subjects of British origin and calling them "Verdame Rooineks," of Mr. Krüger hinting to his burghers for every man a lassie or two, of British woman refugees being herded like sheep, without food, in cattle cars, and of children being born under these awful conditions. I sympathized then with these poor women and children, and, like "Constant Reader," I feel a deep sympathy for the Boer women and children in their present plight.

But there is this difference in these cases, that Mr. Krüger can end the suffering and misery resulting from the guerrilla warfare any time he chooses by recognizing the inevitable and giving up the hopeless struggle.

"War is hell," and those who wantonly provoke it must be prepared for the horrors which follow in its train.

The Boer women who wondered what Paul Krüger would do when he had driven the English into the sea must now be preparing to recansider this estimate of Oom Paul's character. He has led his followers to defeat like our Mr. Croker, and has gone to Europe for his health, also like Mr. Croker, and if we could ask him the question, 'Where did you get it?' he would no doubt intimate again, like Mr. Croker, that it was his private business.

New York, Nov. 28, 1900. FAIR PLAY.

HAWAIIAN AND HAOLE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Hawaiian feeling toward the "haole," or stranger, is this: The Hawaiian has been cheated, deprived of his country and his rights, and he knows it. In 1895 a few misguided men tried to regain their liberty by force, and they failed, very naturally; their friends had told them how hopeless the undertaking would be, but they did not realize this. Many Hawaiians were treated then with great brutality by the foreigners. Every Hawaiian knows that the white men have had no injuries at their hands; that persons and property are perfectly safe in the islands, and always have been so, as far as the natives are concerned. The Hawaiians realize that the foreigners wish government for, of, and by moneyed interests, and that the people themselves are not intended to be considered. About the worst that can be said of Hawaiian rule is that it was extravagant and sometimes childish. Of foreign rule one can say that it has often been despotic as well.

Those who think that the Hawaiian does not have in his heart a hatred of the foreigner do not know him. His feelings are those of our ancestors during the Revolution toward the British. The Hawaiians have the same reason for these feelings, and they have added the knowledge that their cause is hopeless. Queen Liliuokalani's great strength was that she stood for the ideas of nationality and liberty.

It would be easy for the Republican Party to do in Hawaii-nei what the Democrats have done in the South, though there would be no pretext in the former case save commercial greed alone. But that party would thus raise a perpetual estoppel against itself as a "liberty party," or even a "people's party," and it would be distinctly a "rich man's protective league."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have the misfortune to be a commuter on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, and, with your permission, will give an instance of the extraordinary parsimony of this soulless corporation. The average railroad car, as you are aware, is lighted by five lamps; it is the custom on the Central and Harlem Roads to light three of these before passing through that obnoxious tunnel; on the New Haven it is customary to light one. Yesterday morning, however, the passengers in the last two cars were informed that as there were not the usual number traveling there would be no light whatever, and we were then kept for forty-five minutes crawling through the tunnel is total darkness. Is there not some city ordinance directing the proper lighting of cars? SUBSCRIBER.

IF LIVING IS BUT WARFARE.

Ripley D. Saunders in St. Louis Republic.

If living is but warfare, a fierce and vast campaign,
Let's be good soldiers in our day, the kind that don't complain;
The cheerful breed that on the march so steady strides along,
That bears the brunt of battle as bravely as may be,
And cultivates a laughing eye, the brighter side to see;
For self-respect's a steadfast mark to guide your marching by,
And the world loves its good soldiers, that bear them straight and high.

If living is but warfare, let's make it splendid war,
Till of some noble purpose tells each honorable scar;
So glorious that when the grand Te Deum strains arise
God's angels shall lift up the chant and choir it through the skies,
And the trumpets of archangels shall sound the proud release
That signals to good soldiers God's ultimate of peace!

GABRILOWITSCH THE PIANIST.

His Second Recital Yesterday Afternoon at Mendelssohn Hall.

Ossip Gabrilowitsch, the young Russian pianist, gave his second recital yesterday afternoon at Mendelssohn Hall. His programme consisted of the following numbers: Mendelssohn's prelude and fugue in E minor, Opus 35; Schumann's C major fantasy, Opus 17; Chopin's A flat ballade, D flat prelude, and B minor scherzo, Opus 20; Leschetitzky's "Melodie à la Mazurka," Tschaikowsky's barcarolle in G minor, and the Schubert-Tausig "Marche Militaire." The audience was large and of a character to demonstrate that there is a substantial interest in the performances of this promising youth. Especially was it plain that his melting tone color in such music as that of the introspective and self-weary Chopin, the Byron of tone poetry, wove its subtle spell about the feminine heart, whether carried beneath a jacket or an overcoat.

This is a pianist who has moments of perfect loveliness. These come when the music and his far-away mood, his utter abstraction of manner, with its self-critical insistence on the letter of every nuance, are in complete harmony. Such moments came yesterday in the utterance of the second melody of the first movement of the Schumann fantasy, in the second theme of the Chopin ballade, in the trio of the scherzo, and in the trio of the march of Schubert. But, oh! where was the "leidenschaftlich" in the first movement of Schumann's immortal song of the heart? Who heard in that deliberate and studied treatment of the light and shade the sonata appassionata of the new romanticists? Lofty repose, superhuman control, deep thought, and, above all, serenity, were in this sweetly musical reading, which translated a paean of passion into the vesper chant of a Galahead, without food. Purity, melancholy, a sadness analytically self-wrought into carefully tinted expositions he gave us; but if he had only sinned against the perfection of fluent tone but for a moment and for once smitten the cold keys into fire, even the flame that scorcheth, who would not have risen up and called him blessed?

The second movement of the fantasy was even further from the ruling emotion of this gentle soul. "Maessig"—that is what he never is. But the last movement, "Langsam getragen," that was meat and drink to his clinging fingers, which always caress the keys with the touch of a sculptor petting his marble thought. Perhaps there are the fountains of a great deep somewhere in the nature of this thoughtful-faced boy, with the deliberate manner and the prepared accent, but they have not yet been broken up. When they shall be, then perchance that sunset palette of tone will paint passions that words cannot speak, and only the full-grown women in the audience will find in him a poet, while the girls who now palpitate will seek new shallows to murmur to them.

Is it necessary now to add anything about the mock heroics of the B minor scherzo? Was that "Chopin, the conqueror," as Mr. Hureker calls him? Whom did he conquer? Where were the "tossing of hands and cries to heaven, calling down its fire and brimstone"? It was smooth, clearly carved, highly relieved piano playing, but it was no proclamation of the masculine Chopin. And yet again, in the Schubert march, dressed for company by Tausig, the deliberation of this most Mendelssohnian artist was only surpassed by the delicious delicacy of his touch, his crisp neatness of enunciation, and his lovely tonal tinting in the middle passage. These, too, were the qualities which shone conspicuous in his reading of the ballade of Chopin. Nothing in nature could have purled and flashed as did his runs in the first appearance of the whirling figure, and his teasing dalliance with the second theme was simply fascinating. But these are things which he can do, and let him enjoy all the glory that accrues from their performance. When all is said, the first impression made on the present writer by this young player remains. He is elegantly poised in thought and feeling, and his cantabile is as honey in the mouth; but he does not yet speak with authority nor with the speech that moveth.

MRS. McKINLEY IN THE CITY.

Mrs. William McKinley, the wife of the President, arrived in this city yesterday afternoon and registered at the Manhattan Hotel. She was accompanied by Controller and Mrs. Dawes, her physician, Dr. Rixey, and a manservant and a maid. The party traveled in a special car attached to the Washington Express of the Pennsylvania Railroad, which arrived in Jersey City at 3:15 P. M. As Mrs. McKinley was being wheeled in an invalid's chair to her carriage, she was recognized by a crowd of West Point cadets on their way to Philadelphia, where their football team is to play a game to-day. The students lined up and gave their academy yell, ending with a "McKinley! McKinley!" Mrs. McKinley acknowledged the salute with a smile and a bow.

Upon her arrival at the Hotel Manhattan she immediately retired to the suite of rooms on the second floor, fronting on Forty-second Street, which had been specially engaged for her. She received no visitors during the rest of the day.

Mrs. McKinley is here on her annual Christmas shopping tour, for, although there are no children in the McKinley household, there is always a large party of guests invited to the White House to celebrate. The presents which are to be given to these friends are always selected by Mrs. McKinley personally. In addition, she purchases most of the gifts with which the President likes to remember his more intimate friends. Mrs. McKinley will probably remain here until the middle of next week.

OHIO SOCIETY BANQUET.

Memorial on the Death of John Sherman—Officers Elected.

The Ohio Society of New York City held its annual meeting and banquet last night at the Manhattan Hotel. At the conclusion of the repast President Southard of the society read a memorial on the death of John Sherman. "Ohio honored her illustrious son," he said, "and nobly he served his State and Nation. With his arm and brain he aided in the preservation of the Union, and he stood pre-eminent as a financier during the troublous days from 1861 to 1865. He stands alone as the equal of Alexander Hamilton." A resolution of sympathy and condolence with Mr. Sherman's family was then adopted.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President—Milton I. Southard; Vice Presidents—Andrew J. C. Foye, George E. Armstrong, Thomas H. Wheeler, Warren Higley, and Colgate Hoyt; Secretary—Albert F. Hagar; Recording Secretary—Charles W. Morris; Treasurer—Leander H. Crall; Trustees—Samuel H. Parsons, James G. Newcomb, and Emerson McMillan.

THE CZAR MUCH BETTER.

Official Bulletins Are Corroborated by Other Information.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 30.—Information received through private sources fully confirms the recent favorable bulletins referring to the Czar's health.

His Majesty has made such genuine improvement that his condition seems to promise certain recovery.

LIVADIA, European Russia, Nov. 30.—The improvement in the condition of the Czar continues, as shown by the following bulletin issued by his physicians this morning:

"The Czar passed an excellent day yesterday, and he slept very well last night. His Majesty's condition is very sat

WANTS NEGOTIATIONS WITH BOERS BEGUN

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The Statist to-day proposes that the Government should begin negotiations with Commandant Gen. Botha and Gen. De Wet to bring the war to a close. As the Boer leaders might misunderstand the motive of an overture from the military authorities. The Statist suggests that the highest civil authority in South Africa should begin the negotiations—if not Sir Alfred Milner, then the Chief Justice of Cape Colony or even J. H. Hofmeyr.

This great financial journal leads up to its proposal by an analysis of the situation in South Africa and says:

"We are losing in every way, losing in prestige, and losing in trade. We are seeing our South African possessions plunged into greater and greater distress, and the opinion is gaining ground abroad that we are incapable of bringing the struggle to a satisfactory termination."

Military incompetence is alleged, and The Statist avers that military harshness should be avoided and the Boers be conciliated.

"If men like Botha and De Wet voluntarily surrender, and bind themselves not to act against us in the future," The Statist says, "is there any good reason why a promise should not be given not to send them out of the country? Mr. J. B. Robinson suggests that Botha and De Wet should be invited to take seats in the legislative council that will be established. The suggestion is worthy of approval. The Boers should not be excluded, even from the beginning, from anything which can safely be given to them."

There is virtually no fresh news from South Africa this morning, but the retirement of Lord Wolseley, the return of Lord Roberts, and the appointment of Lord Kitchener to the supreme command, occurring as they do simultaneously, are keenly discussed.

Despite some misgivings, hearty approval is generally expressed of Lord Kitchener's appointment. It is felt that, if any one can clear up matters in South Africa, he is the man, and it is readily admitted that the task before him, though of a different kind, is almost as difficult as that which faced Lord Roberts two months ago, and is calculated to give the fullest scope to all Kitchener's talents as an organizer.

The Morning Post hints broadly that the recent demand of Lord Roberts for reinforcements has not been complied with, and insists that Lord Kitchener's hands must not be tied by any lack of men or horses. It says:

"If reinforcements are withheld or delayed, Lord Kitchener may be paralyzed, with what consequence to the Empire no one can foresee. From 30,000 to 50,000 men are required."

All the editorials dwell with considerable emotion on the nation's debt of gratitude to Lord Roberts, who has "successfully piloted us through one of the darkest hours of our history."

From Cape Town come indications of the uneasiness felt. All military posts throughout Cape Colony are being strengthened. Bloemfontein is now prepared for any possible attack. Extra scouts are out and guards watch the streets in the nighttime. Mines have been laid along the railway. The garrisons on the Orange River drifts are being increased.

At the same time measures are being taken to assist in the restoration of order and prosperity. The Pretoria correspondent of The Daily Mail announces that the British are distributing oats and seed potatoes among the surrendered Boer farmers at nominal prices, without which the farms would go untilled for another year."

KITCHENER NOW IN COMMAND.

He Has Been Made a Lieutenant General, with the Rank for the South African Campaign of Full General.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The War Office announced last evening that Lord Roberts handed over the command of the British troops in South Africa on Thursday to Lord Kitchener.

It is further announced that the Queen approves Lord Kitchener's promotion to be a Lieutenant General, with the rank of General while in command in South Africa.

DURBAN, Natal, Nov. 30.—Lord Roberts is due to arrive at Pietermaritzburg on Dec. 4, and should arrive here Dec. 6.

BRITISH GARRISON RELIEVED.

VRYBURG, Cape Colony, Nov. 30.—The garrison of Schweizer-Reneke has been relieved by a column of troops sent from here.

The beleaguering Boers resisted, but were driven off.

QUEEN WELCOMES CANADIANS.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The members of the Royal Canadian Regiment who have just returned from South Africa were enthusiastically received by the people of Windsor this morning. The soldiers then proceeded to the castle and were reviewed by the Queen in the quadrangle.

Her Majesty, addressing the Canadians, said:

"I am very glad to see you here to-day, and to express my warm thanks for the admirable services rendered during the war by the Canadian troops. I wish you a safe and happy return to your homes."

The officers were then presented individually, after which the Queen summoned Private Armstrong of New Brunswick, who lost a leg during the campaign, and who joined in the march on crutches.

After the soldiers had been shown over the State apartments they were entertained at luncheon in the Royal Riding School.

FRENCH SENATE TO KRUEGER.

Resolution of Sympathy in Same Terms as That of Chamber of Deputies Carried Unanimously.

PARIS, Nov. 30.—The Senate to-day unanimously adopted a resolution of sympathy with Mr. Krüger in the same terms as the resolution of yesterday in the Chamber of Deputies.

Mr. Krüger remained indoors, engaged in consultations with his advisers and receiving callers, until shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon, when, accompanied by Dr. Leyds and the usual military escort, he called on M. Fallières, President of the Senate. The interview lasted ten minutes, after which Mr. Krüger returned to his hotel.

Late this afternoon the Boer statesman visited M. Deschanel, President of the Chamber of Deputies, remaining with him ten minutes. M. Deschanel returned the call.

Afterward Mr. Krüger paid a farewell visit to President Loubet, who returned it.

Senator Fabre called on Mr. Krüger to-day and presented to him a copy of his "Life of Washington," dedicated as follows:

"To the Grand Old Man who, by his struggles and Presidency, (persistency?) recalls Washington, and to whom France has given the same enthusiastic welcome as offered to Franklin, regretting that she has been unable up to the present to co-operate in the foundation of the United States of South Africa as she co-operated in the foundation of the United States of America."

Mr. Krüger will leave Paris to-morrow at 1:45 P. M. by special train for Cologne.

The clergy of the Church of the Sacred Heart of Montmartre will toll, at the moment of Mr. Krüger's departure, the famous Savoyarde, the second largest bell in the world, in memory of the Frenchmen who died in the Transvaal.

NO GERMAN INTERVENTION.

Semi-Official Announcement to That Effect—Not Known Yet Whether Kaiser Will Receive Krueger.

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—The semi-official statement that Mr. Krüger is coming here is discussed cautiously. It is regarded as premature to predict that Emperor William will receive him.

The Cologne Gazette, in an inspired article, reviews the reasons which prevented the powers from interfering in the war in South Africa, and declares that these still exist and prohibit any intervention.

The Agrarian organs express the earnest hope that Emperor William will render powerful assistance to Mr. Krüger. The Liberal press, for the greater part, considers that his coming will be useless. The National Zeitung says:

"Seeing that certain failure would await him here, we should regret the old gentleman's tiresome trip to Berlin, which, at the best, could only lead to demonstrations having no political value for the cause of the Boers."

It is announced that there is no truth in the statement that a movement is on foot for intervention by Germany, France, and Russia. Regarding the question whether Germany, if asked, would offer mediation, there is high official authority for the assertion that Germany would be compelled to refuse to make such an offer, unless also asked to do so by Great Britain. A well-informed officer said to-day:

"If it be true that Dr. Leyds has notified Count von Bülow of Mr. Krüger's conditional intention to come to Berlin, Dr. Leyds has not been left in doubt regarding Germany's attitude. In the event of Mr. Krüger's coming, however, he will be received as President of the South African Republic, since Great Britain's annexation of the territory of the republic has not been officially announced to Germany."

Dutch Sympathy for the Boers.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 30.—In the course of the debate on the budget in the Second Chamber to-day, Herr Kerdyk, Radical, reiterated his opinion that the Netherlands ought to have declined the honor of convening the Peace Conference unless the Transvaal was admitted. He highly approved of the offer of the Dutch Government to intervene between the Transvaal and Great Britain before the war, and especially commended the offer to place the Dutch cruiser Gelderland at Mr. Krueger's disposal to convey him from South Africa to Europe. This act, he said, had been applauded by the whole world. The remarks of Herr Kerdyk were greeted with loud cheers.

THE NEW BRITISH BONDS.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Subscriptions to the new issue of £3,000,000 3 per cent. Exchequer bonds, repayable in 1905, to-day totaled £6,265,500. The tenders ranged from 95 to 100. The average price was 98 2-10.

The Statist will say to-morrow that no applications for the bonds were made by Americans.

MORMON ELDERS ROUGHLY USED.

Citizens of Temesvar, Hungary, Beat One and Duck Another in a Pond.

VIENNA, Nov. 30.—Advices received from Temesvar, South Hungary, record the rough treatment received there by two Mormon Elders, emissaries from Salt Lake, Utah.

The two Elders had hardly commenced to enunciate their views on polygamy when the audience stormed the platform and ejected the pair from the hall. One of them was compelled to run the gantlet of three hundred irate citizens armed with sticks, straps, knotted cords, and hob-nailed shoes. He was afterward stripped to the waist and thrashed by half a dozen matrons of Temesvar. The second Mormon was ducked in a horse pond. Finally, the two Elders were rescued by the police.

The Minister of the Interior has prohibited further Mormon attempts to proselytize as being a danger to the well being of the State.

AMBASSADOR WHITE'S SPEECH.

German Press Comments on His Thanksgiving Day Remarks.

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—United States Ambassador White's speech at the Thanksgiving Day banquet of the American colony in Berlin has been received with favor by all sections of the press, even the Government organs publishing it in full. The Berliner Tageblatt says:

"We are accustomed to hear from Mr White words which do justice to the aims of Germany and show an intimate knowledge of the German mind. It is in a large degree due to his diplomatic skill and worth that the relations between the United States and Germany, even during very critical times, have remained undisturbedly friendly, having their foundation in mutual respect."

Similar sentiments are expressed by other papers, several of which point out the thoroughly harmonious character of yesterday's banquet, by which "Germany and the United States were alike honored."

AWARD AGAINST AMERICAN.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—In the Sheriff's Court to-day the London and Westminster Contract Corporation secured an award of £66,400 against Joseph Hamilton Brotherton, formerly an American Methodist Minister.

It appears from the testimony that Brotherton and an alleged confederate, J. C. Kemp Vance, came to England in 1895 and promoted a number of doubtful mining companies. They next formed the Contract Corporation, including Sir James Linton and other well-known men to act as Directors. Brotherton, it is added, then sold shares in his companies to the Contract Corporation for £55,000, and, it is claimed, he and Vance decamped to America with the loot.

Counsel said the papers in the case were served on Brotherton in America, where he was found living in luxury.

"Brotherton," said Arthur Hewett Spokes, counsel for the plaintiffs, after the case had been heard, "was discovered and served with a writ at or near Denver, much to his surprise. Of course, he did not respond. Proceedings will now be begun in the American courts to obtain £57,500, which I believe he still retains.

"He was originally a resident of Boston. His career in London was one of the most remarkable in the annals of promotion. He lived in a quiet suburb, but had good offices in the city and floated company after company."

Le Temps on Muenster's Resignation.

PARIS, Nov. 30.—The papers here print sympathetic articles referring to the resignation of Prince Münster von Derneburg, the German Ambassador here. The semi-official Temps says he contributed all his influence toward the maintenance of peace and the growing improvement in the relations between the two countries. "He will carry away," Le Temps says, "the respectful consideration of France. But, whoever his successor may be, there is reason to count on the preservation of these relations, which rest, not on the intentions of any person, but on a just, broad view of the strength, interests, and leanings of the two great nations."

Moldavian Peasants in Rebellion.

BUCHAREST, Roumania, Nov. 30.—A rising of Moldavian peasants against the new tax on prune spirits has taken place. The military have shot twenty men and have made many prisoners.

GERMAN LOAN DISCUSSED

Reichstag Told Why 80,000,000 Marks Was Borrowed Abroad.

German Money Market Unfavorable in September, While America and Great Britain Had Abundance of Cash.

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—In the Reichstag to-day, during the debate on the loan bills, Dr. von Thielmann, Secretary of the Imperial Treasury, was asked why the loan for 80,000,000 marks was placed in America.

He replied that the German money market in September was in an unfavorable condition, and the Government had been urged to avoid doing anything to raise the rate of discount. Therefore it was considered desirable to draw money from America and Great Britain, as they both had a great abundance of cash, especially the United States, and the Government had to be careful not to deplete the German money market toward the end of the year.

Count von Kanitz, the Agrarian leader, said he regretted the loan was not placed in Germany. America, he added, might easily become the banker of Europe.

Herr Busing, National Liberal, observed that patriotic heartburnings were unnecessary. Great Britain had also placed a loan in America. But in his opinion a clause should have been inserted prohibiting America from placing a loan in Germany.

Dr. von Thielmann, replying to his critics, declared the apprehensions of Herr Busing were groundless. Should a scarcity of money occur in America, (a contingency which, after the re-election of President McKinley, he did not fear,) Americans would only be able to return the bonds to Germany at a loss.

"I can assure Count von Kanitz," concluded Dr. von Thielmann, "that we did not run after the Americans. They came to us."

Dr. Arendt, Secretary of the German Bimetallic League, approved placing the loan abroad. He said its issue in America protected the market from rises of discount.

Herr Koch, President of the Imperial Bank, also approved the way the loan was placed. He said he did not entertain fear that the loan would be used by America to draw gold from Germany.

Dr. von Siemens, President of the National Bank, said it was unnecessary to go abroad for money.

After further discussion the subject was dropped.

While the Protectionists and Agrarians in the Reichstag were making their joint attack upon Dr. von Thielmann, whom they accuse of being too friendly toward America, and in whose hands now rests the Tariff bill which the Protectionists desire to use as a weapon against American competition, the Agrarian press was making a concerted assault upon the Minister, declaring that unless Dr. von Thielmann is first disinlaced a tariff war against the United States will be impossible."

The Deutsche Tageszeitung admonishes Dr. von Thielmann to hasten the Tariff bill into the Bundesrath, "because the time presses to begin serious work on the commercial treaties so that we may not be again the losers by them."

TO SEEK THE SOUTH POLE.

British National Antarctic Expedition to Start Next Autumn.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—At the meeting of the Royal Society last evening it was announced that the projected National Antarctic Expedition would start next Autumn and that the construction of a vessel, to be named Discovery, had already been commenced at Dundee.

Yesterday's session was the anniversary of the society, and Lord Lister retired from the Presidency, Sir William Huggins, the astronomer, being elected to succeed him.

The annual banquet was given at the Hôtel Metropole in the evening. United States Ambassador Choate, who was among the distinguished guests of the society, made a graceful speech in toasting the organization, and dwelt upon the high appreciation in which Americans held the names of Lord Kelvin and Lord Lister.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

December's first Saturday, as for many years past, is to be devoted to coming-out receptions and country house parties. Fifth Avenue and the adjacent fashionable uptown streets will be lively this afternoon with people hurrying to and from the coming-out teas and receptions. The most interesting of these will be those to be given by Mrs. Frederic Gallatin for her daughter, Miss May Gallatin; Mrs. Talbot Olyphant, for her daughter, Miss Helen Talbot Olyphant; Mrs. Pandelli y Facheri, for her daughter, Miss Caterina P. Facheri, and by Mrs. Melbert Cary, for her daughter, Miss Madeleine Cary. A number of people will take the long drive to West One Hundredth Street for the reception to be given there by Mrs. Howard Badgley for her daughter, Miss Ruth Badgley. At the opposite end of the town Mr. and Mrs. R. Hall McCormick and their daughters, the Misses McCormick, who have lately come to New York from Chicago, will give a large reception at their residence, 23 Washington Square North. What is known as the Southern set in New York society will assemble at Delmonico's at the annual reception to be given there this afternoon by the Governors of the Wednesday cotillions.

The second of the season's débutantes, who is to make her bow this afternoon—namely, Miss May Gallatin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Gallatin, (Miss Amy G. Gerry,) like the first, Miss Hester Gouverneur Hone, who was introduced last week, is a representative of one of New York's older families. The name of Gallatin, like that of Hone, is associated with the history of the metropolis, and, indeed, of the United States. A paternal great uncle of to-day's débutante, Albert Gallatin, was the famous Secretary of the Treasury under Presidents Jefferson and Madison, and the name of Gallatin has for a century stood high in American jurisprudence, literature, finance, and society. Miss Gallatin is a niece, through her mother, of ex-Commodore Elbridge T. Gerry, and through both her parents is related to the Goelets and other old New York families. The reception to introduce Miss Gallatin will be held at the Gallatin residence, 670 Fifth Avenue, and a bevy of her girl friends, most of them débutantes-to-be of this season, will assist her in receiving. These will be the Misses Berta de Peyster, Evelyn Parsons, Pauline Robinson, Nathalie Schenck, Helen Kountze, Eleanor R. Morris, Nellie Hard, Margaret Robinson Sibyl Kane, Mary Harriman, Katherine G. The annual installation of the newly elected officers and Stewards of the St. Nicholas Society took place last evening at Delmonico's. This is one of the most interesting and amusing of the historical society celebrations of the year, and is always largely attended by the members of the old organization. Carlisle Norwood and Dr. T. Matlack Cheeseman were the committee of installment, and delivered the welcoming orations to the new officers and stewards with serio-comic dignity. After the exercises a supper was served. The new stewards installed last evening for the term of three years are Moses Taylor Pyne and James Gore King. Frederic de Peyster Foster was installed as President for a second term. There have been no changes in the offices of Treasurer, secretary, assistant secretary, chaplains, physicians and consulting physicians, and Vice Presidents. The [illegible] for a term of four years are John Harsen Rhoades, Howland Pell, [illegible] de Peyster. Stuyvesant Fish remains as First Vice President, and with the rotation in office, which is a feature of the St. Nicholas Society, will probably be chosen President next year. The annual anniversary dinner of the society will be held at Delmonico's on Monday evening next.

The stories and editorials in the London papers anent the recent marriage of the young Duke of Manchester and Miss Helena Zimmerman of Cincinnati, and which have just been received, are amusing reading. The marriage seems to have created even more of a sensation in London than here, and a varied amount of misinformation appears to have been cabled to the London dailies regarding the history and finances of Miss Zimmerman, now the Duchess of Manchester, and her father, Eugene Zimmerman. There are now three Duchesses of Manchester living. Harriet Sydney, the first, is the great-grandmother of the present Duke, and the daughter of Conway Richard Dobbs of Castle Dobbs, County Antrim. In 1850 she married the sixth Duke of Manchester, who died forty-five years ago. She was again married in 1858 to Sir Stevenson Arthur Blackwood. Her second husband died in 1893. Consuelo Yznaga, a daughter of Señor Antonio Yznaga del Valle of Ravenswood, Louisiana, is the second living Duchess. She was married to the eighth Duke in 1872, and is the mother of the present Duke. The third Duchess is the newly wedded wife of the present Duke. An ex-Duchess may also be mentioned in Louise Frederica Augusta, who, before her marriage with the Duke of Devonshire, was the Duchess of Manchester by her marriage with the seventh Duke, who died in 1890.

A good idea of the general feeling in England regarding this marriage can be obtained from the following editorial notice in The London Chronicle: "Another bachelor Duke has 'ranged' himself in the person of William Angus Drogo Montagu, ninth Duke of Manchester. Though the young peer—he was born in 1877, and succeeded his father in 1892—has shown himself sufficiently unconventional in his recent career, he has been unable to break away from the modern tradition that English Dukes should marry American heiresses. The family of Montagu is a very ancient one, Drogo de Monte Acuto, its founder, having been a warrior in the immediate train of Robert Earl of Moreton, at the Conquest. The present Duke, though he is for was a Lieutenant in the King's Royal Rifle Corps, has not displayed any great amount of military ambition. His tendency is rather toward the stage, and he has also exhibited symptoms of genius as an amateur bartender. The Duke of Manchester, in marrying an American, is not going very far afield racially for his bride. Like Mr. Winston Churchill, he is already half an American. His mother was from Louisiana, as his wife is from Cincinnati. If there is a son of his marriage he will be tenth Duke, and he will have Americans for three out of four of his grandparents. It may be worth while to add that any opposition to the marriage did not come from the friends of the bridegroom. Two generations of Dukes of Marlborough, like two generations of Dukes of Manchester, have crossed the Atlantic for their brides."

A CHECK ON COPYISTS.

Metropolitan Museum of Art Stamps All Pictures Painted There.

It was "copying day" at the Metropolitan Museum of Art yesterday, and a number of pictures were completed and stamped for the owners to take home. The stamping is something comparatively new. It has been the practice for possibly a year to put on the back of every such copy the formula, "Copy of a Picture in the Metropolitan Museum of Art." This is stamped in indelible ink on the canvas and also on the wooden stretcher for the protection of the public. There are any number of paintings in the country, it is said, that are called originals that are merely copies of pictures in the Metropolitan or some other museum of art.

Attention was called to the matter about a year ago, when Mr. Story of the museum chanced to attend an auction sale of pictures and became interested in an "original Corot," which was considered of enough importance by the auctioneers to be featured in their catalogue with an illustration. Mr. Story was interested, as he knew that particular Corot as a museum picture, and the picture offered for sale as a copy of it. He determined then to do as much as possible to prevent the perpetration of such frauds in the future. A duplicate is now kept of every permit issued to copyists, so that there is a record of all work done.

"I don't think this practice of stamping pictures is done in any other museum in the world," said Mr. Story, speaking of the matter. "At least I do not know of its being done, and I have copied in most of the museums on the Continent, and never had a picture stamped. We will do as much as we can to prevent the people from being victimized. These pictures get into the auction rooms, and then some man from the West comes in, is told that a picture is an original, and is taken in.

"There is said to be one of our pictures in one of the big museums of this country which is highly treasured as an original. I have not seen it myself, but several people who know have, and they say that it is certainly a copy of a picture in this museum. It got into a private collection of pictures, and then was donated to the museum as an original, and is considered a treasure.

"There is no knowing to what extent this copying and selling the copies as originals is done. A man brought me a picture one day that he was carrying in a fine mahogany case, and said it was an original Rubens. I own that for a minute I hesitated. It was certainly well done.

"No," said, "that is only a copy, though a good one. I saw the picture later in an artist's studio in the Association Building. He believed it to be an original.

"These things I usually remember, and one day, when I was in Vienna strolling around in all the out-of-the-way corners of the Royal Musée, in a little room I came across this picture. 'Ah,' I said, 'here you are, my friend, now.' It was the original of the one I had seen in New York.

"Speaking of copying, just at the close of the Franco-Prussian war I was in Paris and went around to the Louvre to see the pictures. But I found it closed, the pictures having been sent to Havre ready for shipment to the United States. They were not sent, however, and when I returned to Paris after a little trip into Italy, the pictures were back in the Louvre, and they were arranging them. In front of one of them, Murillo's 'Immaculate Conception,' a woman was sitting copying. She was a woman of about thirty years old. That was some thirty years ago, and every time I have been to the Louvre since I have seen the same woman sitting before the same picture, still copying. She has grown from a young woman to an old woman copying that one picture."

Indians Capture Newspaper Man.

Special to The New York Times.

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, Col., Nov. 30.—Charles Chase, who left Meeker this morning, states that just as the stage was leaving a courier arrived over the road from Rangeley. He announced that one of the newspaper correspondents who left yesterday for the Yellow Springs district, where the Indians are said to be in camp, had been taken in charge by the Indians. The courier stated that the man was in the act of taking pictures when discovered by the Indians. They seized him, and refused to allow him to return.

EXPECTS CHINA WILL WIN

The Spectator Says Allies' Force Has Proved Insufficient.

SEYMOUR'S MISSION FAILS

Southern Viceroys Refuse to Cease Sending Supplies to the Court—Rumors of Reverse to Germans.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The Spectator, in a striking article dealing with the Chinese crisis, expresses the opinion that the most recent developments at Peking foreshadow a Chinese victory over the allies.

"The quarrel has been brought to the test of force," The Spectator says, "and force on the civilized side has proved insufficient. This result is mainly due to the attitude of Russia and the United States. If China escapes with the payment of a small indemnity and many promises on paper—as seems not unlikely, since Germany and Great Britain may not be willing to incur the expenditure and risk involved in persisting in their demands—it will be equivalent to a victory for China, for nothing has occurred which will convince the Chinese that their mighty Empress has been defeated or that Europe can avenge any future massacres."

The Shanghai correspondent of The Morning Post, wiring yesterday, says:

"Despite the cordial reception given to Admiral Seymour, the situation is unchanged. The Hankow Viceroy refuses to stop sending supplies to the Court unless the Nanking Viceroy will also refuse, and the latter, although he undertakes to send no more arms, says he must continue sending supplies so long as the Emperor requires them.

"In fact, all our remonstrances amount to a miserable farce. We have no courage to do more than talk. In the Chinese theatre here the allies are represented by a soldier with an enormous mouth, who does nothing but talk until his career is ended by decapitation."

The Japanese Consul here," says the Shanghai correspondent of The Daily News, "acting under instructions from Tokio, has withdrawn his assent to the consular proclamation forbidding the importation of articles used in the manufacture of war materials. This action has caused general surprise.

"It is rumored that the Chinese are actively purchasing arms and munitions, and that the customs officials are conniving at the passage of false declarations under official instructions."

The Shanghai correspondent of The Times, wiring yesterday, says:

"Reports of uneasiness at Tien-Tsin continue. Chinese regulars and Boxers are believed to be returning to that district secretly, and a renewal of trouble is feared when the port is closed for the Winter.

"It is alleged that the Kalgan expedition met with a reverse, and it is believed that a party of Germans, who were cut off, were obliged to abandon their dead and wounded."

On the other hand Count von Waldersee yesterday telegraphed to Berlin that the German column was returning from Kalgan, and would "continue the march under Gen. Gayl."

A similar reverse had been previously rumored, and denied at Berlin.

THREATEN FRIENDLY VICEROY.

Germans Plan Hostile Movement Against Official Who Has Defended Foreigners.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—In the Cabinet meeting to-day Secretary Hay explained briefly the new features of the Chinese situation.

It is understood that one of the Chinese Viceroys has been proceeding energetically against the Boxers, punishing guilty persons and protecting foreigners and Christians.

But notwithstanding this Viceroy's commendable course, information has been received to the effect that the Germans are not satisfied, and that they are contemplating a hostile movement against him.

It is stated that the Ministers at Peking have not included in their preliminary agreement the proposition of Japan that a monument be erected by China to the memory of Sugiyama, the Japanese Chancellor of Legation, who was killed at Peking in the early stage of the troubles.

The idea of Japan appears to have been to have a special Chinese envoy appointed to convey an official expression of China's regret over this incident, and also to provide a suitable memorial for Sugiyama. While there was no objection to the proposition itself, it seems to have come so late in the deliberations that it was deemed advisable not to include it in the agreement.

PARIS, Nov. 30.—A dispatch to the Havas Agency from Peking says M. Pichon, the French Minister there, is authorized, if all the Ministers are in accord, to sign and hand to the Chinese Plenipotentiaries the propositions adopted by the diplomats at the Chinese capital, though before the presentation of the propositions, the dispatch adds, they will probably undergo fresh modifications.

COL. YORCK DEAD.

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—A special dispatch from Peking to the Tageblatt announces that Col. Yorck, commander of the German column which went to Kalgan, died on Nov 27 at Hiva-Val. His body was to arrive in Peking to-day.

Col. Yorck had previ

$26,500 FOR THE ABBOT

John J. Scannell Bought the Champion Trotter.

ONLY TWO BIDS RECORDED

Thomas W. Lawson's Representative Started the Competition for the Great Racer at $26,000.

The largest crowd that ever attended a horse sale in New York filled Madison Square Garden yesterday afternoon when the sensational race horse and champion trotter, The Abbot, was offered at auction in the "Old Glory" sale by the Fasig-Tipton Company.

Fully 6,000 people were on hand at 4:20, when The Abbot, No. 414 in the catalogue, was reached, and the trumpeter with a flourish announced the famous trotter's entrance. The Abbot, in harness, and with his trainer, Ed F. Geers, in the sulky behind him, was walked around the track, while the spectators, cautioned beforehand, remained comparatively quiet. The Abbot was on his good behavior, however, and accepted the surroundings and light as a matter of course, having become somewhat accustomed to the building through having been exercised there several times before the sale. A short speech by a representative of the sales company led up to the call for a first bid, Auctioneer George Bain then taking charge. The Abbot in the meantime standing in the track with as little concern as if he were in his own box on the Village Farm.

The thousands packed in the seats on the south side of the hall craned their necks and other thousands in the ring tiptoed to catch the first offer. There was a delay of but a few seconds when Ed Tipton, of the firm conducting the sale, started the bidding at $26,000, stating as he did so that he was acting for Thomas W. Lawson of Boston, who had authorized him to go to that figure. The auctioneer dwelt on the opening bid but a fraction of a minute when Fire Commissioner John J. Scannell, well forward in the crowd, raised the price to $26,500, and, raising his hat in response to the auctioneer's acknowledgment, stepped back and joined a group of friends. The crowd hung anxiously on Mr. Bain's pleading for a further advance, but all his eloquence could not stir a further increase. Slowly counting the three calls, and giving every chance to any other who might wish to compete for the champion trotter, the auctioneer dropped his gavel to Fire Commissioner Scannell's old, and a mild cheer went up from the crowd. The price realized was a measure a disappointment to the gathering, as a sharp contest for the possession of the fastest trotter in the world had been anticipated, and it had been predicted on all sides that The Abbot would bring not less than $30,000.

As soon as the purchaser of the trotter was identified the rumor flew through the hall that The Abbot had been bought for Richard T. Wilson. Another rumor circulated was that Mr. Scannell bought the gelding in the interest of the Hamlins. All doubt about the matter was set at rest by Mr. Scannell, who made the announcement in positive terms that he bought The Abbot for himself and would race him in his own name, having already determined that Trainer Ed Geers, who developed the animal, should continue to handle him with the trotters of the Hamlin stable. The Abbot, who last year took the place of world's champion by trotting a mile to sulky in 2:03¾, and a mile to wagon in 2:05¾, besides showing a mile trial to wagon in 2:03¼, is in a class by himself in the trotting world, and his racing for Mr. Scannell doubtless will be confined to trotting against time, as horses to give him races can hardly be found.

Immediately following the sale of The Abbot, the stout and fast five-year-old trotter, Onward Silver, record 2:11¼, bred by W. A. Collier of Memphis, Tenn., was led into the ring. He provoked a short but sharp competition, and was sold at $3,700 to Samuel McMillan, who in half an hour sold him at private sale to James Roberts of Bayshore, L. I., for $4,200, McMillan clearing $500 on his bargain. Prices through the day held up exceedingly well, the average for the horses of the Village Farm consignment being especially good. Though, at that, it did not come up to C. J. Hamlin's idea of what his horses were worth.

Among the buyers in the evening, A. E. Perrin, the Buffalo racing wagon maker, was prominent, he bidding in three fast horses with records. Of the Hamlin offering, in sequence, Bean Brummel, a fast seven-year-old trotting pole favorite of Mr. Hamlin's, will be a factor on the Speedway in the future, he having been purchased for road driving by Samuel W. Martin, the hotel proprietor of Upper Broadway. Of the Hamlin consignment, thirty-six head were sold for $37,105, an average of $1,543.40 per head. In all eighty head were sold in the two-day session, for $57,755, an average of $872.50. The following are the best prices and their buyers were as follows:

RACING AT BENNINGS.

Long Shot Winners Was the Feature of the Sport at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Island Prince, a 50 to 1 shot, captured the first race today at Bennings in a field of twelve starters by the narrow margin of a neck. Boys who never had ridden in a race had the mounts, making the contest an extremely uncertain one for the talent. Another outsider, Ellen B., at 30 to 1, took the fifth by a length and a half, and Jils Greenwood, at 5 to 1, captured the five-furlong event by two lengths, King Brook, the favorite, finishing in the bunch. Princeton Hockey Team's Practice.

About a score of candidates for the Princeton University hockey team, who are spending the Thanksgiving holidays in town, reported at the St. Nicholas Rink yesterday morning and were tried out in a practice game with the team from the Drisler School. The score was 9 to 0 in favor of the Princeton team, which is a favorable showing, as the schoolboys have engaged in almost daily practice ever since the rink was opened, while most of the Princeton players have had no opportunity for practice.

C. C. N. Y.'s 'Varsity Hockey Team.

Manager Markham of the hockey team of the College of the City of New York is at present arranging games with all the leading colleges. He has secured the use of St. Nicholas Rink for practice, and all the home games will be played there. Games are being scheduled with the University of Buffalo and with Union College, to be played in the rinks at Albany and Troy.

As to the team, Markham, '01; Hartman, '01; Baln, '01, and Fasola, '03, are the forwards; Pulvermacher, (P. G.,) cover point; Roe, '02, point, and Caulfield, '03, goal tend. Fully thirty candidates for the team have turned out, and thus the 'Varsity will be assured of a good college team, against which to line up.

At a recent meeting of the team and association, Pulvermacher, who for two seasons has played quarter back on the 'Varsity football team, was elected Captain, and Markham, manager.

ARMY AND NAVY FOOTBALL

WAR HEROES TO SEE THE GAME

Both Teams in Excellent Condition for the Annual Contest on Franklin Field.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Nov. 30.—With the arrival here of the football teams of the United States Naval Academy and the West Point Military Academy, substitutes, coaches, and enthusiastic rooters, Philadelphia began to take on its holiday appearance in anticipation of to-morrow's great contest on Franklin Field between the two branches of Uncle Sam's service—the army and the navy. Both of the representative teams will battle for the ever-sought supremacy, and their struggle on the gridiron to-morrow will be witnessed by one of the largest as well as the most brilliant throngs which ever graced a football game, in this city at any rate. To-night the committee announced that 5,000 applicants would have to be denied admission and all sorts of fabulous sums are offered seats, but none is to be had.

The Naval Academy team arrived at 1 o'clock to-day, having left Annapolis at 8:24 this morning. The sailors occupied special cars and were served with lunch on the train after leaving Baltimore. Counting substitutes, there were twenty-five sturdy men, who are all looking for a chance to get into the game and to strive with all their might for the honor of the season. Arriving at the station, they entered coaches and were driven at once to the hotel. With one or two exceptions, the men looked in fine trim and were in the finest spirits over their prospects.

With the team came Commander Grant of the Naval Academy, Head Coach "Garry" Cochran, the famous ex-Princeton player, and Christie, the trainer, who had a watchful eye on all of his charges and looked after the baggage of the players. At 2:30 they entered coaches and were driven out to Franklin Field, where they went through their final practice. It consisted principally of running through the signals and in handling kicks. The team as a whole showed splendid speed, and the coaches expressed themselves as much pleased at the work.

The middies are a fine-looking set of fellows, tall and strong and clean cut. On their arrival they wore their naval uniforms and long blue overcoats.

The West Point cadets, resplendent in their natty uniforms, arrived at 5:15 P. M., and were driven at once to their hotel, and after partaking of a meal such as an athlete would eat in training, lolled around the hotel lobby and were the cynosure of all eyes. They were in charge of Capt. Smith, who ordered all hands to turn in early in order to be in proper fettle for the fray.

No such distinguished spectators to a great football game probably ever came together on bleachers as those who will watch the embryo soldiers and sailors fight for the laurel wreath of victory on Franklin Field to-morrow. Lieut. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, who, with Secretary of War Root, will be present, will urge on with his cheers the cadets, who are some day to lead the United States armies in the field. On the other side will be Secretary Long of the navy and Admiral Dewey.

Among the officers of high rank at the Naval Academy who will attend are Lieut. Commander Knight, Commander Norris, Lieut. Commander Eldridge, Chaplain Clark, Profs. Hendrickson and Alger, and Lieut. Commander Dodge.

The naval cadets will attend the game in full force, being well equipped with flags, megaphones, songs, &c. The goat belonging to the battleship New York will witness the game, and it is hoped act as a mascot for the sailors.

The line-up will be:

Annapolis.	Positions.	West Point
Read	Left end	Smith, (Captain)
Bruff	Centre	Bettison
Belknap	Right guard	Goodspeed
Williams	Right tackle	Bunker

FOOTBALL AT COLUMBIA.

Most of This Year's Team Will Be in College Next Year—Sanford Wanted as Coach.

Columbia's successful 1900 football team is now a thing of the past. Immediately after the game with the Indians, the members of the White and Blue squad broke training. Many of the men left Columbia Field Thursday afternoon with cigars and pipes in their mouths, losing no time to indulge in the smoke that had been tabooed since the squad gathered for preliminary practice at Branford on Sept. 10. The football quarters in West One Hundred and Seventeenth Street yesterday afternoon wore a lonesome air, for all the players who live in or about Greater New York have gone to their homes for the Thanksgiving vacation, which extends over Sunday, at the university on the heights. Only the members of the squad who live at a distance were to be found at the football house. Several of these have decided to keep alive the memories and comradeship of the past season by engaging apartments in the house for the remainder of the Winter.

Columbia will enter upon the football season next Fall with prospects perhaps more brilliant than any of the other large colleges. Of the eleven men who were first choice for the 'Varsity team this year, at least eight, and possibly ten, will be back in the university and eligible to play. Twelve of this year's substitutes also expect to try for the 1901 team, so that at least twenty seasoned players will be on hand to form the nucleus of the squad. There will doubtless be, in addition, many strong candidates among the entering classes, for Columbia's successes on the gridiron will attract many schoolboy players who are this year to be graduated from interscholastic to intercollegiate football.

Of the 1900 'Varsity eleven, the entire back field, including Capt. Morley, Harold Weekes, Berrien, and Sykes, will return to college and be eligible to play. Unless displaced by new and better candidates, all will certainly represent Columbia again on the gridiron, except, perhaps, Quarter Back Sykes, whose work in the Law School may require all of his time next Fall. If Sykes does not try for the team, the most promising candidates in sight are Edward Boyesen, and Goodman, who have done loyal work and acquired a great deal of experience as substitutes in the squad this Fall.

In the line all the 1900 'Varsity men will return to college except the swift left end, "Johnny" Wolff. He will be graduated next June from the School of Mines. Blakely and McCollom, both speedy, nervy, and experienced substitutes, will be back to compete for Wolff's vacant position. Big "Jack" Wright has another year in the Law School, and will probably again be found at left guard. The remaining veterans in Columbia's line will all return, while Coffin, Ache, Tyson, MacKellar, Duden, and possibly Beardsley from this year's second string of heavy line rushers will be found again in the squad. The following line-up table will show in graphic form the number of experienced players Columbia will have at the opening of the season. All are members of this year's squad, and those with stars opposite their names played in one or more of the big games:

'Varsity.	Position.	Substitutes.
*Smythe or *Coffin	Left tackle	*Beardsley
*Bruce	Centre	*Tyson
*Nelser	Right guard	Duden
*Austin	Right tackle	*MacKellan
*Van Hoevenberg	Right end
*Sykes or B. Boyesen	Quarter back	Goodman
*Morley	Right half back	A. Boyesen
*Berrien	Full back	Holman & Ashley

There is but little doubt that Coach George Foster Sanford, who in two years has brought Columbia almost to the football standard of the "big four," will again have charge of the White and Blue squad next Fall. His services have not yet been formally secured, but Columbia wants him for another season, and his friends say that he is willing to continue his instruction at Morningside Heights for one more season, at least. Mr. Sanford will sail for Europe shortly for a rest after his hard work of the past two months.

Manager Shoemaker is now at work upon the football accounts of the past season, and will have his report ready within a few days. It is expected that a favorable balance of several thousand dollars will be shown.

LIVELY GOLF AT LAKEWOOD.

Snappy and energetic golf, which is always the case when good men meet as opponents in the big Lakewood tournaments, was the feature yesterday on the Lakewood Club links, when two match-play rounds for the three cups were played. The qualifying sixteen in each set were reduced to four, and they will meet this morning in the semi-final round. The survivors for the chief trophy are all star men. Walter J. Travis will play C. M. Hamilton, the low score victor on the first day, and Findlay S. Douglas will play H. M. Forrest of Philadelphia.

The Consolation Cup contests brought out some surprises, the chief one being the defeat of Fred. P. Kimball by the Rev. D. L. Schwartz. The latter is the popular clerical golfer of Lakewood, and has just returned to his home links after a year's absence abroad. His game shows that he has not neglected golf, for he won both of his matches, beating Kimball in a 19-hole game. He will play Charles H. Seely, the young Wee Burn champion, this morning.

Travis had a close game with W. H. Davis in the afternoon, and he had to play his long 19 to win by 4 up and 2 to play, equaling at the same time Hamilton's record of 78. The scores were:

Walter J. Travis, Garden City—
Out	5	3	4	6	5	5	5	5	3	41
In	3	3	4	3	6	4	5	4	5	37	78
W. H. Davis, Lakewood—
Out	6	4	4	5	5	0	4	4	3	41
In	3	3	5	5	0	5	5	5	5	42	83
Walter J. Travis, Garden City—
Out	7	4	4	5	6	5	4	4	4	43
In	3	4	4	4	5	4	4	5	5	38	81
Rogers Maxwell, Jr., Nassau—
Out	6	3	6	5	7	5	5	5	4	46
In	4	4	5	4	5	6	5	5	5	43	89

The defeat of Jasper Lynch was a disagreeable surprise to the local fraternity. A. D. Compton, the young golfer of the Westchester Club and the recent winner of its championship, vanquished the Lakewood crack by 2 up and 1 to play. The scores were very good, and are:

A. D. Compton, Westchester Club—
Out	7	3	3	5	6	5	4	6	5	44
In	4	4	5	5	6	5	4	5	5	42	86
Jasper Lynch, Lakewood—
Out	5	4	5	5	6	6	3	6	4	44
In	4	5	5	5	5	5	6	5	5	45	89

In the afternoon Compton was beaten by Douglas by 4 up and 3 to play. The latter won his match handily in the morning, beating J. B. Naething by 5 up and 3 to play. In a practice round on the previous day Douglas played the course in 75 strokes.

H. M. Forrest was one of the surprises of the day. He had a twenty-hole encounter with the New Jersey champion, Archibald Graham, before vanquishing the latter, while in his other match he defeated the Essex County champion, Howard Colby, by 2 up and 1 to play.

EAST JERSEY GOLFERS PLAY.

Competition for the golf championship of the East Jersey Golf League began yesterday on the Baltusrol Club links, near Short Hills. Two match play rounds were finished, and the survivors, who will meet this morning in the semi-final round, are P. C. Pulver, Newark A. C., and P. C. Poirier, Elizabeth, while the other pair will be J. C. Cory, Forest Hill, and Howard Giffin, East Orange.

The competitors were limited to sixteen, representing the seven clubs in the association, and four of these did not care to appear, one of them, C. S. Sherman, being a competitor for the third cup at Lakewood.

The closest match of the series was between E. E. Moody and J. E. Denton, the former, who is the Newark Athletic Club golf Captain, winning on the twenty-first hole. In the afternoon Moody was beaten by his clubmate, P. C. Pulver, who has just won the Newark golf championship. The defeat of the Hillside champion, A. W. Glenny, who is a member of the Columbia team, was a decided surprise. P. C. Poirier of Elizabeth beat him by 2 up. The results of the two rounds were:

First Round.—P. C. Pulver, Newark A. C., beat S. H. Plum, 2d; Madison, 3 up and 2 to play; E. E. Moody, Newark A. C., beat J. E. Denton, Madison, 1 up, (21 holes;) P. C. Poirier, Elizabeth, beat J. TOY PISTOL CAUSES LOCKJAW.

Boy in Pennsylvania Succumbs to Self-Inflicted Wound.

READING, Penn., Nov. 30.—One week ago George H. Miller, the ten-year-old son of J. Alexander Miller, accidentally shot himself in the right leg with a toy pistol. The wound appeared to be slight and healed rapidly.

Yesterday, however, symptoms of lockjaw set in. He died while being removed to a hospital in the ambulance last night.

SAN FRANCISCO'S DISASTER.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 30.—Four persons injured in the disaster that befel the crowd of men and boys watching the football game yesterday from the roof of the glass works, died this morning, making the total number of dead seventeen. Several more of the injured will die.

Among those thought to be injured fatally is Fred F. Lilly, whose father is connected with the firm of A. C. Richards & Co., boot and shoe dealers, at 59 and 61 Reade Street. Along with his brother Henry he came here last Summer. He was employed in a printing establishment.

POLICEMAN BAUMEISTER DEAD.

Succumbs to the Shot Wound Inflicted by Man He Arrested.

Policeman William Baumeister, who was shot by Frank Brienza, an Italian, in One Hundred and Twelfth Street, near Second Avenue, Thanksgiving night, died in Harlem Hospital yesterday afternoon.

As soon as the policeman's death was announced Brienza and Biafeno, with whom he was fighting, and the men arrested as witnesses, were arraigned in Harlem Police Court, and Magistrate Mott remanded them to the Coroner, who sent Brienza to the Tombs to await the inquest, and the others to the House of Detention.

Disarming "Little Italy's" Denizens.

The police of the East One Hundred and Fourth Street Station last night descended upon the inhabitants of "Little Italy," in the vicinity of First Avenue and One Hundred and Fourteenth Street, with instructions to arrest all Italians found carrying loaded revolvers. This action was taken because of the shooting of Policeman Baumeister. George Lend of 2,211 First Avenue was found in One Hundred and Fourteenth Street with a loaded revolver in his possession.

ISTHMIAN CANAL AND AMERICA.

M. Hutin Calls Upon Secretary Hay In Regard to the Panama Route.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—M. Hutin, President of the Panama Canal Company, called upon Secretary Hay to-day and had a long talk with him touching the prospects of the Panama Canal as affected by the probable legislation at the approaching Congress.

The Panama Company has as yet made no official tender of the property to the State Department. It has, however, presented to the Isthmian Canal Commission a full statement of the affairs of the company and the condition upon which it might be willing to pass control of its property to the United States Government in the event that the Panama route should be chosen. The commission will include M. Hutin's communication in its report, so that Congress will have before it material for exercising a choice of its own as between the Nicaraguan and the Panama routes.

The Canal Commission is making a strenuous effort to finish its preliminary report, which, according to promise, was to be delivered to the President to-day. It is now said that the document will be sent to Congress as an accompaniment of the President's message, and that meanwhile it will probably not be made public.

It is evidently the intention of the Administration to press canal legislation upon Congress earnestly and speedily from the very beginning of the session. It is expected that before final action can be had in the Senate upon the pending House bill providing for the construction of the Nicaragua Canal, the executive branch of the Government will have succeeded in removing certain obstacles which now lie in the course of the pending Hay-Pauncefote treaty, and if this latter convention should be ratified the Administration influence will be cast in favor of the pending bill.

There have been several conferences of late between Secretary Hay on one side and Señors Correa and Calvo, the Ministers for Nicaragua and Costa Rica, respectively, and it is believed that by the anticipated action upon the Hay-Pauncefote treaty the bases have already been laid for the treaties with the two isthmian republics which would be necessary to give effect to the Canal bill and to secure for the United States the exclusive right for the canal construction.

Armor Plate Contract Signed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The contract with the Carnegie Company for furnishing a large quantity of armor plate under the agreement recently announced was concluded and signed to-day, and it is expected that the Bethlehem contract for similar armor will be signed to-morrow.

Syndicate Sells Fifth Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street Corner.

New Hotel Projected at Fifth Avenue and 52d Street—Active Dealing in Apartment Houses and Lots.

The northwest corner of Fifth Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street, a plot 60 by 100, part of the Stewart mansion site, has been resold by the Barney-Sheldon syndicate. Mr. Barney would say nothing yesterday regarding the identity of the buyer or the price paid for the property. The syndicate has held the plot at $650,000, and the figure in the present sale is undoubtedly in that neighborhood.

The plot of five lots at the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Fifty-second Street, the only part of the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum block remaining in the hands of the Barney-Sheldon syndicate, is now under an option, and interested parties said yesterday that there is good reason to expect that the sale of it will be completed early next week. The prospective buyer is said to be a well-known hotelowner, who will erect on the site a hotel and apartment structure eighteen stories in height.

R. Pehlemann & Son have sold for Louise Schwegler, to an investor, for $200,000, the seven-story apartment house, known as the Tecumtha, at 210 and 221 West Thirty-fourth Street, 50 by 98.9.

McVickar & Co. have sold for Thomas J. McGuire, to an investor, for about $175,000, the New Windsor, a seven-story brick and stone apartment house at 294 Central Park West, 50.4 by 90 by 100.

Hellner & Wolf have bought the plot 50 by 100, at the southwest corner of Central Park West and One Hundred and Seventh Street, together with adjoining lot on the street, 25 by 100. The property will probably be resold to a builder for improvement with an apartment house.

John H. Berry has sold to H. C. Demorest, for about $125,000, the plot 100 by 200, running through from St. Nicholas Place to Edgecombe Avenue, 225 feet north of One Hundred and Fiftieth Street. There are two three-story dwellings on the St. Nicholas Place side of the property.

George R. Read has sold for Eugene Rothschild, for about $75,000, the four-story stone dwelling 11 East Eighty-third Street, 21 by 102.2. The purchaser will occupy the house after altering it extensively.

G. C. & F. T. Barry have sold for Mrs. Schmitz, to Dr. Patrick W. Cremin, the four-story dwelling 858 Lexington Avenue.

It is reported that William E. Finn has bought the old buildings on the north side of Eleventh Street, about 200 feet east of Fifth Avenue, on a plot 47 by 103.3.

W. P. Mangam has sold for Rosenzweig & Klingenstein, to a Mr. Magliola, the three-story brownstone-front dwelling 125 West One Hundred and Twenty-first Street, 20.10 by 75 by 100.

Herbert R. Snyder has sold for Ehrenreich Brothers, to a client, the five-story double apartment house 119 West One Hundred and Fifteenth Street.

Kahn & Baumann, in conjunction with F. William Sohns, have sold for Charles M. Rosenthal, for about $30,000, the five-story three-family flat 12 East One Hundred and Eighteenth Street, 25 by 87 by 100. The buyer gives in part payment four lots at Bedford Park, valued at $10,000.

Charles Griffith Moses & Brother have sold for S. Moses the five-story flat 514 West One Hundred and Sixtieth Street, 25 by 88 by 99.11.

Mandelbaum & Lewine have bought from the Chatfield estate the two-story building at the southwest corner of Pearl Street and City Hall Place, 21.11 by 96.4; also, from the Haag estate, the four-story front and rear tenements 80 and 82 Allen Street, 50 by 87.6.

Jackson & Stern have bought the four-story building 206 East Seventh Street, 25 by 94.

Title passed yesterday in the trade between the Washington Life Insurance Company and C. W. Hall, involving the Morse Building, at the northeast corner of Beekman and Nassau Streets, and the Hamilton Storage Warehouse, at the northeast corner of Park Avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street. The Morse Building figured in the deal at $650,000 and the uptown parcel at $625,000. Mr. Hall gives back to the Washington Life Insurance Company a purchase-money bond on the Morse Building for $500,000.

The Peoria & Pekin Terminal is a fully equipped steam railway, adapted to carrying pasengers over the same road-bed by electricity. The Company owns its right of way between the two cities, as well as valuable terminals, all of which are covered under the mortgage. The road connects with the following railways, with many of whom it has lately entered into traffic contracts:

Chicago, Burlington & Quincy.	Evansville & Terre Haute.
Rock Island & Peoria.	Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis.
St. Louis, Peoria & Northern.	Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific.
Iowa Central.	Toledo, Peoria & Western.
Chicago & Alton.	Peoria, Decatur & Evansville.
Lake Erie & Western.	Big Four.
Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe.

A large volume of terminal business exists between these established lines, which the Peoria & Pekin Terminal Railway has the facilities to perform economically and advantageously to all concerned.

Property to the value of rising $1,100,000, covered by the present mortgage of $600,000, is verified by Arthur Hodges, Civil Engineer, whose Report in full will be furnished on application.

Legality of bond issue approved by Messrs. Storey, Thorndike & Palmer, copy of whose opinion we are prepared to furnish.

tory. Hamilton reports general business fair, although wet weather has interfered with retail trade in Winter goods. Wholesale trade at Montreal is more active with the close of navigation, but distribution is fair for the season, and good snow roads help trade in the interior, while payments are generally good. Prospects are bright for an early settlement of the shoe manufacturers' difficulty at Quebec, and trade is generally fair for the season. Trade conditions are less satisfactory at Vancouver, and there is a noticeable decrease in the volume of retail business in some lines, while collections are slow. Victoria reports wholesale trade only fairly satisfactory, with collections medium.

A WALL STREET CANARD.

A report was current in Wall Street yesterday that a brokerage firm whose name was given as J. & F. Bentley and who were said to be members of the Consolidated Exchange, had announced that as a result of the peculations of a confidential clerk of the name of Adolph Wasserman the firm was short in its accounts about $45,000, but hoped, nevertheless, to avoid a suspension. Wasserman, the story stated, had disappeared.

President Wagner of the Consolidated Exchange pronounced the report a fake pure and simple. He declared that there was no such firm in the Exchange. At 71 Broadway, where the story located the firm, it was learned that no firm of the name of Bentley was in the building.

NEW COPARTNERSHIP FORMED.

It was announced yesterday that Henry L. Wardwell and Edward L. Adams have formed a copartnership under the name of Wardwell & Adams, with offices at 16 Beaver Street. Both were formerly members of the firm of McIntyre & Wardwell.

NEW SECURITIES LISTED.

The Committee on Unlisted Securities of the Stock Exchange have admitted to quotation the United States Trust Company certificates of interest for Chicago and Alton Railroad Company 3 per cent. refunding mortgage bonds of 1949.

PACIFIC MAIL CONTRACT.

In reference to the report that on the expiration next month of the contract between the Panama Railroad Company and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, the contract will not be renewed, but that the Panama Company will charter steamships of its own to ply between Panama and San Francisco, Vice President Gates of Southern Pacific says:

"There really is nothing new to say in the matter. It is a fact that Pacific Mail's contract with the Panama Company expires in a few weeks, and that there are negotiations looking to its renewal. It may be that it will be renewed either in the present or in a modified form, or it may be that it will not be renewed at all. That is about all that can be said at present. So far as the report of the Panama Company building or chartering steamships of its own, I know nothing. It must not be forgotten, however, that we have plenty of steamships of our own, and are at present building two new ones, and that we would not necessarily be as seriously affected as some people seem to think, by a failure to renew the contract."

On the Stock Exchange yesterday, Pacific Mail stock declined 3⅝ points on trading in 2,000 shares.

SMELTING WAR REPORTS.

Mr. Sewell Doubts Statement that Big Concern Is Being Organized.

Wall Street was more or less interested in the report from Denver yesterday that a new smelting and refining company is being formed, and will build three smelters, to cost $1,000,000 each, at Denver, Salt Lake City, and in Mexico. Diligent inquiry, however, failed to throw any further light on the subject than that contained in the dispatch.

Vice President Barton Sewell of the American Smelting Company—the so-called "trust" which the reported new company is understood to be making ready to fight—discussing the matter, said:

"We do not believe there is anything whatever in the story. The fact that no names are given is of itself suggestive of the 'fakishness' of the report. I may say that we have a number of refineries in the districts mentioned—two in Denver, two in Pueblo, and two in Utah, with a third building there, to cost $1,000,000.

"In relation to the negotiations for the control of the Guggenheim plants, they are continuing, but there is nothing new to say. We have a meeting shortly to discuss the whole matter—about the middle of December.

"I may say, in passing, in relation to certain reports, that, so long as our company is borrowing money to any extent, we will not care to consider the payment of a dividend on the common stock. Our business is a large one, and we need a good deal of money to carry it on."

TRANSACTIONS IN NOVEMBER.

The volume of transactions in stocks on the New York Stock Exchange during November was second only to that of January, 1890, when the dealings were the heaviest of any month in the history of the New York Stock Exchange. If the daily average be taken, however, allowing for the fact that the month just ended had one less business day than that of January, 1890, the advantage in favor of the latter period is only a slight one.

While these figures are based on the actually reported transactions, it is generally agreed that by the stoppage of the reporting to a great extent of the transactions in odd lots and the inability of the reporters and telegraphers on the floor of the Stock Exchange to cope with the rush of business that followed as a result of President McKinley's re-election, the dealings in many thousands of shares were never made public. Had not this been the case the actually reported business of the past month would have gone beyond all records, as it certainly did when the unrecorded transactions are considered.

The daily average was practically a million shares, and a new record of actual dealings was created on the 12th, when 1,071,295 shares were dealt in. The business of the month was more than double that of the previous month, about 8,000,000 shares above that of the previously most active month of the year, and over 9,000,000 shares in excess of the corresponding month last year. The transactions in bonds were also the heaviest of the year, and considerably beyond that of any month since May, 1899.

The following tables give the transactions in both stocks and bonds for each month of this year, as compared with the corresponding month last year, as well as the total dealings from Jan. 1 of both years:

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Money is much wanted in connection with the month-end requirements, but, owing to the large borrowings recently from the Bank of England, the pressure is less than had been anticipated. Discounts are easier.

Business in most departments of the Stock Exchange to-day was dull, the tightness of the money market and the unsatisfactory war news restricting operations. The weakness shown by consols was attributed to sales for the purpose of applying the funds thus obtained to the purchase of exchequer bonds, although they are not required to be paid for until Dec. 7. Home rails were weak and heavier.

Americans opened quiet and above the last parity, pending the opening of the New York market, but they afterward improved and a fair speculative business was transacted. Grand Trunks were dull at first, but subsequently hardened. Kafirs began unsteady owing to the war news and the statement of the British High Commissioner in South Africa, Sir Alfred Milner, that refugees cannot return to their homes at present. Later Kafirs became firmer on the Paris settlement being satisfactory.

Money, 3½ per cent. Rate of discount in the open market for both short and three months' bills, 4 per cent.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Buenos Ayres, 132.20; Madrid, 33.75; Lisbon, 37.50; Rome, 5.57½.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Nov. 30.—Prices on the Bourse to-day opened firm, except Kafirs, which were dull on unsatisfactory Transvaal advices. Turks were in great favor, and Spanish 4s advanced. Spanish rails were easier. At the close prices were dull on some realizations. Contangoes were light.

Three per cent. rentes, 101f 17½c for the account. Exchange on London, 25f 10½c for checks.

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—International securities were firm on the Boerse to-day and Americans and locals were generally firm, although mines and banks fluctuated.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 44 pfennigs for checks. Discount rates: Short bills, 4½ per cent.; three months' bills, per cent.

MADRID, Nov. 30.—The gold quotation to-day was 33.65.

IMPORTS OF DRY GOODS.

The imports of dry goods at the Port of New York for the week were valued at $1,849,517, against $1,748,881 last week and $1,972,446 last year. The value of dry goods marketed was $1,633,236, against $1,820,404 last week and $2,114,078 last year.

Firm of Carr & Peters Dissolved.

In obedience to an order issued by the Governors of the Stock Exchange, the brokerage firm of Carr & Peters, at 18 Wall Street, was yesterday dissolved. It was succeeded by Peters & Van Dusen, Frank H. Van Dusen, Daniel S. Peters was a clerk in a well-known Stock Exchange house during the bull market of 1898-9. He made a sum of money variously estimated at from $75,000 to $200,000, and, buying a seat on the Exchange in April of 1899, formed the firm of Bruce & Peters. His firm dissolved last Summer, when Mr. Peters took as partner Mr. Carr.

Movements of Currency.

The United States Sub-Treasury yesterday transferred $200,000 in currency to Chicago, $150,000 to New Orleans, and $100,000 to St. Louis. The sum of $9,000 was paid in New York exchanges for gold deposited at San Francisco, and $15,691.42 for gold deposited at the Seattle Assay Office. The bond payments amounted to $24,451.06.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

The resumption of business yesterday in the market for outside securities brought no general increase in activity, and the day was a relatively quiet one on the curb. Prices were somewhat irregular, buying movements and profit taking ones alternately causing advances and declines. The copper stocks were less prominent than they were a short while since, and to a certain extent their former position was assumed by the industrials, several of which were quite active.

***

AMERICAN WOOLEN was one of the most active of the industrials, and although it was somewhat weak during the early part of the day, it recovered the decline and closed strong at the previous day's price. Nearly all the trading was around the top price. The preferred stock has not shared the recent activity of the common, and the price in this issue has suffered somewhat, being offered as low as 78 yesterday.

***

CONSOLIDATED EQUIPMENT was actively traded in between 15¼ and 14¼. It sold up at the opening and again crossed 15, but the supply of stock at this price seemed quite large, and the quotation was forced down to 14¼. The stock closed with a loss of three-quarters of a point.

***

AMERICAN BRIDGE, though not very actively traded in, sold up to 43⅝, and closed with a net gain of one-quarter of a point, at 43¼ bid. The preferred stock sold at 92½ and closed unchanged at 92 bid. The demand, especially for the common stock, seemed quite large. Around 43 there were a number of large buying orders in the market.

***

GENERAL CARRIAGE was actively dealt in between 5⅜ and 6. A net gain of one-eighth of a point was made on reported transactions in about 3,000 or 4,000 shares.

***

STANDARD OIL was traded in to the extent of about 175 shares, and rose from 750 to 762, closing at 760 bid, a net gain of 13 points. For some time past a new record in this stock has been established almost daily. Yesterday's high price was 14 points above the best price of last Wednesday.

***

COPPER STOCKS.—Trading in the copper shares was relatively quiet. British Columbia sold up to 20½, but closed unchanged at 20¼ bid. Union Copper sold up to 5½, and made a net gain of one-quarter of a point, closing at 5¼ bid. Arlington Copper sold at 6½ and 6¾.

***

INTERNATIONAL POWER preferred was offered down from 70 to 55, without calling out a bid. International Power common, which is traded in on the board, sold within 4 or 5 points of the figure at which the preferred stock was offered.

***

ELECTRO GAS sold from 195 down to 180 on light transactions. At the close it was said to be offered at 190.

***

Closing quotations yesterday, compared with those of Wednesday, were as follows:

HITCH IN TAX REDUCTION BILL.

Caucus of Republican Members May Be Called Next Week.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30. — Chairman Payne of the Ways and Means Committee issued notices to-day recalling the previous notice of a full committee meeting to-morrow to consider the bill for the reduction of the war revenue. It was given out that this was done because Gen. Grosvenor and Mr. Tawney were absent, attending the funeral of Senator Davis, and that Mr. Steele would not be here, leaving the Republicans short of a majority in the committee.

Mr. Tawney did not go to Minnesota, however, and it was learned this afternoon that Gen. Grosvenor will arrive in Washington to-morrow. The real reason that the committee will not meet to-morrow, it is stated, is because further information is desired as to the views of Republican members generally in reference to this bill.

Such features of the measure prepared by the Republican members as have become known, together with omissions which the committee has made in the proposed reductions, have caused considerable opposition, and it is probable that a conference or caucus of the Republican members will be held before a final decision is reached. The greatest opposition that has developed comes from the brewing interests. Representatives from districts where there is a great deal of beer manufactured are making serious protests against the action of the committee in not reducing the tax on beer.

There are some other interests also which are making protests, and Republican members of the House have telegraphed their friends on the Ways and Means Committee that they think the proposed bill should be changed. The fact that the majority in the present House is only sixteen warns the Republican managers that a bill must be supported by practically the entire Republican membership in order to pass. If Gen. Grosvenor arrives to-morrow, it is possible that the Republican members now in the city may make a request for a caucus to be held early next week.

TESTIMONIAL TO MR. BERGNER.

Frederick Bergner, well known as a musician and teacher, one of New York's pioneer instructors on the 'cello and an original director of the Philharmonic Society, completed fifty years of labor in this city on Nov. 23, and a company of his friends and pupils gathered at the residence of Mrs. Isaac N. Seligman, 36 West Fifty-fourth Street, to congratulate him upon the occasion.

A surprise had been prepared for the man they had come to honor in the shape of a handsomely embossed and appropriately engraved silver loving cup, and he was greatly moved when it was presented. He also received as tokens of the day a check for a substantial amount and a set of richly engrossed resolutions, which were signed by those present and by others who hold him in high esteem. In the course of his career as a virtuoso Mr. Bergner has won a high place in the regard of the music-loving public, and his name is closely linked with those of Matzka, Theodore Thomas, and Joseph Rosenthal.

Among those present, and contributing to the testimonial, were Mrs. S. Loeb, Mrs. Eleanor Butler Sanders, Mrs. Isaac N. Seligman, President F. S. Hyde of the Philharmonic, Harry Havemeyer, J. Loeb, Mr. Henry, Elken Naumberg, Maurice Sternberger, Alfred Seligman, and Howard Henry.

FIGHTING THE SMALLPOX

Health Board Not Afraid Disease Will Spread.

Only Two Cases Developed Yesterday —City Physicians Vaccinated Hundreds on West Side.

Not until the rattle of many ambulances had thoroughly frightened the inhabitants of "All Nations' Block," in West Sixty-ninth Street, did they want to be vaccinated. All day on Thursday victims of smallpox were being taken away from the neighborhood to the Willard Parker Hospital, to be borne thence to the seclusion of North Brother Island, but up to yesterday morning, when a force of physicians entered the infested district at the command of the President of the Health Board, the people who were in danger would not submit to having their arms scraped without loud wails and even positive resistance. When they were at last aroused, however, there was a race to see who could undergo the torments first. Before the day was over fully 300 in that one block had been vaccinated.

Two new cases developed during the day. The victims were Harry Rion, aged twenty-five, and Nellie Cypher, sixty years old, of 212 West Sixty-ninth Street. Both of them were taken to the Willard Parker Hospital, at the foot of East Sixteenth Street, and later to the island of quarantine. The officials of the Health Department had expected to find more patients, and they still say that they will probably have many additional ones before the plague is entirely eradicated, although no general spreading of the disease is anticipated.

Some say that a negro minstrel, who is among the patients, brought the germs of smallpox from Pittsburg; others, that the cause of the outbreak was Albert Sanders, a colored man of 440 West Forty-fifth Street. The latter was found to be suffering from the disease in advanced stages two days ago, and it was just after he was taken into custody that the twenty-one cases were found a mile further up town.

Public School No. 94 is at the corner of Amsterdam Avenue and Sixty-ninth Street. On Monday physicians will go through the place, and vaccinate all who were not treated at the last tour of inspection in June. The doctors will also visit every other public school on the upper west side. Every person, young or old, who lives within two blocks of a place where the disease has been found will be vaccinated, the work being done just as fast as the department can attend to it. Roughly estimated, more than 1,500 have already had their arms scraped within the last two or three days.

"We started in early this morning," said one of the doctors who was detailed to vaccinate the people of the Sixty-ninth Street district yesterday, "and worked steadily all day. I myself fixed up as many as eighty, and I had looked after about the same number on each of the two preceding days. When we first began the task on Wednesday there was a big kick. But to-day we had things all our own way. Everybody was looking for us when we got to the district. They were well scared up.

"In West Sixty-ninth Street there were five or six of us. Approximately we can each vaccinate eighty persons a day. Some more physicians were down in Fortieth Street and thereabout, but the department gave most or its attention to the up-town section, thinking that the most dangerous at present. We have to take things as they come. We can't do it all at once."

Dr. Alonzo Blauvelt, Chief Inspector of the Board of Health, has the smallpox question immediately in charge, while Commissioner Murphy exercises a general direction over the doings of the different physicians. Dr. Blauvelt said yesterday:

"We have the disease well in hand, and none need fear its general spread. There will likely be more cases in the thickly settled sections, whence the patients have thus far come, but within a week or two we shall have no more of it anywhere. As we find each case we shall take care that everybody for a block or two around the house in which it was discovered is vaccinated.

"We have these smallpox scares periodically. The disease breaks loose in some densely populated community, and then we have to work hard to keep it from spreading. But to control it is no very difficult proposition nowadays. It just takes a little time. The people of the infected quarters suffer a good deal, but we always manage to keep the trouble confined to the localities in which it starts."

Policemen patrolled the streets through the dangerous sections all day yesterday, and, although anybody could pass through whenever they wished, none of the inmates of the houses was allowed to move out his belongings. Nor were people who did not live in the houses permitted to enter them. Both sides of Sixty-ninth Street, between West End and Amsterdam Avenues, have been canvassed by the vaccinating corps, but some of the inhabitants, being away from home, have not yet been located.

Since then there have been several times when almost as many cases were discovered as during the last two days, but there were in no instance as many as twenty-nine—that is the number of those now confined on North Brother Island. But this outbreak does not even approach in seriousness that which raged on Cherry Hill. Dr. Blauvelt, when asked to make a comparison between the two scares, laughed at the idea of likening them at all.

"This one," he said, "will not amount to anything as far as the general public is concerned. But, of course, it will be hard on the poor people of those restricted communities in which the disease has caught its victims."

BOY GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

Owen Squire, nineteen yearsfold, on trial for manslaughter before Judge Harrison S. Moore in the Queens County Court, Long Island City, for the shooting of Elizabeth C. Heigelsell, a fourteen-year-old girl, was found guilty yesterday afternoon, the jury adding to its verdict a recommendation for mercy. The shooting occurred on election night in the ice-cream saloon of Philip Kothenberg, at Beach Street and Jamaica Avenue, Richmond Hill. Squire and his brother had been out hunting, and on their return entered the ice-cream saloon. Squire had a Flobert rifle, which was discharged, either accidentally or intentionally, the bullet taking effect in the girl's right temple and causing instant death. At the trial Squire said that he was sitting at a table with the rifle resting on the floor, and that he raised it to place it across his knees when it was accidentally discharged. He thought he must have hit the hammer against the table and in that way exploded the cartridge.

Squire ran away after the shooting, but was soon arrested. Two girls who were in the room at the time testified that there had been a scuffle over some flowers.

The jury retired after the case had been concluded his charge at 9:50 A. M., and not return a verdict until 4:30 in the afternoon. When the verdict, "We find the prisoner guilty as charged in the indictment," was rendered there were many residents of Richmond Hill, Young Squire's home, in the courtroom, including several ministers who had interested themselves in his behalf. Squire has always borne a good reputation.

LAFF GETS HEAVY SENTENCE.

Judge Shows No Mercy to Long Island City Burglar.

Michael Laff, who was convicted in the Queens County Court, Long Island City, of burglary in the first degree, was sentenced yesterday afternoon by Judge Harrison S. Moore to eighteen years and six months imprisonment at hard labor in Sing Sing Prison. Laff was convicted of having robbed the house of Samuel Gibbons, on Nott Avenue, Long Island City. He and his wife, Mary E. Laff, were captured with a part of the plunder in their possession. The woman pleaded guilty to receiving stolen goods.

In pronouncing sentence Judge Moore said: "Laff, you had been out of prison only six months when you committed a crime similar to that for which you had been serving a term of imprisonment. On the previous occasion, when you were about to be sentenced, the District Attorney interceded for you and secured a light sentence, but you have shown yourself undeserving of mercy."

LEGAL NOTES.

WARRANTY WHICH SURVIVES.—ACCEPTANCE OF GOODS.—Judgment was entered in favor of Arthur Schroeder, two years ago, on the verdict of a jury in his suit in the Supreme Court in this city, for damages from the Coatsville Rolling Mill Company and others, for breach of an alleged agreement in the purchase of steel squares, in April, 1894. The plaintiff had previously purchased from the defendant company fifty tons of steel, cut in squares. The order directed that the steel "must be soft, for stamping," and that ordinary Bessemer would answer the purpose. Thea an order was sent for additional steel squares, with the statement that "quality wants to be soft, the same as heretofore." A number of these squares, when submitted to the stamping process, broke. The judgment for the plaintiff was affirmed by the First Appellate Division, in an opinion by Justice Ingraham. It was held that the words "soft for stamping," used by way of description in the contract, constituted a warranty as to the character of the steel, surviving its acceptance, where it was impossible to determine by inspection the exact quality of steel of this character, and the only way in which it could be ascertained whether or not the steel would stand stamping, was by subjecting it to that process. Presiding Justice Van Brunt and Justice O'Brien dissented, holding that there was no proof that the plates sold were not of "ordinary Bessemer" steel, and "soft, for stamping," of the same quality as those ordered. The Court of Appeals recently affirmed the decision of the Appellate Division.

THE USE OF RAILROAD MILEAGE BOOKS.—James W. Corcoran, in October, 1895, purchased in Syracuse a mileage ticket of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company, paying $20. At Pulaski, two days later, the train he intended to take being about to start on his arrival, and the ticket agent being away, out at the train, Mr. Corcoran got on board without having secured a ticket. When asked for his ticket by the conductor he tendered him the mileage book. The conductor declined to take the mileage, and Corcoran was expelled from the train by the railroad men in charge. In Mr. Corcoran's suit to recover the fifty-dollar penalty given by the statute, a judgment rendered in his favor was affirmed by the Appellate Division of the Fourth Department, Justice Ward giving the opinion and Presiding Justice Hardin and Justice Follett dissenting. The Court held that the refusal of the conductor to accept the mileage book when tendered in place of a ticket made the company liable for the penalty imposed by the law of 1835, requiring the issue of such books, where the action was brought within one year after the cause of action accrued. The Court held also that, as the statute absolutely required the use of such books upon the terms fixed by it, there was no consideration for the extemporaneous agreement contained in the mileage book, and signed by the passenger, providing that, when presented to the conductor, the mileage book must be accompanied by a passage ticket received in exchange for an adequate number of coupons, which had been previously detached from the book by the company's ticket agent; nor could the corporation invoke in its defense the amending act of 1896, subsequently passed, which provided for an exchange at the office of such mileage coupons for a passage ticket.

THE CIVIL DAMAGE ACT CONSTRUED.—The interpretation of the Civil Damage act of 1873 by the Appellate Division of the Fourth Department, two years ago, in an action in which Sarah Lawson recovered judgment against William Eggleston, is now unanimously upheld by the Court of Appeals. Mrs. Lawson sued to recover damages sustained by her in consequence of a gunshot wound inflicted upon her by her husband, Edward Lawson, while he was intoxicated, and by his suicide, committed a few moments later, while still intoxicated. Mr. Eggleston, a hotel keeper, who was charged with having sold liquor which wholly or in part produced the intoxication, denied the sale and the intoxication of the deceased at the time, and claimed that, if he did sell to the deceased, his sales were too remote in time to have contributed to the result. The Appellate Division ordered an affirmance, on the opinion of Justice Lambert, rendered on their trial, and that decision is sustained by the Court of Appeals. Proof was given that, when sober, the deceased had been on friendly terms with his family, and had contributed to their support; but that he had been on a debauch for more than a week prior to the shooting, and during that time had been intoxicated. Immediately before the shooting he had been delirious from the use of liquor, and had visited Eggleston's hotel several times daily during the debauch. The Court held that these things, when taken in connection with the fact that there was found on the decedent's person, after the shooting, a bottle partly filled with liquor, similar to the one which he took with him from defendant's bar, (after drinking a glass of liquor there,) on the morning of the day preceding the shooting, was sufficient to sustain the verdict. The defendant was liable, the Court said, if the liquor which he sold, although not the sole cause of the intoxication, contributed to it, and the injury inflicted by the deceased upon his wife and himself was occasioned by the loss of moral responsibility resulting from intoxication.

Ours is a regulation straight back overcoat, with cape that goes on or off according to the thermometer—two overcoats in one.

Sturdy blue frieze, sizes 3 to 8, $6 75.

Same as the Jack-Tar reefer, but the Jack-Tar costs $18; we change the name and change the price to $12.

For boys of 10 to 16 nothing better than the iron like kersey, and, unlike iron, it never grows rusty. It combines those opposites, toughness and dressiness.

REGISTRY CLERK CONFESSES.

Edmund J. Bell Held for Stealing $2,000 from a Letter.

Edmund J. Bell, a boy of nineteen years, living at 508 West One Hundred and Sixty-second Street, was arraigned late yesterday afternoon before United States Commissioner Alexander, charged with having robbed the mails of $2,000. The young man made a complete confession. He said:

"Well, you couldn't make out a much plainer case against me. There's no use in my saying anything at all. I'll waive examination." Commissioner Alexander then held the prisoner in bail of $2,500 for trial.

Bell had been employed in the registry division of the General Post Office for seven months. He was formerly a clerk in an Amsterdam Avenue grocery store. The theft was a very recent one, and $1,597 of the money was recovered. On Nov. 24 last the Eufaula National Bank of Eufaula, Ala., sent a registered letter containing $2,000 in ten, twenty, and fifty dollar bills to the Western National Bank, at Pine and Nassau Streets, this city. The letter reached here on Nov. 27, and passed through Bell's hands. He opened it and took the money. Bell at that time was under suspicion of having stolen, early in November, $201 from a registered letter sent from Hatfield, Mass., and was being watched very closely. On Wednesday night he was seen by Inspector Jacobs opening wine in the Haymarket, at Sixth Avenue and West Thirtieth Street.

Bell worked on the night shift, going to work at midnight and getting off duty at 8 o'clock in the morning. Yesterday morning when he left the Post Office he was followed by Inspector Jacobs. He first went to a house on the west side in Harlem, where he called on a young woman, and remained there for two hours. He gave her a diamond ring worth about $50. He was then followed home, and was arrested later.

The house was searched for the remainder of the money, and the $1,597 recovered was found in an old closet in the basement of the house. He wore when arrested a diamond and turquoise scarfpin, worth about $75, that he gave up, and the Inspectors say they will get the ring he gave to the young woman he called on yesterday morning. He also bought a diamond ring and gave it to a young woman in the Tenderloin.

In his new volume, "The Rulers of the South," Mr. Marion Crawford attempts to bring out the somewhat interesting fact that many of the virtues and qualities which churchmen unreservedly consider the direct results of Christian teachings were in reality developed from a pagan ideal, imperfect though it may have been. People who insist upon the radical difference between the spirit of paganism and that of Christianity and hold that the doctrines of Christ had essentially changed human nature will find considerable interest in the way that Mr. Crawford manages his subject, interwoven as it is in the formative influences of Sicily, Calabria, and Malta.

Sir Lewis Morris will bring out, through Thomas Y. Crowell & Co., Dec. 15, simultaneously with its publication in England, a volume of poems containing a number of lyrics, one of them being a study in elegiac verse and another, "A Georgian Romance," reproduced from a report of the Russian criminal tribunals of last Spring. There are also several odes, notably one on the liberation of Crete and the triumph of Cuba, and an "Apologia" which is supposed to attract attention. The American publication will be made from the sheets of the English edition.

The Macmillan Company will publish "The Religion of Democracy," by the Rev. Charles Ferguson. The late John J. Ingalls, ex-Senator from Kansas, who happened to possess a privately printed copy of the book, said: "It is the voice of one crying in the wilderness," and again, "It moved me in parts like the utterances of Emerson and Carlyle." Here is a passage from it: "It is not so bad to be a materialist. If you keep to the facts you will not get away from God. The moral laws are not separate from matter. They are wrought into the fibre of the material world. You cannot dig anywhere without striking them." Incidentally, the author attempts to show how far the co-called democracy of to-day has wandered from the idea of pure democracy.

Mr. Paul Laurence Dunbar has written for the December Century a ballad called "The Haunted Oak." It is a poem with a purpose, that purpose being to arraign the civilization which permits the lynching on suspicion of members of the poet's race. The mere narrative is the story of "a talking oak," which is haunted by the spirit of an innocent negro who was hanged from one of its branches, since which the limb has never put forth a leaf.

Mr. Norman Heathcote's story of "St. Kilda," which will shortly be published by Longmans, Green & Co., is not, as has been supposed by many, a novel, the scene of which is laid in "that little islet of the west." It is the story of a ramble by a man who is curiously near to nature, and who gives his impressions by pen, pencil, and camera. For nine months of the year St. Kilda is practically unapproachable by reason of the Atlantic storms, and Mr. Heathcote has spent as much of one Summer as was available there, and has given a volume of impressions of nature's works and forces which have a decidedly new interest.

A third edition of the second volume of "Goethe's Letters from Frau von Stein," edited by Julius Wahle, librarian of the Goethe and Schiller archives at Weimar, will contain an edition in the shape of sixty-four unpublished letters written by Frau von Stein to Goethe. We do not know whether an English translation has been made of these letters, even in part. Certainly there is a public which would welcome them eagerly in this country, a more discriminating public, perhaps, than that appealed to by the love letters of Victor Hugo and of Bismarck.

We learn that McClure, Phillips & Co. will bring out Seumas MacManus's first long novel dealing with Irish life and character. It will appear serially in McClure's Magazine during the coming Winter, and will be issued in book form in the Spring. It is entitled "Lad o' the O'Shiels." Evidently the title has recently been changed, for when last we heard from Mr. MacManus he was intending to call his book "A Lord of the O'Fiels." It is just possible that he has written two novels during the long Donegal Summer. Eight years ago Mr. MacManus was a schoolmaster in Donegal, writing for the local papers tales and ballads, which showed a fine artistic perception. He was conscious that his matter had genuine merit, but failing to obtain the recognition he thought due him in Ireland and despising it from England, two years ago he stuffed a bundle of manuscript into his traveling bag and came to America, unheralded, unknown, and inconspicuous. Here he besieged the leading editors and publishers of various cities, showing them his literary wares and expatiating on their merits with fine Irish candor. So successful was he that when Spring came and he started for the other side, there was scarcely a magazine or periodical in this country that had not purchased a story from him or contracted for the writing of one. His career since then has from time to time been chronicled in these columns.

The principal feature of "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam," which is being published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, is perhaps the biographical introduction or memoir by Prof. E. D. Ross. The professor presents a study of the lifetime of the poet, and gives in interesting form a narrative based upon the data which have thus far been collected from Oriental sources concerning Omar himself. There is also a consideration of the other writings of the poet. The text of the Rubaiyat is the well-known FitzGerald translation, which is commented on, quatrain by quatrain, by H. M. Batson.

A rather important book for persons interested in current history as Great Britain is striving to make it in South Africa is "The War Office, the Army, and the Empire," by H. O. Arnold-Forster, M. P., which Cassell & Co. will shortly publish. Lord Rosebery has contributed a preface to the book. Mr. Arnold-Forster has made a study of the British Army for nearly twenty years, has written and spoken much on the subject, and in this book, which is actually a review of the British military situation in 1900, gives the public the result of his mature consideration.

E. P. Dutton & Co. will publish in January Julia Cartwright's (Mrs. Ady) new book on "The Painters of Florence," from the thirteenth to the sixteenth century, with many interesting illustrations. The Florentine school of painting is in many respects the [illegible]

ROMAN IMPERIAL ART.

Reviewed for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW
By Russell Sturgis.

The quarto volume whose title is given below contains an avowed attempt to show the leading from a certain art of the Roman world, strictly Roman in character and developed after the reign of Augustus was fully established, into that which we call Christian art. It was written for a prefatory article to a work of unquestioned Christian origin, as will be stated below. In spite of this, however, the theory of the development of Christian art from a Roman imperial rather than from a Greek, or, as the fashion is to call it, a Hellenistic, source, has hardly been carried out with equal strength and completeness from the beginning to the end. It is the early part of the great story that is told. The later chapters are lacking, the latest pagan Roman remains have indeed been studied with as much pains as that bestowed upon the pieces of the Augustan age, but the earliest Christian works which should be compared with them are hardly as yet in a state to be so compared. They may never become sufficiently intelligible to be so compared. The earliest monuments of Christian art are so very inadequate in the fine art sense; they are so much the product of poor and ignorant men, hiding themselves from the light of day, so much the effort of minds more concerned with other things than with the full expression of artistic ideas, that it is in the moment immediately after the establishment of Christianity and not in the moment next preceding that event that the hiatus seems to occur. It is on this account and not from any reluctance or any negligence on Prof. Wickhoff's part that the first word to be said about this book is, even as the first impression is upon reading it, that it is a treatise on Roman imperial art rather than an essay on the first beginnings of its ecclesiastical successor.

So much premised, it is to be said that to the present writer no study could be quite as interesting as the one now under consideration. The study of the earliest Christian memorials is less a matter of fine art than a matter of sociology or of psychology to one approaching the study of fine art from the absolutely artistic side. To one studying as a decorative designed, as a lover of the fine art of all epochs, as one who would willingly compare the fine art of all epochs each with other in order that the eternal truths of fine art may be discriminated from those which are temporary and unimportant—to any such student it will have been a cause of infinite regret that the monuments of the Roman world have been so terribly destroyed, and a matter of vexation that so few archaeologists have been found willing to abandon Greek art for the evidently magnificent work of the first three centuries A. D. The work of the archaeologists has to accompany and to a certain extent precede the study by the artistic student. The man who is busy settling dates has less time to consider artistic qualities, and is only too apt to be at once incompetent in a measure and hasty in the proportion of his comparative incompetence. The apparent willingness of archaeologists to use as an aid to their documentary evidence the internal evidence given by artistic style ought not to blind us to the equally evident tendency on their part to reach very unfounded conclusions by this method, so full of dangers for them. To say that the ideal archaeologist would be equally strong in his artistic appreciation and in his mastery of documentary evidence—to say that he should be the scientific investigator, doubled by the artistic critic—is to say that no ideal investigator will see the light during the present decade. Such a man as has been imagined here is not in existence, nor, apparently, in preparation. Nowhere is artistic knowledge to be had without very many years of almost exclusive devotion to artistic study; and nowhere is historical knowledge, based upon the study of epigraphy, coins, and the remains of buildings to be had without years of devotion to that department without much reference to artistical charm. Therefore, the artistical student should be very willing to accept the conclusions of the archaeological student when these latter are found to be agreed upon by excellent authorities and to be in accordance with his own, the artist's feelings of what must certainly be.

Now, with regard to the art of the first four centuries of a truly Roman world, of the century from the birth of Julius Caesar to the death of Diocletian, the archaeologists are not agreed; there has been almost no one among them to assert the dignity of Roman art. There has been almost no one to pay that same attention to Roman monuments considered as works of fine art which so many have bestowed on the works of early and late Grecian art, on Assyrian, Egyptian, or Babylonian art. It seems to have been assumed by the archaeologists that Roman fine art known to us mainly in sculpture was hardly worthy of separate study. The architectural monuments have been in a very limited, perfunctory, and inadequate way made the subject of archaeological study; their plans have been recognized to be important and the probable uses of all the parts of an amphitheatre or of a great thermal establishment have been admitted to be of interest, but little has been done to weigh the claims to separate consideration of the sculpture which once adorned those mighty structures. Meanwhile the artistical student has been impatient at this state of things, and when, as in the present case, an author comes forward who is prepared to claim for Roman art all that the artist has felt is due to it, let the work of that archaeologist be welcomed heartily. If, as happens in the present case, the archaeologist shows a very delicate sense of artistical distinctions, then, indeed, his book may be hailed as something worthy to close the century and to crown a half century of serious archaeological research.

There appears in Vienna a momentous annual publication, the great "Jahrbuch der kunsthistorischen Sammlungen des österreichschen Kaiserhauses." This has been in existence for a score of years, and the greater number of its massive volumes are heavy, thick small folios; books like exaggerated octavos, volumes full of plates, but without plates of very great size. To diversify this otherwise too great uniformity, however, there appears from time to time a volume of larger page, and one of these appearing in 1895 told the story of a wonderfully illustrated manuscript which existed in the Imperial Library at Vienna. The volume in question is a Book of Genesis, with illustrations at the foot of the page and occupying nearly half of it, the picture itself being in every case about 4 by 8 inches, but generally without accurate boundaries—treated, in fact, in a more or less vignettelike fashion. In the great Austrian volume the pages of this book are given in photography, full size, but two or three of them are given in color, with evidently the greatest possible care to render the exact tints of the original. These plates are accompanied by a treatise concerning the original Greek text and concerning the handwriting on the document, by the Baron von Hartel; also by an essay on the style of the Genesis pictures, and a historical account of the origin of this style by Prof. Wickhoff. It is that last-named essay, filling ninety-nine folio pages in the original, which has been translated in the present case and offered to the English-reading public in 190 quarto pages. It will be observed that the claim of the author to have treated the question of Christian art and its origin is made in a twofold shape, first in the German original and second in the title and preface of the English book. Mrs. Strong, however, in the "Translator's Note," which she appends to the author's English preface, and which is dated July, 1900, takes the view of the book which the present writer has taken. To her the book which she has translated into English is a treatise on Roman imperial art, and little else than that.

The recent establishment of the facts concerning the Ara Pacis, the study of reliefs of the time of Trajan presented on the arch at Beneventum and of those on the Arch of Constantine, to which they had been removed; the discovery and examination of the sarcophagi of Sidon, the arranging in the Museum of the Diocletian Baths at Rome of so many sculptured fragments, the recognition on all hands of the importance to the study of Greek art of the later reliefs, whether called Hellenic or Roman; the admission on all hands of the universality of the custom of painting sculpture, and more especially relief sculpture, both in the primitive time of Greece and in the mature time of the Roman imperial style; the beginning of the careful comparison of Etruscan with Greek processes in art—all these things have opened to the thoughtful and fearless writer of the years immediately preceding 1895 a way which ten years earlier would not have been clear before him. To-day some slight addition might be made to the book, and that addition would be in the way of confirming Prof. Wickhoff's conclusions. That is to say, his conclusions as to the independent importance of Roman imperial art would be confirmed. As to the exact significance of his conclusions with regard to the naturalistic tendency of Egyptian and other very early art, the typical, or, to use another phrase, the idealistic tendency of Greek art coming in as a bold interruption of the regular, carefully made development of that art which bases itself firmly upon a study of nature, the return under the Roman dominion to naturalistic art again with the pure Greek art set up as a splendid and admirable antiquity, which now the world was to stop studying except as a beautiful abandoned scheme—as to the full significance of this interesting theory there will be as many opinions as there are students to consider it. But as to the possibility of maintaining this theory in its full force, as set forth by the pages before us, there can be no question, nor any as to the convincing way in which the evidence for its general accuracy is set forth.

The illustrations in the English book are drawn mostly from the Vienna publication, but there are some additional pictures, and these are not the least important. The strength of the book considered as an illustrated publication is in the reproduction of those admirable Roman bas-reliefs, which, first, considered as decorative objects, and, second, as sculpture of human subject treated in a way different from anything ever practiced by the Greeks, must have enchained the attention of every one who has studied the contents of the Lateran Museum for forty years, or the new museum of the Thermae for ten years past. Even without this experience of Roman art, the finds in the way of silverware, the originals of which are accessible in museums and in reproductions which are not uncommon, will have excited the interest and the curiosity of many as to what is certainly not Greek art, and can hardly be called Hellenic art. This is the proposition which our author maintains with all the vigor of his polemic, with all the subtlety of his very refined artistic perception, and with all the conviction of one who has worked long enough over a new discovery in criticism to believe in it heartily and with reason. The illustrations of the Pompeiian wall decoration and of similar work at Prima Porta and in the City of Rome itself serve to illustrate the pages which explain the proposed establishment of the transition between pagan and early Christian art, and those are intended to complete the study, but, as has been said above, there is this terrible difficulty that the early productions of Christian art are so very inadequate artistically speaking—they represent so great a lapse in the art-producing mind of the Mediterranean world that this part of the inquiry is, so far as this book is concerned, really of less importance than are the admirable chapters devoted to Roman art considered as a separate existence, apart from and only in a distant way influenced by that art of the Grecian people, which in the Roman time was already as old and belonged to a social epoch as different as the later Gothic style from the art and from the habits of thought of the nineteenth century.

RUSSELL STURGIS.

Mrs. Crowninshield's New Story.*

If the sole purpose of a novel be to interest its readers, "The Archbishop and the Lady" may be regarded as attaining the end of fiction. Having been once begun, it is not easily laid aside until a certain uncommonly mysterious mystery is solved, and the characters are all disposed of, comfortably or otherwise.

But we demand of a novel of modern life that it shall represent that life somewhat as we know it, and that the characters shall think and act with a due regard to the probabilities.

Herein "The Archbishop and the Lady" signally fails. With some effort we become acquainted with a complex group of relatives and a cosmopolitan house party assembled at the estate of "L'Abbaye de Bret" in France, only to find each and all, with the possible exception of the child Gartha, signally disappointing as human beings, several of them quite too preposterous to be considered at all. After long waiting, with curiosity continually heightened, the revelation of the mystery unveils crime as impossible as the wildest dream of an Arabian tale. The motive and the reward, compared with the enormity of the guilt, and the status and antecedents of the criminals, as well as compared with the nature of their crime, combine to make this sensational side of the story a figment of a fairy tale imagination, not to be measured by any standards of human nature.

Turning to the more normal personages and conditions of the book, we find the heroine, with her inexplicable marriages and her peculiar attitude toward life, a very unaccountable young woman. The Archbishop is scarcely more than a lay figure, and does not deserve his prominent place in the title. "Mamasha" is as queer as her paragon of a daughter, and Miss Ada Spencer, who acts as chorus, is certainly a very unpleasant guest. We agree with the Archbishop and Mamasha that the hero is much too meddlesome, and we can see no reason at all why the heroine should yield him her heart. The jolly, much hedecked Irishman, Hilary Valery, and his quaint, spoiled little daughter, Gartha, are the best characters of the story. Both are rather overdrawn, to be sure, but a real humanity is in them. Gartha's polyglot jargon, including the argot of the gamin and American slang, with her literal translations, "a blow of the eye," &c., is very amusing, and at the same time very natural.

We cannot commend "The Archbishop and the Lady" as in anywise a criticism of life, but, although it might have been condensed with advantage to its interest, it has sufficient movement and color to give entertainment to vacant hours, and the entertainment will have the great and the rare merit of being absolutely innocent.

Perhaps the best summing up of the book may be made in Mr. Lincoln's words: "If anybody likes this sort of thing this is the sort of thing he will like."

THE McKEE SALE.

Completion of Part I.—A Total of $15,000.

The first part of the Thomas J. McKee collection sale came to a close Friday night, Nov. 23, in the auction rooms of John Anderson, Jr., in West Thirtieth Street, the 1,282 lots having fetched over $15,000. The interest taken in the sale was marked, and the offering of the various rarities for public competition brought together buyers from many parts of the United States. The private buyers were numerous, but some of the public libraries secured many of the best books, the Boston Public Library and Brown University Library adding largely to their collections. The most important book sold on the second day was Wolcott's "Poetical Meditations," New London, 1725, the first volume of verse printed in Connecticut, a fine copy in brown morocco, by Bedford, which went to Dodd, Mead & Co., for $300. The same copy brought only $13 at the fourth Brinley sale.

Among other items of interest offered on the second day were Sargeant's "Loyalist Poetry of the American Revolution," extended to two volumes by the insertion of 200 rare plates, which went to George D. Smith for $200; R. H. Stoddard's "Footprints," New York, 1849, his first book, one of six copies now in existence, for which George H. Richmond paid $66; Bayard Taylor's "Ximena," Philadelphia, 1844, the poet's own copy, with notes, which was sold to George D. Smith for $68, and Whittier's "Moll Pitcher," Boston, 1832, morocco, gilt top, other edges uncut, which was purchased on "order" for $160. A totally uncut copy fetched $190 at a recent Philadelphia sale.

The American plays sold extremely well, the highest price being the $120 paid by Dodd, Mead & Co. for the fine copy of Royall Tyler's "Contrast," Philadelphia, 1790. Mrs. Mercy Warren's "Group," Boston, 1775, went to George D. Smith for $47, while the same buyer secured for $25 the rare New York reprint of the same year, Mrs. Warren's "Blockheads; or, The Affrighted Officers," 1776, very rare, going to Mr. Maier for $36. It is evident that the attention of collectors has at last been drawn to American plays—a department hitherto neglected save by a few enthusiasts.

Paul Leicester Ford's Pretty Story.*

The tale deals with an heiress, a newsboy, and a doctor. Mr. Ford usually knows whereof he writes, and we confess to a limited acquaintance with both heiresses and newsboys. Still, it seems to us that Miss Durant and Swot are just a bit overdrawn. Even an heiress is not quite so lavish of five and ten dollar bills, and even a newsboy is not quite such a marvel of precocity at eight years. Moreover, Mr. Ford is so much afraid of idealizing his gamin that he makes Swot abnormally unlovable and unresponsive. His argot is very real, however, and he becomes an important personage in an unworldly romance.

"Wanted—A Matchmaker" will be a dainty and suggestive gift from an enamored youth too shy to tell his love to the lady of his dreams, especially if the youth be a struggling young doctor and the lady be set apart from him by reason of a golden barrier.

From the New York Tribune.

"There is practically no authoritative book obtainable by most people on the subject of Oriental Rugs. There are, indeed, one or two magnificent foreign works, but they are of such great cost that they are beyond the reach of the public. For this reason there is a promise of great interest attaching to a book by John Kimberly Mumford. It is the work of one who has made the subject a special study—one so conscientious, indeed, that after his manuscript had been accepted by the publishers he felt it necessary to make a special journey to Constantinople, Asia Minor and over the mountains to Persia to verify certain passages in it. He treats of the history of the rug, of the peoples who weave it, of its materials, dyes, designs and the characteristics of the different nations engaged in making it, and gives information enough to enable the amateur to gain a scientific knowledge of the qualities of antique rugs.

"One of the most remarkable features of the book are the illustrations; those in color are made by a new and secret process carried on in Detroit, of all places in the world. The owners of the process took up, after some of the best New York color printers had laid it down in disappointment, the task of reproducing the color, texture and quality of old Oriental rugs. The results, judging from advance prints, will be of quite unusual beauty. There are other illustrations in black and white showing patterns of rugs and reproducing photographs of various Oriental rug weavers at work. For his color prints the author has had the use of rare examples from the collections of William C. Whitney, James W. Ellsworth, Martin Erdman, Dr. O. E. Hill and others."

The Illustrations

The illustrations to this book are remarkable. An entirely new process has been employed in the production of the colored illustrations, and it is believed that the great difficulty of properly reproducing Oriental rugs has been overcome most satisfactorily. Six months' time was spent in the preparation of the colored plates alone.

TSCHAIKOWSKY.

Although a number of years have passed since the death of this great Russian musician—years, too, in which his music has been growing more and more familiar to the concert-loving public—yet no adequate biography has appeared, either in Russia or in any other portion of the world. The authorized life and letters has been eagerly expected, but is still delayed; Rosa Newmarch, the author of the present biographical sketch, fancying such delay may be due to the difficulty of selecting the most characteristic from this mass of correspondence, which is said to include thousands of letters.

In the meantime, Mme. Newmarch has published in The Musician a series of papers based upon a little volume of personal reminiscences published in Moscow in 1897 by Prof. Kashkin of that city, a friend and colleague of Tschaikowsky. In 1898 the collected writings of Tschaikowsky appeared, edited by a Russian critic, Laroche, from which Mme. Newmarch made selections, which were published in magazine form, later on translating a diary of Tschaikowsky's tour abroad in 1888, now for the first time presented in English. These three subjects, with two additional chapters, dealing with Tschaikowsky's attitude toward Russian music, make up the contents of the present volume. Mme. Newmarch adds:

> No one can be more conscious than myself of its shortcomings and of the patchy nature of its construction. If it has not been altogether a case of making bricks without straw, at least the straw has been scattered on the four winds of journalism and has had to be gathered up in the byways of Russian musical literature.

At a time when the inclusion of a composition by Tschaikowsky gives a music lover almost the same feeling of satisfaction that the sight of the name of Bach, Beethoven, Brahms, or even Schubert or Schumann in a concert programme does, the present book will be found of the greatest interest. The sketch of Tschaikowsky included, so far as all the outward happenings of his life are concerned, is sufficiently ample. In a compass of 110 small pages, a well-written and very interesting résumé of this composer's life and work is presented, which cannot fail to give us a clearer insight into and pleasure in Tschaikowsky's music. Rather more than fifty pages are devoted to the latter in his rôle of musical critic, while the remaining sixty contain Mme. Newmarch's translation from the Russian of Tschaikowsky's tour abroad in 1888; which is followed by a chronological list of his compositions, in turn succeeded by a page from the score of one of his overtures.

Peter Ilich Tschaikowsky was born on May 7, 1840, at Votinsk, where his father was employed as a mining engineer, from which place the family removed to St. Petersburg, where the father became Director of the Technological Institute. The boy was educated at the School of Jurisprudence, obtaining a position in the Ministry of Justice; his musical career at first being entirely that of an amateur, his unusual talent winning him much popularity in society.

It is certain that Tschaikowsky had at first no thought of music as a profession. Indeed, it would have been considered quite beneath the dignity of the official circles in which he moved. A chance conversation, however, with a cousin, also an amateur, revealed the fact that the latter possessed superior knowledge, which so far piqued Tschaikowsky that he joined classes in connection with his musical society, and became so engrossed in the subject that in 1861 he wrote his sister that he was studying with much success and might adopt music as a profession but for the fact that he feared his lack of purpose. "I have power and capacity, but I am ailing with your malady, which is called 'fragmentariness,' and if I do not become enthusiastic over a thing I am easily done for."

For some little time this indecision continued. Tschaikowsky entered the Conservatoire, but kept on with his official duties until Anton Rubinstein, who often attended the harmony classes and examined the work of the pupils, was struck by the mingled ability and carelessness of the former's exercises. Rubinstein called him aside and talked to him with such a fascinating mixture of charm and severity that Tschaikowsky's indifference vanished forever and a musical career was finally determined upon. He at once resigned his official appointment, gave up society, and devoted himself closely to the study of music.

From this time on Tschaikowsky's strength was as the strength of ten, accomplishing great results in a very short time. On leaving the Conservatoire he received a silver medal for his diploma work—a cantata for solo, chorus, and orchestra, founded on Schiller's Ode to Joy. In 1863 he began studying orchestration in Rubinstein's class, who exercised the greatest influence upon his pupil, encouraging him to write only for the modern orchestra, at the same time maintaining due reverence for the work of the old classical masters, insisting upon Tschaikowsky's cultivating the habit of both thinking and writing in the language of the modern orchestra from the beginning of his studies. So that his early results became so satisfactory that in 1865 musical critic in Russia, pointed him out as "the future star of Russian music."

At this time Nicholas Rubinstein was directing harmony classes in Moscow, in connection with a branch of the Russian Musical Society, and on the opening of the Moscow Conservatoire, a special teacher of harmony was engaged, but, soon after resigning, Tschaikowsky was selected to fill his place, entering upon his duties in January, 1866.

From this time on may be dated the beginning of Tschaikowsky's fame. Introduced at once into the best musical society of the country, sharing Rubinstein's flat and frequenting the theatres and the Artists' Club, his work as a composer began with the concert overture in C minor, written at the suggestion of Nicholas Rubinstein, who, however, was not favorably impressed with it.

This little biographical sketch will be found to give interesting accounts of the evolution of Tschaikowsky's various compositions, including his operas. "The Voievoda," "The Snow Queen," "The Oprichnik," "Eugene Oniegiv," and "The Maid of Orleans," which are so much less well known in America than his chamber music and symphonies. A careful reading of this work, in fact, gives us a good framework, into which further knowledge of both the man Tschaikowsky and his compositions can be fitted.

The portion of the book devoted to Tschaikowsky's position as a musical critic is also of much interest, as is the "Diary" which brings us closer to the man than does the rest of the book.

Perhaps, however, the most valuable portion of the whole volume is contained in the first few pages, wherein Prof. Kashkin sums up a Russian's estimate of a Russian musician and composer, first, however, discrediting this statement so often made that Tschaikowsky's music is typically Russian. The Russian national characteristic is, he says, "a sober, gray-tinted, resigned pessimism," not Tschaikowsky's "enthusiastic and romantic despair." The latter "echoes Chateaubriand and Byron, not Gogol and Tourgeniev," adding:

> Among the leaders of the new school of music in Russia Tchaikovsky occupies an exceptional place as one who, while strongly attracted by the forward movements of his time, was restrained by his special training from acknowledging complete allegiance to the Nationalist party. His character was essentially Russian, and his tendencies the liberating tendencies of the generation to which he belonged; but his musical education was cosmopolitan, and the teachers whom he reverenced leaned toward tradition and authority. He was not, like Glinka, or, in a less degree, like Rimsky-Korsakov, consecrated to the service of nationality. In his heart a follower of Liszt, in his intellectual conscience an adherent of classicism, Tchaikovsky composed under the sway of two conflicting influences, neither of which was strong enough to efface for long his own intense personality. Thus throughout his work we find a lack of unity which baffles dogmatic criticism, and compels us to seek in the character of the man, rather than in his theories, the interpretation of all he has expressed in music. This susceptibility to the antagonistic currents of thought and feeling which surrounds him is not altogether a fault in Tchaikovsky. On the contrary, it has lent to his music qualities of pliancy, variety, and eclecticism which have proved sources of charm and attraction.

The World's Songs.*

In the two volumes before us S. J. Adair Fitz-Gerald tells the story of the famous and popular songs of the world. The book is the result of some fifteen years' "agreeable labor in the fields of lyric literature and song lore." The folk songs of many countries are discussed, but apparently the author has limited himself to those whose airs in some form or other are familiar to persons who take an interest in such things. The author quotes freely from the many authorities in foreign languages as well as in English, and there is a sharp strain of criticism running through the work which weighs everything from the point of view of an Englishman who is also a musician of cosmopolitan ideals.

The chronological scheme is not followed, the author explaining in his introduction that "in treating of the history and origin of these famous songs, not only of our own country, but of other lands, it has seemed inevitable that I should begin with 'Home, Sweet Home,' and end with the much-discussed 'God Save the King.' It also seems imperative that I should refer to that frequently quoted Fletcher of Saltoun and his well-worn aphorism about making the ballads of a country."

Among the most fascinating pages—for the entire work is written with a fine quality of literary expression—is the description of the origin of "La Marseillaise," in which the author carefully considers the various legends on the subject and gives proper credit to Rouget de Lisle, confirmed by undoubted documentary proof.

But in speaking of the so-called American National songs Mr. Fitz-Gerald does not write with that knowledge of his subject which characterizes most of his work. "The eccentric 'Yankee Doodle,'" which he seriously discusses as a National song is not, nor was it ever, so regarded by any intelligent American. Its air and ridiculous refrain are known to be rubbish in this country as they are in England, and it is solely the Englishman who calls it "the American National song." As to "The Star-Spangled Banner" which is played when the flag goes up on a United States warship, when there is any band to play it, we are quite well aware that the air is not original, but as it has been adopted by the Government and the people as the National anthem, it seems quite likely that many persons will not agree with Mr. Fitz-Gerald's criticism when he says that up to the present time America "has not succeeded in inventing any National anthem worthy of her eminence and power."

One of the first feelings engendered by a glance over the beautiful folio edition of Knickerbocker's "History of New York," lately issued by R. H. Russell of this city, is that of regret that Washington Irving could not have seen this fine volume, in which every detail of its manufacture, its typography, the tone and quality of its paper, its admirably chosen head bands and tail pieces, its illustrations, and even its cover, blend into one harmonious whole.

The volume is indeed one of which all concerned in its making may well be proud. As we turn its pages, not a single detail presents itself which one could wish changed. The typography of the book is the work of the Merrymount Press, and is entirely worthy to be classed not only with Mr. Berkley Updike's best work, but also among the finest specimens of American printing and bookmaking in existence—a fact all the more remarkable when we remember that this is not an expensive, limited edition, wherein such perfection might naturally be expected, but a regular commercial issue of a New York publisher, and, considering the fineness of its workmanship, and the care lavished upon all its artistic details, remarkably cheap.

The paper is a soft yellowish tint is just sufficiently rough to be pleasing both to the eye and to the touch, and is well calculated to show the beauty of the light but dignified type, with its perfectly plain initial letters in various sizes. The running titles and chapter headings are set between two parallel lines, which adds greatly to the effectiveness of the page, as does also its arrangement, the open-face type being set close, with but very little use of leads. A perfect proportion of margin is also observed, the whole making one of the most attractive pages we can remember.

The title page in red and black is remarkably fine; no ornamentation being employed, its effectiveness aside from the use of two colors, being entirely due to the harmony and beauty of its type. Indeed, outside of its illustrations, the book shows very little use of ornament; the head bands and tailpieces used, however, entirely suiting the character of the volume and of its typography. Some of these decorations are sufficiently old fashioned to suggest sampler bands and the ornaments our grandmothers put in to fill the spaces between alphabets and verses. It is a curious fact that in these days of overdecoration, the present volume contains but one ornamental initial—the least successful in the book—that beginning the address "To the Public," which is set in entirely different type from the remainder of the volume. Indeed, it is probable that only a man with a practical knowledge of typography could thoroughly appreciate the demands made upon Mr. Updike's resources by the variety and sizes of type employed in the production of this beautiful volume.

The book, from its very arrangement, has given Mr. Updike unusual chances to produce effective typographical results. The body of the tale is preceded by a "Table of Contents," a "List of Illustrations," the "Author's Apology," an "Account of the Author," "To the Public," and "Notices Which Appeared in the Newspapers Previous to the Publication of This Work," in addition to the numerous half titles all through the body of the book, all of which have been most cleverly taken advantage of, no two sections employing the same type.

The volume's full-page illustrations, eight in number, are the work of Maxfield Parrish, and are entirely in keeping with the Merrymount Press methods and with the spirit of the story. The plates, which are on smooth plate paper, have been admirably well reproduced, and add so much to the interest and beauty of the volume that their greatest drawback is the small number inserted. The frontispiece, "Orleffe the Dreamer"—"the great volume of smoke assumed a variety of marvelous forms, where, in dim obscurity, he saw shadowed out palaces and domes and lofty spires"—shows the river in the middle distance, and a background in which is clearly pictured a portion of lower New York, in which many of the buildings are clearly recognizable, and yet not at all photographic. Another plate shows St. Nicholas, who, judging from his expression and rapt gaze, seems to be vowed to the worship of "My Lady Nicotine." It is said that divers miracles were wrought by this saint's mighty pipe, "a whiff of which was a sovereign cure for indigestion." Best of all, however, is the inimitable Indian, glass in hand and face and lips puckered up in appreciation of the portion of its contents just tasted—old Dutch houses and windmills showing in the background—illustrating "They introduced among them rum, gin, and brandy, and the other comforts of life." All Mr. Parrish's pictures are delightful, both in themselves and as illustrations of the text; suiting Washington Irving's tale particularly well from the fact that, while both

*A HISTORY OF NEW YORK FROM THE BEGINNING OF THE WORLD TO THE END OF THE DUTCH DYNASTY. Containing, Among Many Surprising and Curious Matters, the Unutterable Ponderings of Walter the Doubter, the Disastrous Projects of William the Testy, and the Chivalric Achievements of Peter the Headstrong—the three Dutch Governors of New Amsterdam. Being the only Authentic History of the Times that Ever Hath Been or Ever Will be Published. By Diedrich Knickerbocker. (Dutch Motto.) The whole embellished by eight pictures from the hand of Maxfield Parrish, Esq. New York: Published by R. H. Russell. Anno Domini. MCM. Folio 15x11 inches, xxxi+299 pp. $3.75.

The cover of this beautiful volume is particularly charming, its binding being in gray boards, with gray canvas back, gold lettered, showing on its front cover a yellowish gold panel, bearing a most attractive Parrish design, two old Dutch burghers, pipes in hand, intensely interested in the telling of a good story. As a whole, the volume may be said to closely approach perfection in all its many details, upon which result publisher, printer, and illustrator are to be heartily congratulated, both as to the spirit in which their work was undertaken, and the successful manner in which it was carried into execution.

All lovers of this delightful tale, no matter in how many editions they may already possess it, will feel that this beautiful volume must be added to their shelves, as the most satisfactory form in which the story has yet appeared, as well as from a desire to possess a beautiful specimen of fine bookmaking.

From Mr. Williamson's study of "Perugino" the student of art who is interested in technical problems as well as in the life of the master and his psychological attitude toward his work will get much that is suggestive. Suggestiveness is all that the author aspires to, but he has made his own experiments and has arrived at his own opinions independently of the known authorities. He departs both from the statements of Crowe and Cavalcaselle concerning Perugino's change from tempera to oil painting and constant use of oil in his later work, and from Mr. Herbert Horne's decision that "all Perugino's pictures were painted in tempera on a gesso background." His general conclusion is that Perugino's medium was "always mainly tempera and was never what we know as oil painting," and this conclusion is based, he says, upon an examination of almost all of the master's works in Italy. He has repeated some of Dr. A. P. Laurie's experiments with certain fugitive colors and with certain oils and balsams with a view to ascertaining whether any of the oil varnishes securely locked up the colors against the changes produced by moisture. Verdigris and orpiment are notoriously fugitive colors, and yet "colors which it is quite clear Perugino used," and these colors he has been able securely to protect with the balsams of the larch and of the silver fir, overcoming the stickiness of the medium with a few drops of pure linseed oil and a morsel of wax.

The general public is not accustomed to think of Perugino as a portrait painter, and it is particularly fortunate that the two beautiful Vallombrosa portraits of the Abbot Baldassarre and Don Biagio Milanesi should have been included among the illustrations. To these portraits Mr. Williamson gives unrestrained admiration: "They are painted with the lightest of touch and with extraordinarily little color," he says. "The tone is that of old yellow parchment, and each picture contains only the upturned head and a few inches of the brown monastic robe; but the effect is perfect. The marvelous feature, however, of each portrait is its absolute truth and its perfection of modeling. There is no accessory; there is no cap or hood or costume; there is only a plain brown background; but the effect is that of living, breathing life. The very lightest touches reveal the bones of the face and the corresponding hollows of the tightly-drawn skin. The bare, shaven head, with its narrow tonsure, allowed no opportunity for careless drawing. There was no hair with its rich shimmering color to hide inaccuracies of line or to cover up faults in execution; but the master needed none of these excuses. The task was a stern one, uncompromising in its severity; but it is nobly executed, and two delineations of character are presented."

Another very interesting example of Perugino's work is described in the tenth chapter. It is an illuminated page in a volume now belonging to Mr. Henry Yates Thompsen, the romantic story of which is told in full. To read it is both informing and stimulating.

Concerning Sodoma, the Contessa Priuli-Bon has brought together a good deal of material that the reader could not get at without expense of time and trouble. Owning that Vasari disliked Sodoma, and gave a biased version of the painter's character, she is nevertheless unable to substitute any radically different picture of the man who went his free and easy way through life, painting men and women of exquisite purity and beauty; but she declares that no one who has studied his work with an unprejudiced mind can believe that he was altogether superficial and without reverence. The main part of the book is given up to discussions and descriptions of his work, which is represented by admirable reproductions. Despite Sodoma's deficiency in the art of composition, the earnestness and charm of his individual figures entitle him to a place higher than he usually receives in art histories, and the peculiarly appealing quality of his pictures is extremely well adapted to reproduction in black and white.

We hear that McClure, Phillips & Co.'s publication in book form of Dr. John Watson's "Life of the Master" has been postponed until Spring, owing to the time required in reproduction of the color illustrations which are to accompany the text.

The Moving Finger Writes.

By GRACE DENIO LITCHFIELD, author of "In the Crucible." $1.25.

"In delineation of character, Miss Litchfield shows a master hand. She breathes life into the creations of her pen, and they stand out, boldly defined from the background of the story. 'The Moving Finger Writes' is psychological in its nature, yet the action does not suffer on that account, and mystery, tragedy, and love do not let interest lag for a moment. The book is one that will appeal chiefly to young women, whose dreams are not yet correlated with the facts of the actual world around them."—The Christian Register.

A History of the People of the Netherlands.

Now ready:

Previously issued:

Part I.—From the Earliest Times to the Beginning of the 15th Century

Part II.—The Gradual Centralization of Power, and the Burgundian Period.

"This is the standard history of the whole Netherlands, and the author may be congratulated on finding so excellent a translator. . . . She has saturated her mind with the thoughts and general sweep of the author's mind, and with that thorough mastery of the language which would enable her to give a perfect literal translation; she does what is far better. She makes a free, flowing, yet thoroughly representative version that accurately reproduces the spirit, the color, the vigor, and the charm of the original."—Literary World.

2 vols. By MYRTLE REED. 16mo, gilt tops, each $1.75. The 2 vols., in full flexible crimson morocco, in box, per set, $5.00.

"Miss Reed has repeated her first success. She has equalled, if not surpassed, the interest of her earlier letters. Here will be found the same delicate fancy, the same beautiful imagery, and the same musical phrases from well-known composers, introducing the several chapters, and giving the key to their various moods. Miss Reed has accomplished her purpose successfully in both series of the letters."—N. Y. Times Saturday Review.

"'Sons of the Morning' is natural and idyllic, abounding in outdoor enjoyments; the bustle of healthy natures, most of whom are so vital that they are unforgettable. It is hot 'word painting,' but Nature itself."—RICHARD HENRY STODDARD in The Mail and Express.

"One of the most consistently and thoroughly worked-out novels that have appeared for a long time past. It is one of the truest studies of human nature."—London Post.

"If I were to name the best novel I have read I should unhesitatingly put down 'Children of the Mist.' It has a touch of Hardy; it has a touch of Blackmore; and yet it is fresh and original and powerful."—EDWARD FULLER, Literary Editor of The Providence Journal.

WALTON'S ANGLER

Quite apart from its great bibliographical value, one's first feeling on taking up Mr. Arnold Wood's list of original editions and reprints of "The Complete Angler," from the first edition, in 1653, down to and including those of the year 1900, is one of unmitigated satisfaction in regard to its typography, paper, binding, illustrations, down to even the most unimportant detail of its making. This bibliography has been published in two editions, eighteen copies, Nos. 1 to 18, inclusive, on imperial Japan paper, and 102 copies, Nos. 19 to 120, inclusive, on hand-made Van Gelder paper.

The binding is extremely good, the back being of white vellum cloth, gold-lettered, while the sides are in green boards with white corners. The front cover contains the book's title in gold, in an emblematical gold scroll, which has been adapted from the title page vignette of the first four editions of "The Complete Angler," the same design being repeated in what corresponds to blind tooling on leather on the back cover—that is, the design, title included, is impressed thereon, but without the addition of gold leaf or other color.

The book contains as a frontispiece a superb portrait of Izaak Walton, 7½ by 5¾ inches in size, engraved on copper by Mr. Thomas Johnson for this book, which is printed on a soft, yellowish paper and laid down, each copy being signed by the artist. Mr. Johnson's work has been so successfully accomplished that all lovers of fine engraving will covet this book if only for the frontispiece alone. It is an entirely original production, having been made from a photograph taken for this purpose from the painting by Jacob Haysman, which hangs in the National Gallery, London. Mr. Johnson's portrait work in engraving is always fine, but the more one looks at this frontispiece the more he is inclined to rank it among his most successful undertakings.

The title page is equally successful, it being a beautifully designed and executed bit of copper plate engraving by Mr. Edwin Davis French, 5 by 7 inches in size, on the same yellowish paper as the frontispiece, and also laid down, the pages of the book, in small quarto form, being 8 by 10 inches in size. As is the case with all Mr. French's title pages and book plates, the lettering is remarkably effective, while all the fine detail work of the background, largely marine in this particular instance, is done as only Mr. C. W. Sherborn of London and Mr. French himself could hope to do it. With the possible exception of the title page for Mr. William Loring Andrews's "Trio of Eighteenth Century French Engravers in Miniature," published about a year ago, which was also by Mr. French, this is the finest title page we have ever seen.

The bibliography is illustrated by eighty-six photo-engraved reproductions of title pages of not only all the earliest editions of "The Complete Angler," but also of all subsequent editions containing particularly characteristic features. The first edition having been chosen as the maximum size, the title pages of larger editions have been reduced to this standard, smaller ones being shown in their actual sizes. In the descriptions of the various editions, it has been thought best to conform to some accepted standard of size, for which purpose the scale adopted by the Library Association of the United States has been followed.

The bibliography gives detailed collations, chronologically arranged, of every known edition of "The Complete Angler," including one in German, published at Hamburg in 1859, which is probably the only edition of this classic issued in a foreign language which can be considered as a specific edition, as well as the various issues and reprints, the whole being supplemented by an index of reprints, which must add greatly to the book's value for reference purposes.

The photo-engraved titles show at a glance the peculiarities of many editions, which differ in small details only, and thus enable one to verify an issue with very little trouble. The vignettes and other ornaments which appear on the title pages of some of the more celebrated editions of this work, such as the first four issues, the 1824 Chiswick edition, the beautiful Pickering edition of 1836, and many others, come out extremely well in the present reproductions, while the full bibliographical notes, showing all typographical peculiarities, the number, position, and kind of plate or text illustrations contained in the edition, as well as the names of artists and engravers illustrating each, will be found of the greatest value. There are also notes as to the various editions of the work, the purity of and changes in the text, as well as other notes showing changes in the ownership of the various plates, reissues of which, with a different imprint, might seem to be new editions.

The "Hand List" of editions of "The Complete Angler" issued by the Grolier Club in December, 1893, to accompany an exhibition commemorative of the three hundredth anniversary of the birth of Walton, has long been considered the best Walton bibliography in existence. A careful comparison of these two sets of collations shows many small discrepancies, as, for instance, the bibliographical descriptions of the first Bagster (seventh Hawkins) edition, 1808, differ as to the number of plates included, one giving fourteen, the other twenty. The Griggs edition, without date or place, a photographic reproduction of the first edition, by the well-known photo-lithographer, William Griggs, is given in the "Hand List" as of 1881, while in the present bibliography it is said to have appeared a year later. On Page 47 will be found what is probably a small typographical error, C. Whittingham's name being printed "Withingham."

The Hand List, besides editions of "The Complete Angler," contains bibliographical details as to the various editions of Walton's lives, Cottoniana, and varia not touched upon at all in the present bibliography; but the latter includes either reproductions of the title pages of or the necessary descriptive notes concerning thirty-three editions—many of which are reprints with variations in the title pages—not included in such Hand List, as well as full descriptions and reproductions of sixteen editions of this work which have appeared since the issue of the Hand List in 1893, which will show how much wider scope the book covers.

The typography of this delightful issue is the work of the De Vinne Press, the whole bibliography being so carefully made both as to its preparation and as to the artistic skill shown in all its mechanical details, that all concerned in its issue, including its author, Mr. Arnold Wood, well known as a collector of angling literature, the artists who have contributed to its embellishment, the printers, and the publishers, Messrs. Charles Scribner's Sons, are to be congratulated upon a fine piece of bookmaking.

The volume will make an irresistibly strong appeal to all lovers of bibliography, while, on the other hand, the general reader may find the contents of the book absolutely without interest. The few fortunate possessors of copies of this delightful bibliography will have the added pleasure—dear to the bibliophile's heart—of knowing that the book's very limited issue, an edition of 120 copies only, will of necessity limit its circulation to the favored few.

*A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF "THE COMPLETE ANGLER" OF IZAAK WALTON AND CHARLES COTTON. Being a Chronologically Arranged List of the Several Editions and Reprints from the First Edition, 1653, Until the Year 1900. By Arnold Wood. Illustrated by eighty-six photo-engraved reproductions of title pages. Engraved frontispiece and title. Pp. ii.-197. Index of Imprints, 201-204. List of Errata. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. 1900.

Napoleon III.*

This is the fifth volume in the series dealing with the Second Empire, and shows Louis Napoleon at the moment of his greatest power—the Italian war concluded, and the treaty of commerce between France and England signed. As a popular history calculated to give a fair impression of the principal events taking place in the period covered by it, and of their relative importance, it is as successful as its predecessors. Nor is M. de Saint-Amand too much a popular historian to give a personal and definite view. The character of Napoleon III., as he depicts it, is perhaps less alloyed by complex motives than it really was, but it is the Napoleon who has outlived his failures, to survive in the memories of many of the present generation of Frenchmen as a figure far from despicable, tinged, indeed, with nobility, and in certain respects the benefactor of France, if not "the Savior of Society." We see the Emperor something of a plotter, but more of a dreamer; wiser in conception than in execution, filled with humanitarian impulses, and yet swayed by vanity and ambition. M. de Saint-Amand indulges in passages descriptive of his more picturesque qualities with considerable zest. "Napoleon III. loved dramatic strokes," he says. "It pleased him to surprise his Ministers and take unexpected resolutions on his own initiative. He occupied the public mind with dissolving views, and was fond of bringing warlike ideas and peaceful ones successively on the scene. At the moment when the Congress was abandoned and a renewal of war was to be feared, he chose to reassure people by ignoring everything but the victories of commerce, industry, and agriculture."

This is the attitude of a poseur, and there was undoubtedly enough of the pose in the liking for championship of forlorn causes and the delight in large enterprises characterizing Napoleon's policy. Had he been an adviser instead of an executive, however; had he been contented to use his pen without using his sword in contradiction, he would probably have gained a more enviable reputation for statesmanship. His most valuable theories were adapted to times of peace. His free-trade policy was at once far-sighted and practical, and, while he did not carry out his flamboyant announcement "Italy free from the Alps to the Adriatic," he introduced the entering wedge of freedom by driving Austria out of Lombardy. The quality most lacking to his imperial mind was co-ordination; without that quality he could not hope to carry out one-tenth of his projects, but in 1860 he believed himself great enough to control the future of European nations, "and believed," says M. de Saint-Amand, "more than ever in his star."

A word should be said in praise of the translation of this volume of the series. It is unusually clear and direct in style, and, while it is not entirely free from the stiffness of close and conscientious interpretation, its tendency is to dignify M. de Saint-Amand's French, which offers peculiar difficulty to the translator.

A strange collection of weird tales by that writer of mystery, Richard Marsh, has just been published by the New Amsterdam Book Company, under the title of "The Seen and the Unseen."

Tuskegee and the Work Done There.

The most serious problem now confronting the South is that touching her negro population. When President Lincoln emancipated the slaves and gave them citizenship, it was the opinion of many statesmen and soteriologists that so unprepared were they for this great change, and so elated in becoming their own masters, that they would drift into vicious and shiftless habits, thus shortening their lives, and in the coorse of a few generations melting away much after the manner of the aborigines under the civilization of the whites. The reverse of this, however, proves to be the case. The fact is, that notwithstanding the grave responsibility so suddenly thrown upon this untutored, dependent class, they continued to increase, indeed in a greater ratio than the whites, and now number upward of 5,000,000; and in several of the States they exercise a controlling voice in their State and municipal legislatures—whether for good or evil is a question about which there are conflicting opinions. One thing, however, is certain, that during the reconstruction of the States in too many instances they became the tools of designing politicians and demagogues who used them to further their own selfish ends. To correct this evil, and to leaven this vast horde into the body politic, making them thrifty, self-sustaining, law-abiding citizens, and a strength to the State rather than weakness, may well occupy the best thought of statesmen and philanthropists.

While it cannot be denied that the condition of the negroes in the South has vastly improved since they have become their own masters, yet not in a ratio to their increase, and more strenuous efforts by the friends of the colored race should be made to teach them the dignity of labor and to advance them to a higher plane of moral and intellectual activity. We are led to these remarks by the perusal of a small volume which has come into our hands titled "Tuskegee, Its Story and Its Work," written by Max Benoett Thrasher, with an introduction by Booker T. Washington, the founder of the celebrated industrial institution at Tuskegee, Ala. This institution, and one at Hampton, begun under the care of the late Gen. Armstrong, are, we believe, the only institutions of importance engaged in this great work. From the most humble beginning, chiefly through the instrumentality and under the fostering care and guidance of Mr. Washington, aided largely by friends in the North, this institution at Tuskegee has met with marvelous success, and has become an important factor in solving this great problem. It would seem that the liberal establishing of just such institutions as this among the thickly populated colored regions of the South, aided by the State—which has the most direct interest in the well-being of the negro, would in the course of a few years so change their condition as to make them valued citizens and large contributors to the industrial prosperity of the country. To those interested in this subject Mr. Thrasher's little volume of "Tuskegee; Its Story and Its Work" will be found of great value. The first session of the institute was assembled on the Fourth of July, 1881, with thirty students in attendance. An old negro church was occupied by the school and an old shanty near the church was used as a recitation room. From this nucleus the work has steadily increased, and now the institute owns 2,480 acres of land, with a head of live stock. There are forty-six buildings, large and small, on the grounds, valued, with the land, at $350,000. Besides this it has $150,000 invested funds from bequests, gifts, &c., and $125,000, the estimated proceeds of 25,000 acres of land appropriated out of the public domain of Alabama by Congress. All this has been accomplished within twenty years, and chiefly through the indefatigable exertion of Mr. Booker T. Washington. In all the range of philanthropic effort we venture to say no grander and more successful results—results more commensurate with the work of teaching the negroes the dignity of labor, giving them the best possible opportunity for the development of their mental faculties, fostering habits of right thinking and right living, are to be found in any other field of charitable work.

Mr. Thrasher tells his story in a pleasant, modest manner, and the book should be carefully and thoughtfully read by every friend of the colored race in the North as well as in the South. J. W. H.

DR. EGGLESTON'S NEW HISTORY.

The Transit of Civilization.

FROM ENGLAND TO AMERICA IN THE SEVENTEENTH CENTURY.

By EDWARD EGGLESTON. A new volume in the author's History of Life in the United States. Uniform with the first volume, "The Beginners of a Nation." Small 8vo, cloth, $1.50.

In this unique volume the eminent historian pictures the literary, scientific, and other influences which were brought to this country from Europe in the early years of our history. He shows the religious ideas which the immigrants of the seventeenth century brought with them, and the modification of these ideas. Mother English, folk speech, folklore, and literature are presented with an unequalled richness of knowledge. The moral code and weights and measures of conduct are explained. The medical practice of that century in England and in its American developments has never been described as it is in this book. It is well within bounds to say that no such book on culture in the seventeenth century has ever appeared in England or America. While the book may be read independently, it follows "The Beginners of a Nation" as the second volume in Dr. Eggleston's series of "A History of Life in the United States."

The Beginners of a Nation.

A History of the Source and Rise of the Earliest English Settlements in America, with Special Reference to the Life and Character of the People. A volume in A History of Life in the United States. By EDWARD EGGLESTON. Small 8vo, cloth, uncut, with Maps, $1.50.

By his son, LEONARD HUXLEY. In two volumes. Illustrated. 8vo, cloth, $5.00 net.

THE NEW YORK HERALD: "Huxley's biography is a book that must endure, not only because of the interest of the subject, but because of the manner in which the work has been done. * * * The volumes which Mr. Leonard Huxley presents to the world form the most important addition made to biographical literature in this decade. His filial piety is as firm as that of another son of a great father, Hallam Tennyson. But he has not the same scruples of reserve. * * * Huxley's son has allowed us to see the red blood surging through his father's veins. He has suffered that noble figure to reveal itself in its entirety. We know him as he was."

William L. Alden.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—I presume as a matter of course that Mr. Conrad's "Lord Jim" has already appeared in America. I only hope that the mania for changing the titles of books republished in America has not led to the conversion of "Lord Jim" into "Senator Dick," or some other improved title. The absurdity of changing the title of "The Nigger of the Narcissus," a title that fitted the book to perfection, into the schoolgirl sentimentality of "Children of the Sea" has always exasperated me.

I wonder what the public will think of Mr. Conrad's new book. It is hardly a novel, for it lacks the essential form. In fact, it does not pretend to be anything of the sort. It is simply a story told by one man to a circle of friends—the story of a sailor who made a ruinous mistake. It is a psychological story, for it lays bare the heart of the man Jim, and shows what he thought and felt during the years of his expiation of his fault, and how he convinced himself that he had been in nowise to blame. But it is infinitely more than this. It gives the reader the salt breath of the sea wind—the warm caress of the tropical breeze. It takes him away from civilization and convention, and shows him the heart of things. It brings before him the littleness of life in comparison with the infinite and awful grandeur of Nature. "Lord Jim" enchants the reader. It makes a new man of him. He feels in his veins the beat of pulses stronger than those that civilization permits. He fills his lungs with air that stimulates him as the air he has hitherto breathed could not do. Mr. Conrad is a true magician, and he can do what no other magician of the pen can do.

"Lord Jim" is a great book, a wonderful book, a magnificent book. I fear to praise it as it deserves, for, if I could do it, I should be thought by most people to have fallen into the deepest mire of "gush." But I venture to say that no book like it has ever before been published in the English language. That does not, of course, mean that greater books have not been published. But "Lord Jim" stands alone. I can recall nothing that can properly be placed in comparison with it. It is the fruition of the blossom that we saw in "The Nigger of the Narcissus" and "The Outcast of the Islands," but admirable as those books were, Mr. Conrad has this time left them nearly out of sight.

Here, then, is a work of genius—of unique and superb genius. It has its faults. In it Mr. Conrad still clings to the mannerism of describing everything in three dimensions—that is to say, with three adjectives. But that, after all, is not a great fault, and it implies long, slow, and careful work on the part of the author. The book ought to place Mr. Conrad at the head of all English short story writers, with the solitary exception of Mr. Kipling. It is a phenomenon, almost as strange as the author himself—the man who spent a lifetime at sea, dealing with the roughest phases of life, and living almost wholly without books, and then suddenly showing himself to be one of the most striking writers known to English literature.

A book has recently appeared here written by a Miss "Hallie" Rives, who is understood to be an American young woman. It is earnestly to be hoped that the British public will not form its idea of American women on Miss Rives's description of them. Why women write books of the class to which "The Furnace of Earth" belongs, is strange. Have such writers no friends to restrain them, or no physicians to dose them with bromide of potassium, and bicarbonate of soda?

Those curious people who imagine that England seized upon Egypt to gratify a lust for territory should read "England, Egypt, and the Soudan," by the late Mr. H. D. Traill. It is a lucid exposition of the causes which led England against her will to assume the protectorate of Egypt, and it is also a very interesting history of French and Egyptian intrigue, and of English courage and determination to keep order. The great work that has been done in Egypt since the British occupation is calmly and convincingly set forth, and the man who can read it and still believe that England has no right to be in Egypt must be a new and improved variety of agnostic.

Mr. Anstey's new book, "The Brass Bottle," is having a large sale. It has been objected that at the close of the book there is no attempt made to explain in any scientific or common sense way the miracles performed by the Jinnee. I sometimes wonder what must be the mental constitution of the man who requires that everything wonderful or mysterious which he may meet in print should be explained by the author. Probably the critic who objected to Mr. Anstey's diverting story would have been better pleased if on the last page the author had made his hero suddenly awake, and find that his experiences with the Jinnee were only a dream. There actually are people whom this unspeakably stupid expedient pleases. Mr. Anstey did not propose to write a story which could be submitted to chemical analysis or to dissection by a surgeon, and the theory that a story teller has no right to introduce the marvelous without afterward explaining it to the satisfaction of boys in the first form of the board school is utterly unwarrantable.

Mrs. Humphry Ward's "Eleanor" is not as a serial in Harper's Magazine. The author, however, deserves a word of credit for the accuracy of her "local color," so far as her Italian scenes are concerned. It is so common for people who have spent a month or even a Winter in Italy to assume to know Italy and the Italians thoroughly, that when one finds an author who, like Mrs. Humphry Ward, does not attempt to write about Italy until she does know it, one feels really grateful to her.

The death of Prof. Max Müller reminds us of what progress toleration in religious opinion has made during the last thirty years. Time was when Max Müller was regarded as the most dangerous sort of infidel, and when Dean Stanley invited him to lecture in the Abbey on the religions of the world there was such a loud outcry from religious people that he never delivered the lecture. To-day no one speaks of Prof. Müller as an infidel. It is universally recognized that a man may hold Prof. Müller's opinions and yet be a good Christian. This change has come about silently. We now no longer hold that science and religion are incompatible. Prof. Müller's opinions, which once awakened such bitter hostility, are now those of a very large proportion of the clergy of the Church of England, and for this progress we owe thanks to men like Prof. Müller.

The Daily Chronicle prints every few days on its fourth page verses in the cockney dialect, which are always witty and usually wise. The other day the Post Office received a letter from America directed to "Alfred Austin, Poet Laureate," and the Post Office people sent it to The Chronicle office. This suggests that in the opinion of the Post Office the poet laureate occupies his time in writing cockney verse. This is an indirect compliment to Mr. Barry Pain, the poet of The Chronicle, but in confounding the two poets the Post Office has evidently forgotten that the laureateship was bestowed upon a writer of admirable Tory leaders in a Tory paper. To suppose that the poet laureate would write Radical verse in a Radical newspaper is to forget the reason why he received his appointment at the hands of Lord Salisbury.

A most entertaining book is the "Letters of Thomas Edward Brown," edited with a memoir by Sidney T. Irwin. It may be safely said that the public knew little of the late Mr. Brown until these letters appeared. He was the author of "Fo'c'sle Yarns," but the knowledge of that fact will identify him only in the case of a small and select number of readers. However, the two volumes of his letters furnish extremely pleasant reading. They are full of sharp and original criticisms of books, men, and music. Moreover their style would alone make them readable. In several of the letters Mr. Brown writes of Mr. Hardy's "Tess" in a way that strikes me as being exceedingly just. Nevertheless he makes the strange mistake of finding fault with the Tess because she did not appeal for help to Clare's father. How could Mr. Brown have forgotten the scene in which Tess walked the long weary way to the house of Clare's father and accomplished nothing by it?

***

Speaking of Tess reminds me of the list of favorite heroes and heroines which various novel readers have recently contributed to one of the papers. Why not have a list of eminent cads of fiction? In such a list Angel Clare would be the winner beyond any possibility of doubt. There are other cads in other novels, the names of whom will readily occur, but so complete, unapproachable, elemental a cad as Angel Clare was never before conceived by the mind of man. Brown's letters have of course been seen in America. They would be read there as easily as here, for their interest is not local but universal. Next to the Stevenson letters they form the most interesting work of the kind that has latterly appeared.

W. L. ALDEN.

The Land of the Mahatmas.*

This elaborately illustrated volume on Burma is particularly full of interest, for the writers treat of their subject according to a certain definite plan which lends itself most admirably to a book of this kind, which is neither history nor a book of travels, but which combines the most attractive elements of each. It might be said to deal with the Burman from the cradle to the grave.

The Burmans are wont to mark the course of life into five stages—first to get health, then to get learning, then family, then substance, then Kútho. First the free and happy child, living a life of nature. Then the schoolboy and student, opening the stores of traditional wisdom. Then the gallant, absorbed in arts of pleasing; the escapade of marriage as the event frequently proves; the coming of the family and settling down to work. Then the staid man of substance, precise in expression, versed in ancient lore and heard in the council of the village conclave. Lastly, his ambitions satisfied, founder or co-founder of temple or school, he relinquishes his work to his children, and spends the evening of life in kindly intercourse, in study and devotion to his religion.

And this is the general scope of the book as it is of life in Burma. First, we have a description of childhood, with children's games, and the treatment of children; then the customs of youth, and easly manhood and womanhood, when social customs and a description of the trades and industries of Burma are given, the sports and games explained, and finally come the religious education and descriptions of religious life and of the temples. The book is illustrated with nearly 500 half-tone pictures, which have been reproduced from some very excellent photographs, which give particular emphasis to the text, as in them alone may be traced the complete contemporaneous life of Burma.

H. C. BEATTY, Baltimore, further discussing the subject of "Black and White in Art," says: "Allow me to say with Andrew Bergamot that I prefer black and white to color in art. Nor will I admit that this is due to the 'wild, uncultivated part of me.' Indeed, in his article on 'Black and White in Art,' with true artistic subtlety, he has answered his own doubts (?) with what is more convincing than logic and more pleasant than dogma—suggestion. The first advance in art is a dropping of the characteristic that appeals to our motor sense—weight—and is a transition from solid to surface representation. Next we see a substitution of apparent proportions for real ones—a growing knowledge of linear perspective—which is a further elimination of the motor sense element. Then a use of colored surfaces supplants the outline method—a rejection of the factor contributed by the tactile sense. And last we have the disappearance of the merely sensuous element of sight proper, color, and a substitution for it of its light equivalent in the black and white scale. This is a verification, if need be, that 'Intelligence progresses from the presentative to the representative.'

"It might be even more interesting to show the relation of this black and white problem to the development of the mind through the Aristotilian ontegories of intellects from the knowing of the 'thing in itself' to the higher stages. Or the subsumption of this phenomenon under the Spencerian principle of art as enunciated in the 'Philosophy of Style,' might not be uninstructive. Altogether, there seems neither cause for alarm that the highest generalizations of philosophers are most akin to the first cognitions of a nascent mind, nor that the highest art culture returns to the 'innocence of the eye' in its simplest manifestation—the destruction of light from shade."

And This Is Fame!

OLD STAGER, New York, writes: "A few days ago I saw the noted Mr. Fitzsimmons hurrying along Nassau Street, attended by an admiring crowd of hooting, gleeful boys, and every passer turned to catch a free glimpse of the renowned fighter, while the words, 'It's Fitz,' 'It's Fitz,' filled the air. To-day I passed an old man, so quiet in demeanor he might have been thought feeble had not the fire of his piercing eyes dispelled the illusion. No head turned, no delivery clerk leaned from his wagon to gain a sight of him, no name sounded from fifty tongues, and apparently none but I knew Mr. Joseph Jefferson—also noted."

A Phrase That Is Threadbare.

"VETERAN," writing from Castine, Me., inquires: "Why is it that literary persons persist in using that threadbare phrase, 'Mr. (or Mrs.) Blank knows his (or her) Paris (or London, or Senegambia, or what not) very well?' Once upon a time, I suppose, the phrase was new and seemed original, but now everybody who writes a book about a place or a country, is immediately advertised as knowing his Thingumbob very well or even very thoroughly. Thus a New York newspaper which prides itself on its originality lately reviewing a book about Paris, said: 'Mr. Blank knows his Paris very thoroughly,' and a Boston magazine which was once par excellence the literary periodical of the country, announcing a series of papers on Ireland, said, 'Mrs. Blank knows her Ireland very well,' although as a matter of fact Mrs. Blank can make no such pretension. What is there smart in this affectation of Mr. Blank's ownership of Paris? Or Mrs. Blank's ownership of Ireland? The phrase is marrowless."

Misquotations.

"CLIFFS," Newport, R. I., writes as follows: "I must differ from your correspondent A. Blackwood. In his article on 'Misquotation' in THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW he states that these lines from Wordsworth 'brook no change,' and that to touch them is to blemish them:

Let beeves and home-bred kine partake
The sweets of Burn-mill meadow;
The swan on still Saint Mary's Lake
Float double; swan and shadow!
We will not see them; will not go.

"May I suggest that, to change 'will' for 'shall' in the last line would not be a blemish, and would be more grammatical? Have we caught our Wordsworth napping?"

VERBUM SAP, New York, writes on this same subject: "The article seems to give a wrong impression about Lord Bacon. It is known to all students that his quotations are not always accurate. The extract from 'The Essay on Truth,' to which you allude, is an instance of this. The words following 'Montaigne saith prettily' are not really Montaigne's, but those of 'un ancien,' who is none other than our old friend Plutarch, from whose 'Life of Lysander' the passage is quoted.

"I would also allude to another poetic quotation, in addition to those given in your last issue. We often read: 'Like angels' visits, few and far between.' The words 'few and far between' express the same idea, and therefore spoil the significance of the original passage, which is: 'Like 'angels' visits, brief and far between.'"

"Correctness in Diction."

GEORGE H. MELLISH, New York, writes: "In THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW of Nov. 10 your editorial, 'Correctness in Diction,' should please every man. I read it with the greatest of pleasure. I noticed one of the first-class New York dailies frequently uses the word have the desired effect of rectifying the misuse of the word 'balance.'"

HARRIET B. PHELPS, New Haven, Conn., asks: "Why is it not possible for some of the contributors to THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW to work out the suggestion in the editorial referred to and help those who are working for a more intelligent conception of the English language? To master this language we must all imitate writers of pure English until we ourselves have acquired the faculty of expression. This help could be easily given us through the pages of THE SATURDAY REVIEW; it would be a help not only in the study of the language, but it would also stimulate our thoughts to higher and more complete activity."

MRS. M., New York, adds: "Is not the word 'lurid' another good example? It is always used—or rather misused—in descriptions of tremendous fires, brilliant fireworks, or any other vivid lights seen at night, whereas the meaning of the word is dull, lowering, gloomy, and is in fact just the opposite of anything bright."

Leigh Hunt's "The Nile."

CHAMBERS BAIRD, Ripley, Ohio, speaking of Leigh Hunt, writes: "I do not know place in poetic literature. It should be committed to memory by every lover of perfect verse and of—

"That Southern beam,
The laughing queen, that caught the world's great hands."

THE NILE.

It flows through old hushed Egypt and its sands,
Like some grave, mighty thought threading a dream;
And times and things, as in that vision, seem
Keeping along it their eternal stands—
Caves, pillars, pyramids, the shepherd bands,
That roamed through the young world, the glory extreme,
Of high Sesostris, and that southern beam,
The laughing queen, that caught the world's great hands.

Then comes a mightier silence, stern and strong,
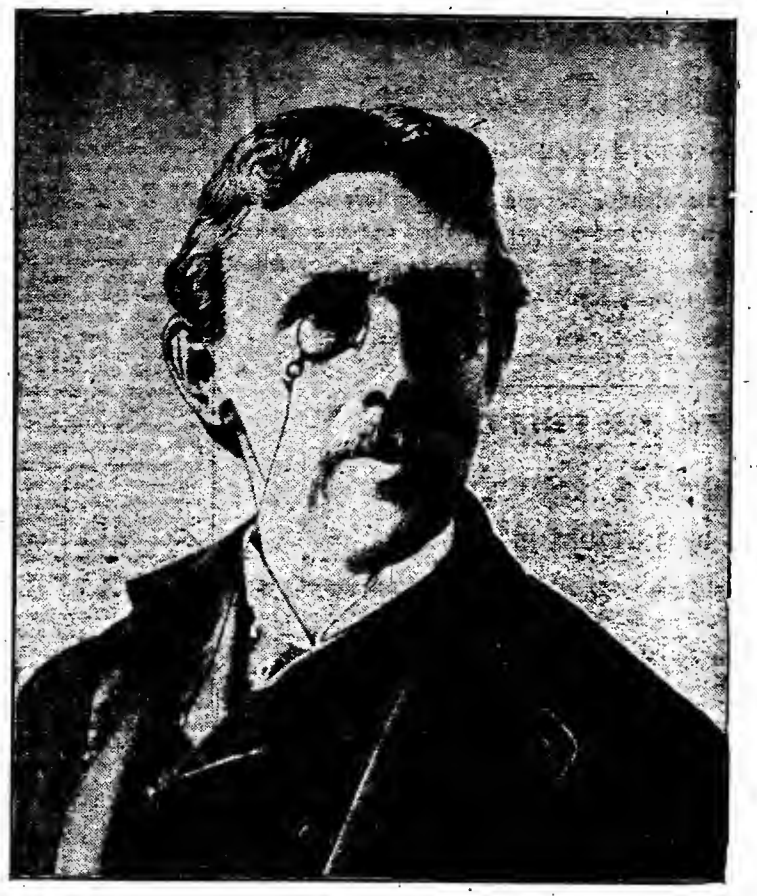
And the void weighs on us; and then we wake,
And hear the fruitful stream lapsing along
'Twixt villages, and think how we shall take
Our own calm journey on for human sake.



MAURICE THOMPSON,
Author of "Alice of Old Vincennes."

This Author is Happy.

"On the 2d of October, just two weeks after its publication, 40,000 copies of 'Alice of Old Vincennes,' Maurice Thompson's story of American life, had been sold. From Canada came one order of 10,000 copies, a very unusual order from that colony, where the sale of books is necessarily limited. The publishers report that they are sending out a steady average of 3,500 copies a day. It is now a brief month after publication and the book has passed its 70,000."—N. Y. Times.

IT'S NOW THE BEST SELLING NOVEL.

"More original than 'Richard Carvel,' more vital than 'Janice Meredith,' more cohesive than 'To Have and To Hold,' more dramatic, spontaneous and artistic than any of its rivals—such is Maurice Thompson's superb American novel, 'Alice of Old Vincennes.'"

Times-Herald.

"Mr. Thompson has done a patriotic act by breathing the breath of life into historic characters who had been half forgotten. 'Alice of Old Vincennes' deserves the instant popularity that surely awaits it."—Chicago Tribune.

"Maurice Thompson's 'Alice of Old Vincennes' more nearly fills what we may fancy to be the requirements of 'the great American novel' than any book in the closing decade of this century."—Rochester Herald.

THE FIRST ANNIVERSARY.

Just one year ago we began selling books at unprecedentedly low prices, and giving service that made book buying a pleasure. We have succeeded, and with modesty refrain from saying how well. We have been obliged to enlarge our store four times its original size. It has been a question with the trade, as well as with the public, how we could sell books so cheap. There is no secret about it. A business of enormous proportions and close buying for spot cash are the chief reasons.

We thank our customers (and especially hundreds of readers of THE TIMES, who have bought by mail, but whom we have never seen) for their patronage, and during the coming season promise lower prices and better service than ever.

We still have some of the bargains advertised at special prices in last Saturday's Review, and we also offer the following, suitable for Christmas gifts: Our Price.

TWO KINDS OF READERS.

Those Who Are Absorbed in Current Books and Those Who View New Things Contemptuously.

There are two kinds of readers, those that confine their attention to popular books of the day and that other class which looks upon all contemporary literature as being "copious terrestrial dross that welters chaotically." There is, of course, another brand which divides its interest between the old-time writings—the classics—and the best modern books. This latter, a wise, sensible class, is, I imagine, not so numerous as either of the two first mentioned.

It would appear, then, that there was a conflict between the old and the new. The man who finds his pleasure in old and happy far-off things and triumphs long ago, cares not the flip of a penny for the best of contemporary literature, to him a dreary wilderness of words. How often do we hear one of these say that he will not read a book that is not a hundred years old, and that it is a hopeless task to attempt to pick from the multitudinous production of books that goes on from year to year the ones which are worth reading. It is, I know from experience, a fruitless task to attempt to correct this fast idea. The antiquarian is a most obstinate person, and absolutely blind to the merit of the present, which will be the "glorious past" to a succeeding generation, or, as Davies says, "Old men plant young trees, the fruit whereof another age shall take."

It was only the other day that I attempted to get a well-known writer to read a couple of modern books which had given me a great deal of pleasure. Despite the fact that he knew of my devotion to the old authors, and should have, in consequence of this fact, it seemed to me, paid some little heed to my opinion, he absolutely refused to look at the books I offered him. He said he did not care to read any book that had not stood the test of time; that he would not undertake to winnow the good from the bad in modern literature. It was in vain that I argued that the books he read were the popular books of the long ago, and that best-liked books of to-day would be the ones which would be treasured by future generations. The obdurate person I addressed was Ambrose Bierce, and the books I offered him were Seton-Thompson's "Biography of a Grizzly" and "David Harum." I said further to Mr. Bierce: If you will not read modern books by what right can you expect people to read your books? His reply was characteristic, and was: "They don't." I might have replied that very many have, and more should read his "Tales of Soldiers and Civilians"; but this would have been slurring his other literary chicks, so I refrained.

It was unfortunate for himself and the public that Carlyle should have set his face against the best work of his contemporaries. He denounced everything written during his day as being rubbish, tinsel, and flummery; his advice was, read the old, avoid the new. In his essay on biography, published in Fraser's Magazine in 1832, he said: "Consider the multitude of mortals that handle the pen in these days, and can mostly spell and write without glaring violations of grammar, the question naturally arises: How is this, then, that no work proceeds from them bearing any stamp of authenticity and permanence; of worth more than one day? How is it that of all these countless multitudes no one can attain to the smallest mark of excellence or produce aught that shall endure longer than 'a snow-flake on the river,' or the foam on penny beer? We answer: Because they are foam; because there is no reality in them."

To use Carlyle's own words, "The question naturally arises" who were these writers of England and America, and what books were those that could not endure longer than "foam on penny beer"? During the dozen years prior to the publication of Carlyle's essay Sir Walter Scott produced some of his best work, including "Ivanhoe"; Keats, Byron, Shelley, Wordsworth, Rogers, Coleridge, Elizabeth Barrett, Felicia Hemans, Tennyson, and Hood were singing their immortal lays which defy "the effacing finger"; De Quincey produced "The Opium Eater," Hazlitt his "Table Talk," J. Mill his "Political Economy," Charles Lamb his "Essays of Elia," Landor his "Imaginary Conversations," Mary Mitford "Our Village," Bulwer his "Pelham," and Hallam his "Constitutional History." In America during these years Cooper was at the height of his fame, Irving had published his "Sketch Book"; Lindley Murray, "Memoirs of His Own Life"; Audubon, "Birds of America"; Noah Webster, "An American Dictionary of the English Language"; Dunlop, "History of the American Theatre," while Poe, Bryant, and Longfellow had begun to sing! These were the books that could not endure longer than "a snowflake on the river" or "foam on penny beer." If Carlyle were alive to-day he would be sighing for the good old times of 1832!

It was not alone Carlyle, Walpole, Hume, and Macaulay who, in order to appreciate writing at its true value, thought it must be old! Milton was a boy of seven when Shakespeare died, and the first folio edition of the collected plays had been published for some little time, when he wrote in the preface of his "Samson Agonistes" that "the three tragic poets, [Aeschylus, Sophocles, and Euripides,] unequaled yet by any, and the best rule to all who endeavor to write things of like argument," were "Sophocles in his Oedipus, Euripides in his Hippolytus and Iphigenia at Aulis, and Aeschylus in his Prometheus and Agamemnon." Of these "Romeo and Juliet," "Othello," "Macbeth," "Lear," and "Hamlet." With these great works in his mind's eye, he is able to say that the three ancients above noted "vindicate tragedy from the small esteem, or rather infamy, which, in the account of many, it undergoes at this day." It was the sad reflection of Goldsmith that whenever he wrote anything the "public made a point to know nothing about it." But what is stranger still is that when Sir Thomas Blount published a work in which he had collected the judgments passed by learned men on famous writers, the names of Spenser, Shakespeare, or Milton are not to be found! What learned men overlooked the despised unwise had taken to their heart of hearts.

It would not be a difficult matter to present what is on the tip of every antiquarian's tongue, a list of books which were famous in their day, but which are now sunk in the "lower deep" of oblivion. There are indeed a very great many books which deserve resurrection. But what does it matter that Elkanah Settle (what a name for a poet!) was a rival of Dryden, that Dr. Johnson pronounced one of Richardson's novels immoral—possibly the doctor was right—or that Pomfret's "Choice" was once a "universal favorite"? Settle, Richardson, and Pomfret had their day, and, to my way of thinking, were well entitled to their laurels. It is more to the point that Walpole, who despised the work of his contemporaries, denounced "Tristram Shandy," which made a "great noise in the world," as being "the dregs of nonsense"; that Macaulay, when in the "full vintage of his flowing honors and purpled greatness," and enamored of his old tomes, refused to read Carlyle or Ruskin or Hume, whose age he denounced as "sunk in stupidity and barbarism," and yet it produced "Clarissa," "Tom Jones," "Amelia," the "Rambler," "Rasselas," Blackstone's "Commentaries," Collins's "Odes," and Gray's "Poems."

It was Coleridge who pointed out, and with truth, in the history of his own mental growth, that "no models of past time, however perfect, can have the same vivid effect on the youthful mind as the productions of contemporary genius. The great works of past ages seem to a young man things of another race, in respect to which his faculties must remain passive and submissive, even as to the stars and mountains. But the writings of a contemporary, perhaps not many years older than himself, surrounded by the same circumstances and disciplined by the same manners, possess a reality for him, and inspire an actual friendship as of a man for a man." Hamilton Wright Mabie tapped the intense antiquarian squarely on the "cocoanut" when he said, "It is this vital relation to his own age which distinguishes the scholar from the pedant. The charm of the past always remains; we do not surrender it when we accept the new truth and listen to the new melody; we are not disloyal to it when we live deeply and resolutely in the age which gives us birth. There are no final forms of art, because truth has always new beauty to reveal, and beauty, new truth to illustrate."

So long as you can keep the old dramatists and dramatic histories away from the bookworm, he will retain his delight in the theatre, but let him take up with these, when all at once he will construct a rampart of firm and solid words and hurl burning globules of language into the ranks of contemporary actors and dramatists. He will then only emerge from his tower and enter the theatre where "one of the classics" is presented, or to witness a dramatization of a favorite old novel. This antiquarian spirit is difficult to decipher or account for. I once lured one of these retrospective personages, who had not been to a theatre in a decade, to witness the performance of a well-known comedian. Next day he told me that he had enjoyed the play hugely, and that the actor was a revelation. Two weeks later a friend invited the same person to see another actor, when he replied that there was only one performer on the American stage, and he did not care to see any other. He had seen him two weeks before! This person was like the man who bought the Encyclopaedia Brittanica and read the first volume. The only things he could talk about were subjects which began with "a," and he was so filled up and satisfied with these that he would not read anything else.

I know of one case where the theatre served to correct a virulent attack of antiquarianism, and the strange dislike for that which is worthy in contemporary literature. Philander was a devotee of the drama. He was so pleased with Miss Viola Allen's performance in "The Christian" and with Miss Maud Adams in "The Little Minister" that he was prompted to buy and read the books from which the dramatizations were made. Lured on by these two books, which he was almost ashamed to admit that he enjoyed, Philander has been reading lately all the novels which are to be dramatized and put on the stage this season. It was a strange sight to see on my friend's study table the other day, consorting with Shakespeare, Raleigh, Swift, Addison, and their fellows, Westcott's "David Harum," Mitchell's "Adventures of François," Allen's "Choir Invisible," and Ford's "Janice Meredith." The theatre had cured him of his loathing for contemporary thought and fiction, and he admitted that never before had he taken so much interest in life, nor did the present ever appear so rosy to him.

It is unfortunate that a great many people look upon all that is old as golden, and all that is new as gilt. Indeed, the man who cannot see anything good in the living present, in "these golden days, fruitful in golden deeds," who lives in the dead past, will generally be found to be a melancholy, disgruntled, and discontented individual. FRANK J. WILSTACH.

The Literature of Russia.*

It is a significant fact that the two best known expounders and describers of the literary art of Russia, Onieguine and Chtchoukine, have for several years made their home in Paris. To their names may be added that of Waliszewski, who is the author of "A History of Russian Literature."

In spite of the familiar sound of such names as Alexander Hertzen, Tourgénieff, and Tolstoï, the reading public of Western and Southern Europe and of America have but a vague idea of the work of Russian writers, and this idea has principally been obtained through the medium of Englished versions of French translations. Writings in Russian are among the last in European languages to claim literary eminence. For this reason it is doubtful if there is, outside the works of half a dozen present-day novelists and poets, anything written in Russian that has more than a philological and historical value as marking a period in the development of a language which may be full of promise. In other words, the Russian language of to-day is as truthfully characteristic of the social asphyxia of the country as was the German language characteristic of German society before the days of Goethe and Schiller.

Aside from the philological obstructions to a broad range of expression, the fact that 60 per cent. of the Russian people can neither read nor write and that those of the 40 per cent. who can are not free agents to write what they please and in the way they please, can hardly tend toward anything but stagnation. We do not, of course, refer to those Russian writers who have been touched by the spirit and culture of Western Europe; still less to those who from their exile in London, Berlin, or Paris write of Russian life from the point of view of their cosmopolitan environment.

As a chronology of ancient Russian literature combined with entertaining essays on contemporaries, Mr. Waliszewski's book leaves little to be desired, but as a review of what has been accomplished through the Russian language as a medium of expression it lacks coherence, precision, and conviction. We are told that certain writers did thus and so, but the author does not give us the opportunity to judge for ourselves. Pertinent extracts are missed more than the omission of a hundred pages of data would have been. But then the chronology would have been shattered. As it is, Mr. Waliszewski has attempted to pour a gallon into a quart measure, with the inevitable result. Little besides the sediment remains.

Joseph Conrad's "Lord Jim."

It is conceded that Mr. Conrad, like Britannia, rules the waves. Other writers have told stirring tales of those "that do business in great waters," and have given vivid and picturesque descriptions of the ocean in its storms and in its calms. But when we open one of Mr. Conrad's books we are aware of none of this. At once there comes "so loud a calling of the sea" that we embark with the writer upon the great adventure of the deep. We know for ourselves "the magic monotony of existence between sky and water"; we feel all the prosaic exaction of the life, and, at the same time, we are fascinated and held by the mysterious, dominating spirit brooding always upon the sea.

Not less than in Mr. Conrad's surpassingly beautiful "Youth," peerless among short stories, do we feel all this in "Lord Jim," but "Lord Jim" is much more than a romance of the sea. It is said that its author meant it to be a brief narrative, but that it took itself into its own hands, and swept its writer with it into a profound study of a psychic phenomenon. If this be true, we are grateful to the tale that thus assumed the mastership, and insisted upon its own evolution.

"Lord Jim" is the atory of a boy born in a quiet English parsonage, but filled with a thirst for adventure that leads him early to a sailor's life. He has that sublime young egotism, that pathetic young faith in himself, that refusal to believe it possible that life can hold for him defeat or failure, in a word, that very spring and essence of youth, which no living writer understands as does Mr. Conrad. The boy's dreams are always of his own heroic deeds, of the glad leap with which spirit and flesh will respond to the trumpet call of perilous occasion. Once, by a hair's breadth, he is too late for such response, and long he waits, rising rapidly the while in his profession, to hear that call again. At last, when he is twenty-four, years old, and mate of a vessel steaming through a calm Oriental sea, under the silent stars, with 800 penceful pilgrims sleeping upon the deck, swiftly, appallingly rises beside him "the veiled opportunity"—the dream of his life. And, behold, he quails before it. Just one instant too long was the strain, just one feather's weight too great the temptation, and something within him snapped; a great sentiment gave way to selfish logic; courage was conquered by cowardice, and he—jumped, yielding to a mad instinct of self-preservation, and irrevocably losing the life he saved.

Here Mr. Conrad begins his study of a soul. He tells his tale not from within, but from without, putting it into the mouth of an interested observer that he himself may not assume the novelist's privilege of omniscience. He feels his way, step by step, along the obscure chambers of that clouded, crude young heart, which felt the full significance, the ineffaceable stain of its cowering moment, and yet which contrived, somehow, to piece together the shattered faith in its high potentialities. The boy is inarticulate, elusive, literally "under a cloud." Every now and then it lifts, we have a glimpse of his attitude toward himself, and then, before we can be sure of it, the cloud has settled heavily again.

In the psychology of the book Mr. Conrad's method reminds us not a little of that of Mr. Henry James. He pursues a situation to its last intrenchment; he subjects an emotion to its last analysis. He turns a problem over and over, until we see it in a hundred lights—but never, by any happy chance, does he solve it. Jim's case—that is the motif of the story. How does it look to Jim himself? How does it look to a man of honor? Where is the hope for Jim's future? What is his point of salvability? The case is put alongside the matter-of-course courage of "the elderly French Lieutenant"; alongside the matter-of-course heroism of "little Bob Stanton"; alongside the coherent beauty of Stein's brave life—and it looks ugly. Theo, on the other hand, from the bravest come lenient judgments: "Given a certain combination of circumstances, fear is sure to come. L'homme est né poltron," from the Lieutenant; and from Stein, "He is romantic—romantic. And that is very bad—very bad. Very good, too. What is it that by inward pain makes him know himself?" But there is, after all, no conclusion. We follow on, follow on, through one exquisitely put subtlety after another, until, in truth, we begin to feel, and we are ashamed of ourselves for feeling, just a little tired of so much analysis, of so many fine-drawn perplexities.

Why, we ask ourselves, can we not get hold of something definite? And what, after all, does all this theorizing amount to? We don't know that we are called to sit upon the judgment seat, weighing to the last scruple poor Jim's intention against his performance, and then why such a future? Would it not be the simple thing for his helpful friend to say: "You have fallen terribly, my boy, fallen, perhaps, through your own self-confident dreams. Get up and try again. No skulking, no evasion! Live this thing down, humbly and hopefully, in the light of day. And hark ye—write to the homefolk. Every day of your silence adds to their agony. They will have heard the worst of you; let them know the best—that you live and love them, and have not ceased worthily to resolve." This, or something like this, seems the plain and practical way out; and, for all their beauty, we cannot help becoming impatient of the labyrinthine mazes that lead to that other tragically inadequate "veiled opportunity"—that supreme success snatched out of obscurity; but, alas, a sacrifice not to humanity or to duty, but to poor Jim's central and "exalted egoism," "a pitiless wedding with a shadowy ideal of conduct."

However one may weary of the slippery elusiveness of the psychic conclusions, or may rebel against the ultimate tragedy of the book, there are compensations of depth and beauty upon every page. Never were Mr. Conrad's felicity of phrase and charm of atmosphere more obvious than in "Lord Jim." His danger is that, like Mr. James, he may become entangled in his own supreme literary art, and may sacrifice simplicity and directness of purpose to his very perfection of method.

As it stands, however, a book of the rare literary quality of "Lord Jim" is something to receive with gratitude and joy, and with a sense of a distinction conferred upon the readers of romance.

Nineteenth Century Painters.*

This is a handsomely made volume, and most of the reproductions give a fairly satisfactory impression of the originals. Among the fifty painters represented are the Americans Whistler, Thayer, and Sargent, whose diverse methods and ways of looking at nature are well exemplified by the portrait of Carlyle, "The Angel," and "Ellen Terry as Lady Macbeth." Throughout the collection, in fact, an unusually careful choice has been made, and there are few instances in which a painter is subjected to the injustice of representation without discrimination. In many cases, of course, the selection of a characteristic example leads to a somewhat hackneyed choice. Rossetti's "Beata Beatrix" is almost as well known as it is beloved, the "Love and Death" of Watts has the stamp of inevitability, Millais's "Huguenot," Delaroche's "Princes in the Tower," Ingres's "La Source," have served their makers long and faithfully; but, on the other hand, Monet's "A Walk in Gray Weather" gives an impression of his talent that is both characteristic and unfamiliar, "The Ballet Girl," by Dégas, known so well by reputation, is nevertheless not usually found in this type of picture book, and the same is true of Whistler's "Carlyle," in composition so like the better-known portrait of the artist's mother.

The text accompanying the pictures consists of unpretentious, straightforward accounts of the lives and methods of the painters. It is devoid of purely technical interest, but is perfectly well adapted to the enlightenment of the general reader as to the broad principles controlling the very different styles of art produced during this prolific century.

CLUB WOMEN AND LIBRARIES AGAIN.

May not a timely and needed word be written here of women's clubs in the light of the sixth annual convention of the New York State Federation, which closed its session in Albany on Nov. 16? Officers and delegates went to their homes fully satisfied with the results of the convention. The programme had been carried out to the letter, admirable papers discussing a hundred questions, more or less, had been presented, and perfect good-will and fellowship had prevailed. The esprit de corps, the inspiration of numbers, the privilege of hearing prominent women speak, or the honor of addressing so distinguished a gathering, all gave pleasure and satisfaction to the individual; but now that delegates have returned home and the glamour of the meeting has been dispelled, it will be strange if they do not begin to wonder and ask: "What was it all about? What have I really gained to pass on to others, to report to the club that sent me as a delegate?"

Practically two entire sessions were devoted to necessary business, while six were left for the presentation and discussion of the seventeen main topics, besides which there were sixty-two subtopics, any one of which was worthy of more than passing notice. After an hour's consideration of literature, there was an immediate jump to philanthropy, the press followed hard upon industrial arts among women, and music was followed by civics. It was impossible for the mind to grasp any meaning from diverse subjects so rapidly and hurriedly presented. We understand that the time allotted to each speaker for a sub-topic varied from five to eight minutes, and any one exceeding her time was "gaveled down," with her theme in her enthusiasm only partially developed.

It is evident that the programme on this basis was overcrowded, and that no topic could be adequately presented and rounded out in the brief time allowed. To say the least, the programme was disjointed, unsymmetrical, and lacking in continuity; this was because every federated club felt that its special sphere of activity should receive recognition on the convention programme, and the federation yielded to this sentiment for the sake of harmony. In this regard it would seem that the federation is making the serious mistake of attempting too much, and failing therefore to accomplish anything. The effort to discuss so many and so varied topics in order to please every club by reviewing its work is defeating the very purpose of the organization itself.

It is difficult to say whether the New York Federation really has any common purpose, though it is claimed that the founding of an industrial training school for girls is its ideal. This has been briefly considered, like all other topics, and consequently defeated at three successive conventions, because the delegates did not get an understanding of the school and its real object. The apparent want of support in this measure was due to the short time allowed at the conventions for a thorough discussion of the plans pertaining to the proposed school.

However, as we suggested some weeks ago, there is a common ground for federation work, if that organization would at any meeting allow sufficient time to intelligently discuss the subject. That work is the founding and encouragement of libraries. Every city, town, village, and rural community in this State should have a free library. In Massachusetts only eight villages are to-day without libraries. When will New York be able to make that boast?

New York has the best library law in the Union. It should be read and understood by all club women. No State offers so much financial and other help in founding and organizing free libraries as does the State of New York. But in every locality [illegible] force to create the sentiment for a library, the State is powerless without this initiative on the part of the community. The New York Federation is neglecting this opportunity to co-operate with the library movement. In Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, in fact throughout the West, in Georgia, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, and Vermont, the federations are adopting as their work the founding of libraries where there are none, and the encouragement of those that struggle for existence.

In this State some of the cities are without proper library facilities, while the library needs of most of the small towns and rural communities are very evident. An obligation rests upon the New York Federation. Is it willing that other federations should outstrip it in the race? Many will watch with interest to see if a resolution that was introduced just before the federation adjourned two weeks ago receives any attention whatever from the Executive Board, to which it was referred. The resolution was as follows:

Resolved, That the Executive Board be instructed to devote a half day at the next convention to the discussion of the federation's opportunities and responsibilities in regard to public and traveling libraries, university extension, and other phases of home education.

If the women's clubs of this State fully realized what a public library is, they would never rest until every community in the State was equipped with a library. As public-spirited women they should not miss the splendid means within their grasp for the development and enrichment of life.

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE EDUCATED.

The columns of THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW are not devoted to the discussion of ordinary political questions, and certainly not those of a partisan nature. But among our readers are many thousands of men and women of education. To those of them who live in the City of New York we think that it cannot be amiss to point out that they have in many respects, and especially at the present time, a responsibility quite different from that of the mass of people who are uninstructed or but indifferently instructed.

This responsibility comes chiefly from the fact that an educated person must necessarily understand more clearly than others the conditions of decent, orderly, and upright administration of the affairs of a large community. He must know that these conditions are very different from those that present themselves in a small town. In the latter the causes and the remedies for defects and faults are readily seen by all. The machinery of administration is compact, its operations and its agencies are familiar, and if it goes very wrong every man who cares about it can recognize almost at once who are accountable and can know how they can be reached. In a great city this cannot easily be done. The machinery is both extensive and complex. A thorough understanding of it is possible only to a few, and an understanding sufficient even for an intelligent guidance in ordinary political action is hardly possible for the majority. For the educated, if their education is worth anything, it is always practicable, and if they take the trouble to reach such an understanding and to act upon it honestly and unselfishly, their influence will be useful. Hence their responsibility.

Again, the educated have the immense advantage, or can have it, of knowledge of the history of organized communities and of the experience of other times and other peoples in dealing with evils or with difficulties such as we must deal with. They are not left to the blind groping after short cuts to good government to which ignorant men are prone. They know that nothing of real value has ever been accomplished in human societies without time and patience and systematic effort and the subordination of immediate interests and personal prejudices to the common advantage. They know that the experience of the past has been a continuous and progressive course of instruction, and that it has determined certain generalizations which cannot be disregarded with safety or with honor. Hence again their responsibility. They are not free either [illegible] consequences of such errors. They are, in the forcible language of the old jurisprudence, "charged with knowledge" of what experience has shown can or cannot be done; and they cannot turn aside from the plain path of their duty and in the tribunal of their own conscience plead the poor excuse of ignorance.

We wish to call the attention of our readers to these facts very earnestly. We beg them to remember and steadily to bear in mind that in the trials of the next year in this great city they have a distinct part to bear. They can do much to raise the level of life here; they can aid powerfully to make better the conditions of existence for multitudes who, of themselves, are practically helpless. They can help to make cleaner, more wholesome, more hopeful and helpful the surroundings of thousands of the homes of those who cannot readily defend them. It will not at best be an easy task, and it will require precisely the service that the educated can, if they will, render. It will be a sad and shameful thing if that service is not rendered.

WOMEN AND ROMANTIC WRITING.

Our esteemed contemporary, The Evening Post, recently discussed at some length the inability of women to write the genuinely romantic novel, the novel of incident. The fact that certain women writers of to-day had succeeded in attracting public attention to their works in this line did not appear to our contemporary to be a matter of permanent significance, and in this we agree with it. The truth is that the output of novels of incident on the part of the present woman novelist is due to her desire to meet the demands of the current taste and thereby to sell her books. But it is, indeed, not in the nature of things that women should of their own choice and independent initiative write "drum and trumpet" chronicles. The prancing of the war horse and the clank of armor may have a certain fascination for a very young woman, yet it is not as the militant hero that she conceives her knight, but rather as the warrior conquered and at her feet.

Woman has almost invariably found that her forte in fiction lay in the delineation of character. Now in novels depending on the study of human nature in its secret places there is abundant room for the introduction of incident. Readers of "Romola" and "Adam Bede" and "The Mill on the Floss" will easily recall stirring incidents growing directly out of the inevitable acts of the characters so perfectly pictured in the pages of these works. But the personalities of the actors, their thoughts, and their feelings are the true source of interest in these novels.

And this is natural. A woman cannot be expected to rejoice in the spinning of a complex web of incident for its own sake. Her mind will surely lead to the analysis of thought, motive, and emotion. She desires to know the inner springs of action, and to get at these she will construct her story as nearly as may be out of incidents created by the natural actions of the contrasting personages whom she has brought together. Even the poorest of the novels written by women tend in this direction, and without doubt their best work is entirely along these lines. For the male reader of the novel—and, when all is said and done, he is a tolerably numerous being—this is a good thing. If any power can give him the gift to see himself as others see him, it is the power of a keen, sympathetic, feminine mind, which is invariably quick in its recognition of characteristics and which, when trained to literary production, can set forth the results of its character study in most convincing style. Let the men attend to the novels of fight and fury and the women to the delineation of domestic virtues and faults. We shall get a sounder literature thus than we shall if the women attempt to enter into the fighting nature of man, which they never understand and with which they have no sympathy.

PETER NOT ROBBED TO PAY PAUL.

When Andrew the Stimulator bids us leave off reading newspapers and magazines, the advice is doubtless intended for our good. In the kindness of his heart he imagines we will at once devote the time [illegible] so.

Mr. Lang's argument is good, but his premises are wrong. He leaves it to be inferred that the time devoted to newspapers is time taken from books, and I contend that this is never the case. A man reads his newspaper on the cars and a woman in odd moments during the day. What books would we care to read in that way?

And if is not time wasted. Suppose between breakfast and an interview with the cook an editorial is read which awakens interest in a new subject or a distant country. On the way to market it is thought over, and although speedily displaced by more pressing matters, it revives in a few days perhaps, when the magazines and reviews come in. These are looked through eagerly, and if they contain articles on the desired subject they increase the interest. The next step leads to the library in search of books, recommended by our good friends the reviewers, and those that especially please or instruct will be later sought at the book stores.

That is just an illustration at random to show that newspapers lead toward books rather than away from them.

But take the news columns alone. They contain current history, and a short daily reading suffices to keep one in touch with the great outside world, as distinguished from our own dear narrow world. We would not care to have many schoolgirls like one I met a few years ago, who had taken first prize in ancient history, and who did not know there was a war in Cuba.

Mr. Lang would say that there are some who read nothing but newspapers and cheap magazines. They never open a book from year's end to year's end. True. Put them on a desert island with Omar Khayyam and Dante and they will use them as fuel for a "little friendship fire." Pray leave them a newspaper or two. On the other hand, those of us who read books, and whose ancestors, perhaps, owned books and choice engravings even when they wanted proper food, we bless and honor the press. As for the magazines, are we ever sufficiently grateful for the literary feast they spread for us? It is like a club, where we are introduced to new writers, and occasionally receive a benison from the older ones. And think of Cole's engravings of the old masters and the drawings of that dear, delightful Castaigne! What happiness they provide for lovers of black and white! No, Mr. Lang; teach us to be more appreciative, not less so.

Having been "amang ye, taking notes" for some time, I have come to the following radical conclusion: First, those who read newspapers only, and a page or two at that, invariably choose the poorest as the easiest and quickest read. On the other side, show me a reader of the best newspapers, and you are showing me the owner of at least a few well-worn, tenderly marked books.

Finally, to all interested in political economy, education, or philanthropy, I would like to say that one of the wisest and most far-reaching measures for the general good was the reduction in price of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

A. Z. S.

THE ALOOFNESS OF THE LITERARY MAN.

A few weeks ago we were discussing the disinterested pursuit of reforms, in which Lowell, Curtis, and Warner, three literary men highly representative of American culture, engaged. It suggests the question of whether or not the single-minded direction of thought to one aim or its diffusion to many has been characteristic of men of letters. There has been a tradition to the effect that the pursuit of literature is in itself sufficient to engage the honest thought as well as the affections of the average man of letters—why should another be added? But how is this tradition sustained? In one way or another, does not the average mind of the literary man—not necessarily American—desire the relaxation afforded by the easy pace of a hobby horse? In this strenuous land, perhaps the man of letters doubly needs an alter-ego, an objective interest, to eliminate energy in one direction by a counter-irritant in another. Nothing rests tired faculties more completely than change of work. As a delightful essay expresses it:

> It takes the finest activity to be truly at leisure. For being at leisure is but a name for being active from an inner impulse instead of a necessity, moving like a dancer, or a skater, for the sake of one's inner rhythm.

"For the sake of one's inner rhythm" strikes the mind as a most happy phrase. Perhaps this is the secret spring of much of the versatility shown by men of letters in other things besides their own particular art.

It has long been an idea in the world that the literary man whose mind is purely literary and only sympathetic with the aesthetic consideration of work as art, is, about all practical affairs, sincerely impractical; that the nature of the literary mind is to hold itself aloof from mundane matters, and to occupy toward the problems of "social aims" and politics the relative position that is held by reformers and politicians toward literature—of appreciation and comprehension from the outside; the position of a person who is a dilettante upon many subjects, and a connoisseur upon his own particular métier. This has the element of poetic justice which appeals, but, as is often the case, individual differences occur to shift the weight in the scale, and there are instances that rush to the mind of poets and prose thinkers who have been, and with honor, men of affairs. And their pursuit of other things than their obvious calling was not disinterested. Milton was as zealous a reformer and politician as he was a poet, but did not his championship of liberty and public freedom take his mind unwarrantably from the literary work which he might have made even more perfect than he did? "The trumpet in his hand" speaks more clearly of the man than the labored vaunt of doctrines of reform and his championship of English liberty. He was so much more a poet than he was a patriot—by achievement if not intention. Achievement is the weight in the scale.

Machiavelli played the dual rôle of politician and author, and so did Bacon—alternately statesman and philosophic man of letters. So was Macaulay, who sympathetically appreciated the effort to show ability in more than one direction.

The literary man who has been involved in affairs political and practical has existed, and doubtless will continue to do so—with the reserves of reasons. Shakespeare was an actor, as well as a poet, and Scott was a lawyer, but one takes it that some primary need or accident of training and environment is responsible for the career of the really literary man in other fields apart from his recognized domain of letters. For the literary man really belongs to literature, and his affiliation with commonplace questions has the conscious strain of perfunctory and visionary consideration. Pegasus does not care for harness. Keats and Shelley, except as they were bound by their art, were neither too blind nor too loose in everyday matters. Shelley was, paradoxically, quite zealous and superbly impractical in his theoretic ideas of reform, which never included the idea of himself as a subject for missionary work!

Lamb was necessarily bound by his daily needs to immolate himself in the South Sea House. "The last of the Elizabethans" conquered himself daily to his round of uncongenial work. "I gradually became content," he writes, "doggedly content, as wild animals are in cages." Hawthorne, too, was obliged at one period of his life to struggle with most distasteful work in the Salem Custom House. Had he been freed from the strain of this life, as much a fret on his freedom of mind as chains to a slave, one cannot imagine any cult of work that would have seemed desirable to his soul save literary employment. The author of "The Scarlet Letter" and "Mosses from an Old Manse" would have preferred to commune with his "inmost me" safely sheltered by his Wayside alms.

"Art is long"—it is, indeed, too long for the hasty dash at the gamut of its chromatic scale, with a divided interest in "social aims," making insistent claim, on the other hand, to be resultant in the accord of thought and philosophy one expects to exist in the work of the great author.

The question resolves itself: Had one better be an ineffectual reformer of social and political abuses which it would require the technical study of a lifetime to right, or must one devote one's self wholly to the calling of which one is most securely representative? The medium of literary work has proved most efficacious in righting social abuses. Look at the work of Dickens, and Besant, and many others—by the power of their work they inculcated the spirit of the reforms they wished.

The literary man's interest may—and should—be as broad and as inclusive as his culture, but in this imperfect life the difficulty of serving two masters appeals sensibly, especially when one is as "magerful" as literature.

MAY HARRIS.

AN APPRECIATION OF MAX MULLER.

In a recent number of Literature will be found a well-written appreciation of Prof. Max Müller, which in a very short compass presents such a vivid and striking picture of the man and his work that it makes us realize as nothing else has done the immense amount of work he accomplished; at the same time, giving us an idea of the labor involved in the collations, preparation, revision, and passing of proofs for some of his larger undertakings.

The author or editor of a hundred volumes, the leader of English Orientalists, and one of Oxford's most celebrated professors, his death is a loss to them and to the world at large. Born nearly eighty years ago, his life was filled to the end with hard work, successfully accomplished, his enthusiasm and energy never abating in the least. In fact, his "Six Systems of Indian Philosophy" appeared but a short time ago, when Prof. Müller had nearly reached his seventy-seventh year.

Whatever our personal decision as to his position in regard to certain disputed points and theories, there can be no question as to the fact that Max Müller has for many years stood at the head of the Orientalists of England, and has accomplished more than any one individual toward promoting the studies in which he was an acknowledged expert. He was of [illegible] birth, a naturalized citizen of England, and [illegible] is said to be [illegible] the smallest. This was reissued a few years ago, in a fully revised edition, under the patronage of the late Maharajah of Vizianagram.

Prof. Müller was equally interested in the Hymns of the Rig-Veda, several volumes of the text, or of translations of which he published. His "History of Sanskrit Literature" went into a second edition as early as 1860; and the "Veda" gradually led him into comparative philology and mythology. His articles on the science of mythology, and his famous lectures at the Royal Institute on the sciences of language, 1861-4, took England by storm. His early position as to comparative mythology—which was closely connected with comparative philology—has been said by Andrew Lang, one of the system's most distinguished adversaries, to be founded "on comparison between the Sanskrit names in the Rig-Veda and the mythic names in Greek, German, Slavonic, and other Aryan legends," was reaffirmed in "Chips from a German Workshop," 1868-75, and in "Selected Essays," 1881, and even as lately as in his "Auld Lang Syne."

In his "Introduction to the Science of Religion," given at the Royal Institute in 1870, and later in his Gifford Lectures at Glasgow, Prof. Müller set forth his views on the origin and growth of religion—Indian, natural, physical, anthropological, and psychological—arousing great controversy on the subject by his brilliant writings.

Max Müller's "Deutsche Liebe" reveals a beautiful side of his nature, showing romantic German sentiment, a poetic outlook upon life, and a great warmth of sympathy. It is without doubt one of the most beautiful little works in existence, and it is said that those who do not know this "Deutsche Liebe" fail to know the real man Müller, although the same sympathetic idealism is shown in his philosophical works.

Prof. Müller was known to many people, principally as the delightful host—a reputation borne out by his face and bearing, which show kindly humor and the breeding and graceful courtesy of a man of the world.

His English prose was clear, warm, and impassioned, and it is said he could make the driest discussion of philology as fascinating as a romance, his long years of preparation and hard study showing first of all in his finished and leisurely manner of delivery.

One of the hardest workers of his day, Prof. Müller had the faculty of making others work with him. He was always the centre of a scholarly circle, and it is thought no one but he could have carried through the immense undertaking of a complete translation of the Sacred Books of the East—now reaching its fiftieth volume—at the same time securing not only the help of the Government and of the Oxford Press, but also of the leading Orientalists of Europe. The separate volumes, although in many cases the work of others, were arranged by Prof Müller, every page passing through his hands for revision before final publication.

Not contented with these translations, Prof. Müller next turned his attention to the publication of the original texts, of which several volumes have appeared. It was his greatest wish to draw India and England closer together, and the fact that the King of Siam and the Maharajah of Vizianagram were ready to support every such work prepared by Max Müller, no matter how costly, shows the influence his writings exert in the East, many of which have already found their way into the vernaculars.

The writer of the article in Literature says that, while Max Müller was an exceptionally fascinating teacher, both personally and through his writings, he possessed the rare gift of winning popularity without stooping from his high scholarly position. "He did not bring learning down to the level of the multitude, but he gave the multitude eyes and ears to take in what he had to teach." His writings have brought about a much more intelligent knowledge and appreciation of the Hindu people, as well as being powerful in many other directions—always standing for the advancement of learning.

Max Müller had his detractors, but a scholar who was a foreign member of the French Institute, a Knight of the Prussian Ordre pour le Mérite, an honorary member of almost every learned society, and an honorary doctor of several universities, could probably afford to neglect them. The most signal honor he received was the admission to the Privy Council. No commoner, absolutely unconnected with politics, has ever been thus honored by the Queen, save Huxley and Max Müller. It was the crown of a lifetime of high and noble work.

WHAT IS AN EDITION?

Although I have been connected many years with books and bookmaking I have yet to learn the precise significance of the word "edition" as used by the publishers. When they tell us that a book is in its tenth edition, what do they mean? Do they mean the public to infer that 10,000 copies have been printed, thus indicating a certain measure of popularity valuable as an advertisement, or is it only the conventional way of saying that a tenth impression has been made from the plates of a book without any statement to the number of each impression? When a book has had a phenomenal [illegible] the word edition in the plural is used in connection with the number of thousands printed, but when a book has had a phenomenal sale the word edition is not used at all. Why? Is it because the publishers do not wish the public to draw their own inference as to the size of the edition—whether it be 200, 500, or more.

Stormonth defines "edition" to mean "the whole number of copies of a book printed at one time." But this is only one of its meanings, as now generally understood. Webster makes this its secondary signification, giving its first as "a literary work edited and published, as by a certain editor or in a certain manner." The Standard Dictionary follows Webster in its classification, but with each of its definitions amplified and more happily expressed. The Century Dictionary gives us three definitions: "1. The act of editing. 2. An edited copy or issue of a book or other work; a recension, revision, or annotated reproduction, &c. 3. A concurrent issue or publication of copies of a book or some similar production; the number of books, &c., of the same kind published together, or without change of form or of contents; a multiplication or reproduction of the same work or series of works; as, a large edition of a book, map, or newspaper; the work has reached a tenth edition, the folio editions of Shakespeare's plays."

Discarding the first definition as irrelevant to this discussion, we have then for edition two distinct meanings, one referring specifically to matter, manner, and time or place of publication, as exemplified in the expressions "diamond edition," "expurgated edition," "revised edition," "red-letter edition," "edition de luxe," "Donay edition," &c., and the other, or secondary meaning, to the number of its impression, as "first edition," "second edition," &c. While this last or secondary meaning has a certain definite technical use, it is unfortunate that it is often so used by publishers as to lead the public to draw a wrong inference. If a book is announced as in its eighth or tenth edition, the conclusion is that it is having a large sale, and is therefore worth reading, whereas the several editions may have been numbered by the hundred rather than by the thousand.

A few examples of publishers' notices, culled here and there from the columns of THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW, will show that these remarks are not hypercritical. In one issue I find the statement that a certain popular novel has reached its fifth edition, or 83,000 copies, and a little later on I read that the same book has reached its thirteenth edition, or 233,000 copies. In another place I read that another popular novel has reached its fifth edition, or sixteenth thousand, and still another has run into its nineteenth edition, "which means that 200,000 copies have been sold since June." A little calculation will show that the word edition in these cases is meaningless, unless it is used as synonymous with impression; and if so, it is redondant, for one edition is no different from another in these days of printing from electrotype plates. It is too impossible to tell, in any of these instances, the exact number of volumes printed in an edition. But when I read that two other well-known books have passed, respectively, their one hundred and sixty-fourth and two hundred and thirty-seventh edition, the inference is fair that edition is used in these cases as synonymous with thousand.

If these remarks are well founded, would it not be well for publishers to come to some understanding as to what shall constitute numerically an edition in the secondary sense of the word, or drop it altogether in their announcements and substitute for it the word thousand? The expression "first edition" would still retain its technical meaning to the book collector, but the word edition as generally used would gain a third definite signification and be no longer a snare to the public.

JOHN DENISON CHAMPLIN.

Marie Bashkirtseff, by a Contemporary.

The Onlooker of London prints a story from its Paris correspondent, "Adrienne," of Marie Bashkirtseff. Apparently the writer knew the young Russian and admired her beauty and wit, but she has no scruples in saying that Marie was "an impertinent minx." "Adrienne" writes:

I often met her in the house of a mutual friend, who one day gave a little fête in his country seat near Paris. Marie Bashkirtseff and Bastien Lepage graced the party, and the lovely Russian girl, who, with her halo of pale blond hair and her clinging soft white frock, looked like a Druidic priestess, began the day in the most triumphant mood—for was not she the star, nay, the sun, toward which we all turned our eyes, blinking before so much loveliness! Bastien Pepage, her somewhat heavy but decidedly quaint adorer, was walking in her train, the fumes of incense were rising around her, she was in her own element, and her little feet did not touch the ground to which we, simple mortals, were attached. It happened, however, that myself and a friend had just returned from Venice, and a few words were said at lunch about the city so dear to all artists, and which Bastien Lepage had just then the intention of visiting. So, a little later in the afternoon, as we had both gone to sit under a shady tree somewhat apart from the noisy rest, the young painter came, bringing with him a rustic seat which he installed near ours, and began asking questions about Venice. He grew interested, and I may as well confess that we felt quite under the charm of his original mind, and that the conversation lasted a good three-quarters of an hour, if, not more. Suddenly a most perfect little hand fell heavily on the young man's shoulder, and I saw Marie Bashkirtseff, white, trembling with rage, looking at us with the eyes of a cat who sees her kittens in danger. She unceremoniously pulled the chair under Bastien Lepage: "Eh bien!" she cried, hoarsely, "have you nothing more interesting to do than lose your time with old women?" (To shelter our feminine vanity, let me say that the elder of us was scarcely above thirty.) Bastien

THE PUBLISHER'S POINT OF VIEW.

WANTED—A READER.

If there is a reader who has been surfeited with the adventure novel and would like to know of a book which does not contain in all its length a bloody fight, a stolen heroine, an ubiquitous villain or any of the set characters of the wonder working novel—we wish to commend to such a reader (if there be one) a novel entitled A PRINCESS OF ARCADY, by Arthur Henry, because it is the antithesis of the sort of novel we have mentioned. It is a romantic love story, exquisitely told, pure, idyllic and a refreshing change from the prevailing fiction.

Miss Gilder's book "The Autobiography of a Tom Boy" is selling well both as a book for girls and as a new sort of volume for the grown-ups. The author of "Elizabeth and Her German Garden" has just written the author that she set up half the night reading it.

"The Furniture of Our Fore-Fathers," a superb book for the lover of antique furniture; the first part will be ready next week. This book is sold only in parts and those interested are invited to write to us.

To-day we have put to press the third edition of the Memories of Countess Potocka. It is a charming gift volume.

Mrs. Seton-Thompson's "A Woman Tenderfoot" is another good book for holiday giving. The Times says: "One rarely happens upon so refreshing a volume . . . it is full everywhere of the inspiration of the wild life."

Any of our books sent on approval to be paid for after examined if kept.

M. F. MANSFIELD, Publisher,

A few years ago Chang Yin Tang, now one of the Chinese Commissioners who is to negotiate peace in settlement of the pending disputes in China, wrote a book which dealt with needed reforms in China in the light of foreign influences. The present Emperor, who is said to be kindly disposed toward foreigners, ordered the book to have the widest distribution possible in his empire. It has now been translated for English readers, and while it does not bear directly upon the present troubles in the Far East, having been written for the immediate needs of reconstruction that were developed by the war with Japan, it makes both interesting and instructive reading, not only because of its revelations in regard to the internal affairs of China, but because it clearly shows the kind of man the foreign Commissioners will have to deal with in Prince Chang.

The preface by the author reveals a curious but perfectly logical plan upon which his book is based. He works from the "Moral" through the "Practical" to the "Objects of Knowledge." Under the first head are explained "The Inculcation of Loyalty," emphasizing the attributes of the imperial sovereign, but here is also a finely turned argument against the use of opium. It is under the subject of "Practical" that the author shows what benefit may be derived from closer relations with the best of foreigners. In the chapters devoted to "The Five Objects of Knowledge" Prince Chang would inculcate in his countrymen a desire to know things abroad and at the same time have all observation tempered by patriotism. It is extremely interesting at this time to note Prince Chang's opinion of international law, which appears to be fully set forth on Pages 142-3 of his little book:

There are many who place the most implicit confidence in international law, but these are as stupid as the individuals who depend on the Disarmament Society for peace. If countries are equally matched, then international law is enforced; otherwise, the law is inoperative. For what has international law to do with fighting issues when one country is strong and another weak? There is a saying of the Chou dynasty which runs as follows: "If countries are equal in courage, strategy will conquer." We have never heard of international law controlling the issues of war between unequal States. To-day the countries of the world are in close and mutual intercourse, but the relations of the smaller States to the greater are entirely different from those which exist between States of equal power. China is not on an equal footing with the West. This is perceived in the fact that the duty on imports is fixed by Western Governments. Not so in China. Merchants engaged in business abroad are subject to the laws of the country in which they reside. Not so in China. Foreign commerce is confined to seaports in the West. Not so in China. The murder of a foreigner by a Chinese is a very serious matter, but the killing of a "Chinaman" by a foreigner is a trivial thing. Foreign countries have no Mixed Courts—in fact, China is already not in the comity of nations, and it is useless to prate about international law. Disarmament is an international joke, and international law a deception. There is nothing for it but to seek help in ourselves.

"Parlous Times," the posthumous book by the late David Dwight Wells, shows that the author of those two delightful farces, "Her Ladyship's Elephant" and "His Lordship's Leopard," contemplated writing a serious international novel of tragedy, intrigue, and love. But, like the comedy man in the theatre who is booked to play high tragedy, he soon found himself out of his element, and at length gave himself up to the temptation to introduce ridiculous incidents and recite bright dialogue. Yet who shall blame him, when the author of "The Merchant of Venice" turned a tragedy into a comedy with even less excuse? The plot of "Parlous Times" is a marvel of simplicity; its working out is a structure of varied and intricate design. It seems that a treaty between Great Britain and a South American State is about to be ratified when it is discovered that the manufacturers of a certain commodity, who would lose their monopoly should the treaty be passed, are preparing to bribe certain members of the Government of the South American State in question, and thus prevent the ratification of the treaty. This marks the line of demarkation which separates the good from the bad characters in the book. The central figures are the young Secretary of Legation in London, whose duty it is to frustrate the designs of the conspirators, and a charming young woman of the world who causes him many heroic struggles between love and duty. Serious novel readers may hold up their hands in horror at the liberties that Mr. Wells takes with the conventionalities of fiction, but no one who craves for rich, wholesome amusement can consider himself unrepaid for having read the book from cover to cover. All that is impossible and extraordinary assumes the appearance of reality, and the illusion by a curious tour de force is most seriously maintained. Incidentally one receives vivid impressions of London's smart set, viewed from the anteroom of a foreign legation. In fact the atmosphere of diplomacy permeates everything. It is like a bal masqué; only the unmasking at the very end reveals the scare that have been smarting, but unseen.

In this little book the heroes and heroines are less important than the stage setting, which is fortunate as, to use an Hibernicism, they are more than ordinarily ordinary. The descriptions of Old Washington are adroitly introduced by means of their adventures and love affairs, however, and the reader is thus nourished with a moderate supply of historical meat smothered in a sauce of romance.

The present Washington gives very little idea of the Washington that was in existence before the war of 1812. Precisely a century ago the Secretary of the Treasury wrote to his wife: "The Capitol is situated on an eminence, which I should suppose was near the centre of the city. It is a mile and a half from the President's house. There is one good tavern about forty rods from the Capitol, and several other houses which are built and erecting, but I do not perceive how the members of Congress can possibly secure lodgings unless they will consent to live like scholars in a college or monks in a monastery, crowded ten or twenty in one house, and utterly secluded from society. The only resource for such as wish to live comfortably will, I think, be found in Georgetown, three miles distant, over as bad a road in Winter as the clay grounds near Hartford." And in the same year Mrs. Adams wrote to her daughter after arriving at the Executive Mansion: "I have no looking glasses but dwarfs for this house, nor a twentieth part lamps enough to light it." Eight years made a number of changes, however, and at the time the story opens the city was beginning to emerge from its unkempt condition, streets were being cleared, mudholes filled up, walks laid, and handsome houses erected. There were plenty of mirrors in the White House, (which by the way, was not the "White" House, we believe, until after it was rebuilt from the ruins left by the British invasion of 1814,) and much gayety went on both at Washington and Georgetown.

Social life as we see it in this account of one family's experiences had many charms not forecast by Mrs. Adams. Besides the balls and tea drinkings, there were picnics on the banks of the Potomac, and excursions in the Spring of the year up the river to the falls, the excursionists making the trip in luxury, "followed by great, clumsy, covered wagons and a regiment of slaves who built fires and cooked viands that were best hot, or made delicious drinks, hot and cold." A good deal of money was spent on pleasure making and fine dressing, and the Washingtonians of 1809 or 1810 could certainly not have provoked Secretary Wolcott's commeat of 1800, that the people were poor and apparently "lived like fishes by eating each other." The old Southern tradition of a bountiful table had become well established, and the old colored cooks prepared meals to suit hearty appetites. "Supper's all right," said the genius of the Mason House to its hospitable mistress. "Dere's biskit 'nuff for a regiment. And cake by de bushel. Chloe see company afore in dis ole house. De ham pink as a rose, and de col' chicken 'nuff to make yer mouf water. An' cream an' jells an' fruit. De young folks no need to go to bed hungry."

By the time all the family love affairs are disposed of Madison's Administration has ended, the brilliant and gracious hospitality of Mrs. Dolly Madison has been transferred to private life, old Washington has been devastated by the British, plans for the new city are on foot, and old Washington is a thing of the now forgotten past. Its individuality is well worth preserving, and Mrs. Douglas has done what she could to preserve it for the boys and girls (more particularly the girls) of to-day.

This beautiful book, bound in richly tooled levant, contains in its illustrations a complete history of the development of English portrait painting from the days of P. Oudry, who painted Mary, Queen of Scots, to Prof. H. von Angeli, whose portrait of Queen Victoria was made in 1875. But, more than this, one has the opportunity to compare the work of foreigners who have painted English men and women with that of the British painters themselves. Then, too, the subjects themselves, as the title indicates—"National Worthies"—have considerable interest. And a certain portion of the volume is devoted to a description of the plates, in which are included brief biographical notes of the subjects, to which is often added a bit of criticism, striking if not always comprehensive. But as the portraits in the National Portrait Gallery do not all deal with the English, so in compiling the book two important portraits have been included which are neither of Englishmen nor by Englishmen—"Benjamin Franklin," painted at Paris by F. Baricolo, after a portrait by J. S. Duplessis, in 1782, and "George Washington," by Gilbert Stuart.

The admirable way in which these pictures have been reproduced deserves a word of special commendation. Several tints have been employed, each best suited to suggest the coloring of the original. These tints vary from reddish-brown to deep brown and black, and in the plate has been so preserved that the details are set forth with the same emphasis [illegible] as appear in the originals. As a rule the very

English Americana.

The accounts of the sale of the Ashburnham Americana in London last week recall the French proverb that the annoyances of our friends are not altogether displeasing to us. Assuredly we wish our English cousins no ill, but there is a certain mischievous satisfaction in reading of their laying down long prices to retain pamphlets about the priceless soil beneath our feet, and which might have been theirs still. No sigh by less than steam power, nor eloquence less than Rosebery's, can do justice to their regrets for what might have been. Seeing them suffer so, it behooves Americans to take care lest a similar thing, or a worse, happen to them. For instance, a few days ago we read that the church containing George Washington's arms was about to be destroyed. What will become of the arms? Will we have to buy them by subscription, or at auction, and give the buyers at the Ashburnham sale their revenge so quickly, and perhaps so amply? Would not every American be glad to know that this was the business of somebody in particular?

Happily this is the case. The National Trust for Places of Historic Interest and Natural Beauty was organised for just such purposes. It is a British corporation, and just in the nick of time it is seeking to organise American branches for co-operation in work parallel to the preservation of Mount Vernon on this side of the water and in—as another example, on the other side—the marking down of history in such places as Chelsea, so rich in its associations with Emerson, Carlyle, and Eliot, with Benjamin Franklin, and Steele, and Addison. Americana which so smacks of the English soil as this can only be preserved where they are, and whoever is interested in them, or in their like, would appreciate a share in the good work. And there is another part of the society's scheme—indicated by the latter part of its title—which is scarcely less useful, and is exemplified by the part it took in preserving the rights of the public in the Lakes of Killarney. The trust plans an embodiment for a Greater England atmosphere in London, to be maintained as a bureau of information, available to [illegible] from all parts of the English-speaking world. Merryweather's Work of Fifty Years Ago Reprinted Handsomely.*

The publishers have chosen for the second issue in a series of reprints intended for book lovers, of which the first volume, Richard de Bury's "Philobiblon," was issued some time ago, a little known work, "Bibliomania in the Middle Ages," by F. Somner Merryweather, which originally appeared in London in 1849. Little is known of Mr. Merryweather personally, diligent search having revealed only the entry of his name in the London Directories from 1840 to 1859, his occupation being given as that of bookseller, 14 King Street, Holborn, which address also appears on the title page of his "Bibliomania." During 1849 he also published "Dies Dominicæ," and during 1850 two other books, "Glimmerings in the Dark" and "Lives and Anecdotes of Misers."

The introduction to the present reprint is written by Mr. Charles Orr, Librarian of Case Library, Cleveland, who tells us that the last-mentioned book, "Lives and Anecdotes of Misers"—

Has been immortalized by Charles Dickens as one of the books bought at the bookseller's shop by Boffin, the Golden Dustmas, and which was read to him by the redoubtable Silas Wegg, during Sunday evenings at "Boffin's Bower."

Mr. Merryweather's book contains sketches of bookworms, collectors, Bible students, scribes, and illuminators, from the early Anglo-Saxon and Norman periods down to the introduction of printing into England. In his introduction Mr. Orr points out the antiquity of "Bibliomania," adding that during every century for more than 2,000 years many men have owed their chief enjoyment in life to books, book collecting in Rome becoming fashionable as early as the first century of the Christian era. Four centuries earlier Athens was the scene of an active trade in books, this activity shifting to Alexandria during the third century B. C., where it remained for many centuries, from which literary centre other countries were gradually affected.

For the purposes of the present book, the Middle Ages may be said to cover about 700 years, from the beginning of the seventh century down to the invention of printing, although more accurately bounded by the years 500 to 1,500 A. D. About the middle of the present century, Mr. Orr tells us, the period lying between the fall of the Roman Empire and the revival of learning, which had been generally referred to as the Dark Ages, and treated as having been without learning or scholarship of any sort, began to receive more attention, a disposition being shown to grant to mediæval times a proper place in the history of the preservation and distribution of books, Merryweather's "Bibliomania in the Middle Ages," being one of the earliest books in England devoted to this subject. Its author has made no attempt at chronological arrangement, his book being largely a record of old monastic days, and of the book treasures and most famous book lovers of such time. Indeed, the whole book will be found rich in stores of bibliophilic interest.

Mr. Orr also adds for the benefit of those readers who become sufficiently interested in Mr. Merryweather's presentation of the love for books which existed even during the so-called Dark Ages, a considerable amount of parallel reading, such as Kenelm Digby's "Mores Catholici; or, Ages of Faith," London, 1848, or "The Dark Ages," by S. R. Maitland, London, 1845, or the recently issued "Books and Their Makers During the Middle Ages," by George Haven Putnam, all of which furnish abundant evidence of the care expended upon the production and preservation of books during those early days.

Mr. Orr also emphasizes a fact that is, of course, well known to all book lovers, that book production, from an art standpoint, was fully abreast of all other arts during that period. Most of the beautiful work of those early days was done from pure love of the occupation, many a man shut safely away in some monastic retreat dedicating his entire life to the production of a single beautiful volume. The work of transcribing in these monasteries was held to be an equal equivalent for labor in the fields. The Rule of St. Ferreol, written in the sixth century, says: "He who does not turn up the earth with the plow ought to write the parchment with his fingers."

Mr. Merryweather's book being in reality a defense of the bibliomania of the Middle Ages, he gives his readers but little information as to the processes of bookmaking in these early ages; but Mr. Orr, in his introduction, has partly supplied this want by giving us a long and interesting extract on the subject, taken from Theodore De Vinne's "Invention of Printing," which will be found of great value.

Mr. Merryweather's introductory chapter reviews the immense amount of damage done the treasures of the monkish ages by all sorts of book destroyers, the advocates of the Reformation being very active in such work. The author is most enthusiastic in his attempt to show that in the olden times in "Merrie Englande" a passion which Dibden has christened bibliomania, existed there, and that there were many cloistered bibliophiles as warm and enthusiastic in book collecting as the doctor himself. Mr. Merryweather also adds:

*BIBLIOMANIA IN THE MIDDLE AGES. By F. Somner Merryweather. With an Introduction by Charles Orr, Librarian of Case Library. New York: Meyer Brothers & Co. 1900. $2.50.

...considerable caution in forming an opinion of the nature and extent of learning prevalent during those ages which preceded the discovery of the art of printing.

Mr. Merryweather's book will be found to touch upon all sorts of details, such as the duties of the monkish librarian, rules of the library, lending books, books allowed to monks for private reading, the support of such libraries and a thousand and one small matters, which help to reconstruct those old days for us. He also describes the great care used in copying, the booksellers of the Middle Ages, the circulating libraries, calligraphic art, and the special aids afforded early students—a law being passed in Paris in 1342 compelling all public booksellers to keep books to lend out for hire, the high prices asked and great scarcity of books preventing students from obtaining them in any other way.

As all the great monasteries are taken up in turn and their books described, as well as those collectors whose names stand out prominently—Alcuin, Richard de Bury, Charles V. of France, Henry II. of England, and scores of others—every page of the book being written from love of the subject, we can see how wise a choice the publishers have made in selecting this little-known book for reproduction in a series intended for book lovers.

Typographically the book is very satisfactory, from its plain board covers and paper label, its dignified type, attractive headbands and tailpieces, its initials and title page, down to its least important detail. The edition is limited to 500 copies, printed from type—25 on Japan paper, No. 1 to 25, at $10 per copy, while the ordinary edition on deckle-edged paper, No. 26 to 500, are to be had at $3.50 per copy.

John Fox's New Kentucky Story.*

Count Tolstoi to the contrary, love and war make the strongest appeals to average humanity, and a story which deals with both is sure of a wide public. Mr. Fox has already demonstrated his ability to write well, and we think he has never written quite so well as in the story before us. We begin to know our Kentucky, and to love it, even though it does not "rain law" there quite as much as so fair and so gallant a State deserves. Mr. Fox writes with enthusiasm for the face of nature in his Blue Grass home, and for the men and women whom he finds worthy of their environment. His war is not the war of our Revolution, (laus Deo,) nor yet The War, still writ large in many memories. It is the war with Spain, which, unlike our great civil conflict, has speedily become mellow for romantic treatment, the truth being that in our minds there was never any root of bitterness for those poor Spaniards whom we killed. The larger part of Mr. Fox's story is concerned with the muster and mobilizing of troops, with the field of battle, and with the horror and pathos of the hospital. Of these things he writes as one who had part in them all. His pictures are both realistic and minute.

Since the romancers persist in finding in war a fruitful theme, it is well that the old methods of describing it should have passed away. A battle in the hands of a novelist was once all glitter and glory. If wounded heroes were brought upon the scene in order that we might have dying speeches of repentance, of renunciation, of general clearing up of mysteries, the doughty warriors never suggested physical suffering; they were as painless and placid as the old masters' St. Sebastians, stuck full of arrows. Now to the writer of fiction a battle is a battle, a thing of maddening heat, and thirst, and pain, and sickening sights and sounds. Oftentimes we read with a shudder of repulsion, but it is well it should be so. The more the veil is stripped from the loathsome features of war the less will war appeal to the imagination. Mr. Fox shows, however, the indisputable fact that in the heroism and endurance it demands lies a regenerating power for many selfish or indolent natures, although perhaps it corrupts more than it exalts, and, at any rate, the cardinal virtues might be better nourished than with blood. Mr. Fox, while unsparing of the grime, the toil, the horror, throws into bright relief the good that came from the recent conflict—the new welding of North and South and certain personal benefits to the characters of his tale, notably the arousing of his hero from a supine attitude of discouragement, and the bringing together of long-estranged hearts. Crittenden's love for the "little brother," and the symbolic significance of the words to his own mind, are tenderly and deftly shown. Judith Page is an example of noble womanhood, franker and less withdrawn than Southern girls are wont to be in their romances. The negro is very well done, and there is not too much of him. To make the unknown rival Crittenden's "bunkie" savors too much of the novelist's old trick, and is so much less than probable as to touch the impossible.

The story will please all who care for its two great topics, and will be of special interest to those who invaded Cuba with the Rough Riders. Its vivid and picturesque style carries one along with the stirring events among which the tale moves. It has the great merits of being not too long and of being eminently readable, as well as of possessing historic value and excellent literary quality.

Each volume has an Introduction by BLISS PERRY.

The Little Masterpiece Library is edited by PROFESSOR BLISS PERRY, formerly Professor of English Literature in Princeton University, now Editor of The Atlantic Monthly. It is no hastily selected compilation for an ephemeral sale. The Editor has chosen, with the greatest care and conscientiousness, those CHEFS D'OEUVRES of the greatest English-speaking writers which are of such beauty and value as to be at the foundation of English culture.

Yet how many people can say that they have thoroughly assimilated, or even hastily read, each and every one of these immortal works?

The binding and printing of the volumes are beautifully executed. The size and shape so convenient that the books fairly invite the reading that every intelligent American would want to have as a part of his or her intellectual culture. Each volume, bound in handsome red cloth, contains a really fine and artistic photogravure frontispiece of the celebrated writer whose masterpiece it contains.

A more charming addition to a library, one that will be REALLY READ, or a more tasteful Christmas gift—or twelve Christmas gifts, for the volumes are not numbered—could not be imagined.

The publishers of the Masterpiece Library have sold it at the rate of $8.00 for the 12 volumes, and have claimed it was at that rate an exceptional bargain.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS.

The Book of Book Plates, edited by Joseph W. Simpson and published quarterly by Messrs. Williams & Norgate of Edinburgh, in an edition limited to 500 copies, at 5s. per annum, is so thoroughly artistic in spirit and treatment and its articles so charming, that its pages will be found of great interest even to those to whom the subject of book plates does not make special appeal. From its dainty cover, with its striking woodcut design; its fine title page and frontispiece, in wide woodcut borders; through all its full-page illustrations, including the most satisfactory advertising pages we can remember, the art side of this little quarterly is most remarkable. Where all its illustrations are so good, it is scarcely fair to speak of any one example, but the full-page reproduction of a book plate made for Margaret O'Hara by James Guthrie, is so unusually fine, both in design and in execution, that a word must be said as to the superb manner in which the color values and rich painty effect of its black and whites are managed. The typography of these numbers is equally satisfactory, the type, proportion of margin, and quality and tone of the paper being extremely good; while articles like "The Collector," by Richard Stewart, and a cleverly written paper on "Choosing a Book Plate" will be found entirely worthy of their artistic setting. The first number of this interesting quarterly having appeared in April last, subscriptions could probably commence with that number.

Mr. W. H. Wilkins, whose "Love of an Uncrowned Queen" has lately appeared from the press of H. S. Stone & Co. of Chicago, is a graduate of Clare College, Cambridge, and while at the university was Vice President of the Union, succeeding Lord Randolph Churchill as President of the University Carlton Club. He has twice been private secretary to members of the English Government, has traveled widely, and lived in the East End of London to study the social position of its people, such residence leading to articles on social questions which were published in The Nineteenth Century and The National Review. Mr. Wilkins is the author of several novels, and contributed a volume on the alien question to the Social Subjects of To-day Series, as well as a monograph to the Social Science Series. He is a Fellow of the Royal Historical Society and a member of the Council of the Royal Society of Literature. Agreeing with the Bishop of London that "history is always next door to fiction," both calling upon the imagination, Mr. Wilkins is much interested in biography and history. His "Romance of Isabel, Lady Burton," is in its sixth edition, while, besides editing the unpublished manuscripts of the late Sir Richard Burton, he has published "The Jew, the Gypsy, and El Islam," a revised edition of Lady Burton's life of her husband, and her own book on "The Passion Play at Ober-Ammergau." Mr. Wilkins is now at work on a new historical memoir, the life of Caroline of Anspach, Consort of George II.

Mr. Walter H. Page, the editor of The World's Work, said the other day that everybody ought to do at least one thing in this world, and do it effectually. And he added that he would be perfectly satisfied if his own tombstone could truthfully say that he had achieved the great little aim of his life. "How would you have your epitaph read?" was asked. "Walter Hines Page. He killed the Preface," replied the editor. We sympathize with Mr. Page's mission in life. In most cases, but particularly in fiction, the preface is not only unnecessary, but an absolute crime committed against all candid and intelligent readers. But of all abominations the preface by which an old hand in the literary profession undertakes to introduce a new one is the worst. We have of late been rebuked for mentioning Mr. Kipling in connections that have seemed to some of our reads to be trivial, and yet we cannot refrain, in the present instance, from quoting from a letter he once addressed to Mr. F. T. Bullen, who had requested him to contribute a preface to "The Cruise of the Cachalot." It is very good advice:

Some rather interesting experiences have taught me that the best way of making a man hate me for life is to meddle in any way with his work. * * * If the book is good, it will go, and if not, nothing will make it stir. * * * All the men who want to stick a knife into me would stick it into you as soon as they saw my name prefacing your book. Bitter experience has taught that that kind of thing doesn't pay. If a book stands by itself, it will stand by itself; but if you use another chap's name to help it to a start, you will get all the whacks that the other chap would have got if he had written the book, in addition to a few whacks on your own merits.

One of the reasons for the high standard maintained by the famous Chiswick Press, now 110 years old, is the fact that its managers and owners have always possessed artistic skill and knowledge of mechanical details to an unusual extent, as even the most casual reading of a book published half a dozen years ago by the Grolier Club, "The Whitinghams, Printers," will show. Mr. Charles F. Jacobi, the present managing partner of the press, is an acknowledged authority on typography, having issued more than half a dozen books devoted to the subject, one of which, "A Practical Treatise on the Art of Typography," is an accepted text book for students, giving a particularly fine insight into the technique of printing, while his "On the Making and Issuing of Books" and "Some Notes on Books and Printing" are of great interest to all lovers of fine typography. He is also the author of a charmingly printed little volume on "The Printing of Modern Books," a reprint of a paper read before the Bibliographical Society, and printed in its transactions, which was unfortunately issued for presentation only. The press has a great reputation for careful proof reading, so that the transactions, proceedings, and other publications of many learned societies bear the familiar dolphin and anchor, which has come to be considered the hall-mark of the best English typography, while the Chiswick Press initials, head bands, and tail pieces are and always have been of unusual beauty and interest.

Mr. Berkley Updike has just issued a beautifully printed, "List of Books Issued by the Merrymount Press," with full bibliographical details, including his first publication, "The Altar Book," 350 copies, imperial folio, at $75 each, down to his "Tacitus," now in the press, the text of this edition of the "Agricola" being that of Henry Furneaux, lacunae in the text having been carefully filled by Prof. Morgan of Harvard. The volume is in folio, printed in Merrymount type, designed by Bertram Goodhue, limited to 100 copies, to be bound in boards, the design by Mrs. Henry Whitman. The price is not definitely settled, but will probably be from $12 to $15 per copy. A long note on the work of the press calls attention to the fact that Mr. Updike is prepared to undertake the preparation of all works which require individual treatment, plates being supplied publishers, or the whole book delivered in complete form. His fonts of type have been largely increased, so that the press is in a position to undertake the printing and binding of large editions, as high as 30,000 copies of a single book having been successfully handled. A beautiful new font of type, designed by Mr. Herbert P. Home, first known to us in connection with the Century Guild of London, is being cut, in which several important books will be issued, Mr. Updike striving to make the distinguishing mark of his press "not a certain 'manner,' but an excellence in whatever manner is most suitable to the work intrusted to his care."

It is pleasing to see how universally friendly a reception the letters of I. E. Brown, the American edition of which was recently published by E. P. Dutton & Co., have had from the best English critics. Andrew Lang speaks of the delightful heartiness of the letters, the work of a man at once a scholar and a humorist, as well as full of all noble qualities. A writer in Literature thinks these letters worthy of a place on the small shelf containing those of Horace Walpole, Cowper, Lamb, Gray, and Fitz Gerald, while Henley is even more enthusiastic, claiming they suggest Byron and Stevenson, "with more heart than either perhaps, and certainly a more even brilliancy, a larger set of interests, a riper wisdom, a wider and kindlier sense of the world's beauty, and the essential graciousness of human life. * * * The letters of a man of genius, and men of genius are rarer than you might believe." Quiller-Couch says the volumes are most fascinating, confirming a fame which, though never wide, was always unquestioned. The letters lack a portrait, which one somehow sorely misses, but Macmillan & Co. have just issued a collected edition of Mr. Brown's poems which should attract all readers of the letters, and possess an added interest for them by containing a portrait of their author in cap and gown, which is fortunately that of just the type of man whose mental image is brought up by a reading of the letters. The face shows the scholar, but above all, the kindly humorist so charmingly revealed in his written work.

Mrs. Freiligrath-Kroeker writes from Cedar Lodge, Honor Oak Road, Forest Hill, London:

Being engaged on an English memoir of my late father, Ferdinand Freiligrath, I should be greatly indebted to any one possessing letters from him to kindly let me see the same. I should return any such letters at once after inspection. May I ask you to kindly insert my request in your valuable paper?

The memoir will especially treat of Freiligrath's long stay in England, for which Mrs. Kroeker possesses much material in hitherto unpublished correspondence of his English and American friends, Lord Lytton, Lord Houghton, and many others. Freiligrath is chiefly remembered in this country for having made the first German translation of the early poems of Longfellow. He also made translations of Burns, Moore, and De Musset. In Germany, as a writer of lyrics, he has long stood in the front rank. His collected works were published in six volumes in Stuttgart, in 1870.

An Englishman, W. S. Lilly, who is about to enter for the first time, at any rate avowedly, the ranks of novelists, has long been known to magazine readers here and abroad as a writer of philosophical and social subjects. His appearances are familiar as an opponent of Schopenhauer, a disciple of Newman, and a patron of Mr. Chamberlain. He is completing a novel of "London society," in which he is to take holiday from rather dull controversy and from the duties of the Secretaryship of the Catholic Union. It is a little coincidence that the two other writers of Catholic polemics in England most familiar to magazine readers preceded Mr. Lilly into the region of romance, Dr. St. George Mivart and the Rev. Dr. Barry.

Miss Beatrice Harraden is recovering from the serious accident which she sustained while in Norway, and is now back at her home in Hampstead, England, and able to take short walks. She slipped from her pony while on a mountaineering expedition, seriously injuring her ankle and foot. While in Norway Miss Harraden received a startling revelation of the free and easy way of the foreign translator. On examining the Norwegian translation of "Ships that Pass in the Night," she found to her astonishment that the last chapter had been omitted. She remonstrated with the perpetrator of the outrage, who replied coolly that in her judgment the story was greatly improved by the omission of the last chapter. There are others who will doubtless agree with her. Still a translation should be a translation.

Philadelphia has a literary coterie of its own, which in times past has been alightingly called "provincial." As a matter of fact, there is nothing "provincial" about the Philadelphia literati whose doyen is the venerable Dr. Mitchell, except the fact that they live in the City of Brotherly Love. Several Philadelphians are to be found among the authors' lists of current books this year, and among them, Mr. Edward Robins, who recently supplied "Twelve Great Actors" and "Twelve Great Actresses" for G. P. Putnam's Sons' Top Round Series. He has also written for a Philadelphia publisher a boys' story of Washington and Braddock's ill-fated campaign against Fort Duquesne. So much has been said about Washington's later life that it is rather a relief occasionally to see the Father of His Country depicted as an ardent, impetuous youth craving for military glory.

In the current number of The Columbia University Quarterly there appears a paragraph quite likely to surprise many persons and inspire numerous inquiries concerning its significance. It is printed in that part of The Quarterly devoted to a description of Columbia University bibliography—"Journals issued under the entire direction of officers of Columbia University"—and reads as follows:

BOOKMAN.—Founded in 1895; devoted to the criticisms of American and foreign literature in all its forms; containing articles, book reviews, correspondence, and editorial comment upon current events; edited by Harry Thurston Peck. New York: Dodd, Mead & Co.; monthly, (136 pp.) 20c.; per year, $2.

We are quite sure that whatever work Prof. Peck performs for The Bookman is done in his private capacity and not as a member of the Columbia Faculty, and that in so doing he is under the direction of Dodd, Mead & Co., who own and control the periodical. Mr. James MacArthur, who is now the London representative of Doubleday, Page & Co., was from 1894 until a year ago the active editor of The Bookman, and it was owing to his good taste, knowledge, and activity that the periodical has taken its place in the front rank of the monthly illustrated reviews of literature.

The third issue of The Palmetto Press, "The Blessed Damosel," with a beautiful photogravure reproduction of Rossetti's painting of the same name, on Japan paper, laid in, has just appeared. The little book is published in an edition of 500 copies, on Whatman paper, printed from beautiful new type, which is most satisfactory in design and cutting. The cover of this dainty little booklet is in Whatman paper, with the title in gold letters. The title page shows a most attractive border, white flowers and leaves in a solid black background, inclosing a centre panel on which will be found the title in good lettering in black and the attractive press mark adopted by Mr. Washburn inured. The first page also shows a very pretty initial letter, embodying the three lilies and seven stars of the poems, both initial and border being the work of Miss A. I. Colcroft, who signs her work with a pretty monogram. The typography and general appearance of the present issue show an immense advance over those of the press's first publication, "The Bivouac of the Dead." The ordinary edition, 400 in all, of this beautiful poem, in its present attractive setting, is published at 50 cents per copy, while the remaining hundred, in antique vellum paper wrappers, fully illuminated in water colors, can be had from The Palmetto Press, Aiken, S. C., at $1 per copy.

The sixth annual issue of Luther Livingston's "American Book Prices Current," the volume covering the period from Sept. 1, 1899, to Sept. 1, 1900, is now passing through the press. The current volume, nearly six hundred pages in extent, records a larger number of items, with prices realized, taken from sales catalogues of the year, than will be found in any of the previous issues. The volumes are attractively printed from type at the University Press in an edition limited to five hundred copies, bound in buckram, gilt top, price $6 net, which will be raised to $7.50 net per copy on the first of January next. Volume I. of this series is entirely out of print, copies fetching large prices, while Volume IV., of which but four copies remain, is to be had at $10.50 per copy; while of the remaining volumes but a few copies are still available, which are to be had at $7.50 each. Mr. Livingston's work as editor has been unusually well done, the volumes being much more attractive in appearance, the type much more legible, and the arrangement of books under one alphabet, with additional record prices in notes, makes an American volume much easier to use than its English prototype.

Messrs. Doubleday, Page & Co. have just issued a most attractive [illegible] of Esther Singleton's "The Furniture of Our Forefathers." This work, which is to be published in eight parts, two of which will appear before Christmas, is said to be the first book devoted to strictly American furniture; "the Puritan home-made things, the quaint Dutch belongings, the rich furnishings of the great Southern Colonial mansions, the ways of telling the genuine thing, historical associations with special pieces, technical details, values, and marks, and all the other unwritten lore of the subject. Miss Singleton has traveled widely in search of information for the purposes of this book, studying old wills and inventories; while fine illustrations are to be a special feature of the volume. Each part will contain from thirty to forty illustrations, in photogravures, half-tones, and line-drawings, the plates being accompanied by critical descriptions by Russell Sturgis. The originals from which these reproductions are made are to be found in museums and private collections here and abroad—while furniture of historic interest, Washington's bed, the desks formerly belonging to Franklin and Madison, Jefferson's chair, &c., will also add to the interest of the book. The regular edition will be published at $2 per part; the large paper edition, 100 numbered copies, head pieces and initials hand-colored, will be $7.50 per part, while the edition de luxe, fifty numbered copies on Japan paper, plates, initials, and decorations hand-colored, will be $25 per part, orders for complete sets only being taken.

Mr. MacArthur, who contributes an interesting weekly article on books to The Daily Mail of London, has been recently criticised over there because he devotes too much space to American books and too little to the work of English authors. He quite disarms all prejudice, however, by explaining that "in every instance I have confined my remarks to those transatlantic authors whose work has been also published on this side, and whose names are well known in their own country, if not so familiar in ours. * * * Five years ago the best-selling novels in the States were imported from England, whereas to-day the most popular novels there are by American authors, and deal with American life and history." Mr. MacArthur names half a dozen American novels which have been published recently, all of which have sold over 50,000 copies in a few months, and adds:

It goes without saying that this successful cultivation of the home product will affect the keen competition that has existed for some years among American publishers over English authors, just as the latter will now have to compete in popular interest with the largely increasing number of American writers.

Mr. Winston Spencer Churchill sails [illegible] for New York in order to speak for [illegible] Astoria. Is it, however, one of the Major's little jokes when we read in a London paper that the son of the late Lord Randolph Churchill will be introduced by Mr. Winston Churchill, the author of "Richard Carvel"? Meanwhile the time is not inappropriate to recall the curious stories of mistaken identity which followed the publication of the American Churchill's "Celebrity," and which, with the appearance of "Richard Carvel," formed one of the relaxing features of contemporaneous literary gossip. It may be remembered that the distinguished American correspondent of a great London daily called Mr. Winston Churchill to account for flourishing "Richard Carvel" under borrowed plumes, and gravely asserted that the pseudonym he had employed was scarcely in good taste. To which the American Churchill replied that as he had been christened "Winston" he didn't see how he could be accused of writing under a pseudonym.

The edition of the works of Tolstoi before us is sufficiently well presented to give one an admirable idea of what the great Russian has produced in many fields of literature and why and when he produced it as he did. The editorial work by [illegible] Hapgood Dole is satisfactory, and [illegible] interesting introduction to [illegible] it. The illustrations, with many portraits and views illustrative of the great man's life at different periods. The letter-press is excellent, and the volumes are substantially bound. In short, we have what is a good readable edition of Tolstoi.

Practically all is given—his novels, from "War and Peace" and "Anna Karenina," to his last and greatest piece of fiction, "Resurrection," his wonderful realistic short stories of Russian life and character, his plays, and his essays in religion, art, and political economy. If one could possess only the works of one writer, Tolstoi, because he has touched human existence at so many different chords and from so many points of view, should be that one. He is universal or—nothing.

The Christmas Scribner's

The December (Christmas) Scribner's for 1900 is unusually rich both in text and illustrations. The beautiful cover, by Maxfield Parrish, is printed in nine colors, and there is a colored frontispiece and an eight-page scheme in colors. There are eight short stories, attractively illustrated, and other notable features.

Printed in Colors

An article on the art of Puvis de Chavannes, by the distinguished painter and art critic, Mr. John La Farge, is a prominent feature of the number. It is illustrated with remarkable reproductions in colors of several of the most celebrated of the works of Puvis—altogether one of the most beautiful and successful schemes of color illustration ever attempted in a magazine.

Short Stories Illustrated

HENRY VAN DYKE'S "Pichou" is a story of the great Hudson Bay Wilderness, describing the adventurous life of a dog who managed to live down a bad name and win a high place in the community. It is illustrated by Charles S. Chapman.

FRANK R. STOCKTON'S "The Vice-Consort" is one of the best and most original of the author's whimsical conceptions, full of drollery and human nature. It is illustrated by A. I. Keller.

THE LION'S MOUTH, by Henry W. and Alice Duer Miller, is an amusing bit of social comedy based upon the faculty a certain type of woman has for getting others into trouble. The illustrations are by H. C. Christy.

ERNEST SETON-THOMPSON'S story, "Johnny Bear," tells of the author's acquaintance with a little bear and its mother in Yellowstone Park; and their curious individuality and experience make the theme of one of Mr. Seton-Thompson's best stories. Fully illustrated by the author.

OCTAVE THANET'S "The Woman Who Understood" tells of the fine friendship of two women, developed from a chance meeting. It is illustrated by Henry Hutt.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH'S "An Untold Story" is a haunting little sketch, told with Mr. Aldrich's power of suggesting an ingenious mystery. Illustrated by Jules Guérin.

ARTHUR COLTON'S "The Emigrant East" is a story of delicate sentiment and romance, the scene of which is a dusty old book-shop kept by a former professor of Arabic and Greek with his pretty daughter as assistant. The illustrations are by Jessie Willcox Smith.

THE CRANE, by Francis Churchill Williams, is the story of a steel giant that did the heavy lifting at the Sampson Steel Works and of what befell its master. Illustrated by Clifford Carleton.

POEMS, POINT OF VIEW and THE FIELD OF ART. The Field of Art contains an interesting article on "Portrait Painting and the State" by Frank Fowler.

FICTION AND FACT.

A Political Novel, a Lively Romance, Some Love Stories, and a Book of Thrilling Personal Experiences.

Last week we had something to say here of our confidence in Mr. Zangwill's new book, which has since been published. It is called and so far as it is possible to judge in so short a time, its success is going to be fully up to our expectations. It is not a story of Jewish life, but gives a forceful and dramatic picture of the home and public life of an English statesman.

But that is neither here nor there. It is the best thing he has done.

* * * * * * *

If you hunted for a contrast to Mr. Zangwill's story you couldn't find a more complete one than van Tassel Sutphen's rattling good romance,

The Cardinal's Rose.

Here's a tale that will carry you off your feet, just as "The Prisoner of Zenda" did a few years ago. "The Cardinal's Rose" is a ruby of great value, belonging to a reigning house and almost their sole remaining resource. It is stolen—and—well, it would be a pity to tell you the story and spoil an evening for you.

Of course there's a beautiful Princess in the story and this time she's just as clever as she is beautiful—which is rather an innovation.

"All the world loves a lover," and that is the reason why a good love story generally succeeds. We published on Tuesday a volume of love stories by Mrs. Spencer Trask called Lessons in Love.

The tales in this volume are both strong and dainty and they have a certain dramatic force which isn't usual in short stories.

* * * * * * *

General George A. Forsyth has probably had as picturesque and brilliant a military career as any officer in our army. He has written a book about some of his personal experiences which must be of interest to everybody. The title is Thrilling Days in Army Life.

It tells the true story of Sheridan's Ride which General Forsyth shared with the great leader, of Lee's surrender, and of many other famous scenes in our military history.

And it's all told from the standpoint of a personal observer. Mr. Zogbaum has made the illustrations for the book.

NOTES AND NEWS.

Ralph Henry Barbour, who wrote that rattling good book about American school life, and particularly about football, "The Half-Back," is now having published through D. Appleton & Co. another tale of school life and interscholastic sport entitled "For the Honor of the School," with illustrations by C. M. Relyea. The hero in the new book is the ideal type of the American, being both scholar and athlete.

"Seed Thoughts for Public Speakers," by Arthur T. Pierson, is being published by Funk & Wagnalls Company. It contains over 600 paragraphs of wit, humor, anecdote, and historical fact.

"Who Goes There?" being a tale of the civil war, the plot of which turns upon amnesia, is being vigorously reviewed in England. It is published over there, also in this country, by The Macmillan Company.

"In Oudemon," being the reminiscences of an occasional traveler, edited by Henry S. Drayton, will be published next week by R. S. Mighill & Co. It is a romance, dealing with an unknown race of people living somewhere in South America, "under the equator."

"The Last Years of the Nineteenth Century," by Mrs. E. W. Latimer, a book intended to bring up to date each of the author's six "Nineteenth Century" histories, will be published next week by A. C. McClurg & Co. The author may be said to treat of her historical subjects in a free-hand "editorial" way, which, however, does not preclude the presence of facts for fact's sake.

"Girl from Mexico," and other stories and sketches by Dr. Miles G. Hyde, is being published this week by Isaac H. Blanchard Company, also "In Old Rousseau," by Dr. W. S. Birge, descriptive of life and scenes in the Caribbean Islands.

McClure, Phillips & Co. have in press Mansfield's acting edition of "King Henry V." The books will be illustrated with portraits of Mr. Mansfield in the title rôle and with scenes from the play.

The Macmillan Company is publishing this week "The Clergy in American Life and Letters," by Daniel Delany Addison; "Jesus Christ and the Social Question," by Dr. Francis Greenwood Peabody of Harvard, and "Foes in Law," by Rhoda Broughton.

G. P. Putnam's Sons are publishing this week Leslie Stephen's "English Utilitarians," in three volumes; autograph editions of Eben Philpott's "Children of the Mist," and "Sons of the Morning"; "Maya: A Story of Yucatan," by William Dudley Foulke, and Part III. of Prof. Blok's "History of the People of the Netherlands," translated by Miss Ruth Putnam.

Bismarck's letters to his wife, which Harper & Brothers will shortly publish, are dated some years prior to the year 1847. (the date of his marriage,) and extend to 1892. In Germany the Cotta's are bringing out the work with much explanatory material, something after the form of Bismarckian memorabilia. German readers of the first installment of these memoirs issued in that country have been charmed with the revelation of the statesman's married life, for the letters show him to have been in his domestic circle one of the most lovable men in history.

An account of the domestic and religious rites and ceremonies of the Siamese, by Ernest Young, late of the Department of Education of Siam, is being issued by the New Amsterdam Book Company. It gives a good idea of the political life of that country, which at no distant day is destined to play an important part in the Far Eastern question.

"The Siege of the Legations," written by Dr. Morrison, the well-known correspondent of The London Times in Peking, and which originally occupied several pages in that paper, is being republished in this country in The Living Age. The first installment appeared in the issue of Nov. 17. This narrative is of absorbing interest, for it gives graphic descriptions of the plight of the legations in Peking last Summer, as viewed by a trained writer.

"The Powers That Prey" is a unique collection of stories which, perhaps, have acquired timeliness in view of the present reform movement in New York City. The tales deal with the relation of the criminal classes to the police, and show how vice is protected and carried on, not only under the eyes of the police, but with the aid of these servants of the law. McClure, Phillips & Co. are the publishers.

After the current number The International Monthly, edited by F. G. Richardson of Burlington, Vt., will no longer be published by the Macmillan Company.

Next week there will appear from the press of R. H. Russell a collection of comic opera lyrics by Harry B. Smith, taken from "Robin Hood," "The Serenade," "The Highwayman," "The Wizard of the Nile," "Rob Roy," "The Fencing Master," "The Little Corporal," "Half a King," "The Idol's Eye," "The Casino Girl," "The Rounders," "The Mandarin," "The Cadet Girl," "Papa's Wife," "Foxy Quiller," &c., the music for which has been composed by Reginald De Koven, Victor Herbert, Ludwig Englander, and others.

Harper & Brothers are publishing this week "The Mantle of Elijah," by I. Zangwill; "The Cardinal Rose," by Van Tassel Sutphen; "Lessons in Love," by Katrina Trask; "Book of Dragons," by E. Nesbet, and "Thrilling Days in Army Life," by Gen. Forsyth. In the last-named book, which is illustrated by R. F. Zogbaum, the chapter on "Sheridan's Ride" has more than ordinary interest. The author, who was an eye witness to it all, completely refutes the statements recently made to belittle this famous ride. Here is a rather interesting footnote: "I found Gen. Sheridan standing on the line of battle on the pike, at the junction of Gen. Getty's division of the Sixth Corps and the remnant of the Army of West Virginia, or what was called the Eighth Corps. In the group of officers who were standing around him were Gen. R. B. Hayes and Lieut. William McKinley, both of whom have since been President of the United States."

The édition de luxe of Tennyson's "In Memoriam," with 140 rubricated initials especially designed by Blanche McManus, is now in the last 150 copies. No more will be issued except for the London market, which has already contracted for 500 copies. M. F. Mansfield is the publisher.

In a large octavo volume, Prof. Barrett Wendell's long-awaited "Literary History of America" has made its appearance from the press of Charles Scribner's Sons. It is a volume which shows an immense amount of study and research, a faculty for condensation, and a prevailing spirit to make matter-of-fact things interesting. That the book is an authority we believe no one will question, but its form of construction and the perfect coherence maintained throughout have a particular lesson to impart to American writers.

We hear from the Rev. John D. Tabb that his little book "Bone Rules; or, Skeleton of English Grammar," "is now undergoing a much-needed revision and will put out new leaves with the coming Spring."

H. Reuterdahl, the marine artist, has returned from abroad with drawings to illustrate a series of articles on the life and customs of the navies of the world, which will appear in early numbers of Collier's Weekly.

Mr. Charles Denby, former United States Minister to China, has written an introduction to "China's Open Door," by Rounsevelle Wildman, United States Consul General at Hongkong, which is being published by Lothrop of Boston. The same publisher announces that the one hundred and twenty-fifth thousandth of "Eben Holden" is just off the press. The book was published, it will be recalled, scarcely three months ago.

McClure, Phillips & Co., publishers of "M. Beaucaire," have found it necessary to go to press with another edition of 10,000 copies. This is the sixth edition of this book, and brings the total up to 36,000. The author, Mr. Tarkington, is at present in New York, conferring with Mr. Mansfield in regard to the stage production of the story.

More Readers of Milton.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

Pray do not suppose that Milton is wholly without readers. And when they are enumerated, I must ask not to be overlooked. I have read every line of his English verse, and have committed to memory many of his sonnets, "L'Allegro," "Il Penseroso," "Lycidas," the "Ode on the Morning of Christ's Nativity," and the first book (800 and odd lines) of "Paradise Lost." For many years it has been my practice to refresh my recollection of the ode by re-reading it on Christmas Day. J. B. G.

New York Nov. 10, 1900.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

If any book is laid away with me in my casket, as "Shakespeare" was in Tennyson's, let it be the precious worn and torn little copy of John Milton's poems, complete, which I carried in a saddlebag during three years spent in the war for the preservation of the Union, and which has since been to me what it was then, a solace and delight.

Fortunately for me I was never drilled in Milton's meters as a parsing ground, and thus taught to weary of them as of a task. His verse early captivated me by its grandeur and by the supernaturalness of the theme. The pretty conceit that in making Milton blind the Lord shut him in and irradiated his mind with celestial light, that he might see and tell "of things invisible to mortal sight" is in harmony with the poet's own thoughts, as expressed in the opening of the third book of "Paradise Lost," and is easily excusable. For where, except in the Revelation of St. John the Divine, shall we find a description of the abode of the blest so lofty and satisfying, or listen to a song about heavenly things so sublime and holy, as in "Paradise Lost"? Nothing in literature that is not Biblical has supplied me with so much rich and comforting food for thought, both in sorrow and in joy. Nowhere else that I know of can I meet such encouragement to duty, such admonition to "stand fast," such warning to "repel temptation," such counsel to "live happy, and love, but, first of all, Him, Whom to love is to obey."

Like the couple mentioned by your correspondent, I was "smit with the love of sacred song," and early in life memorized the first two books, and many notable passages besides, including the warlike episode in the fourth book, beginning, "Now had night measured with her shadowy cone," where Satan, squat like a toad, close at the ear of Eve, devising mischief, is returned to his own likeness as the grisly king by a touch from the celestially tempered spear of Ithuriel, which no falsehood could endure, and a little later, smarting under the severe rebuke of Gabriel, "dilated stood, like Teneriffe or Atlas." In my own experience I believe that the study of Milton, while rewarding the intellect, helps the soul in its relation to God.

HENRY M. CALVERT.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 15, 1900.

Our correspondents seem in fair way to rival the historical achievement of Macaulay, of whom it was boasted that he could repeat the whole of "Paradise Lost" from memory. May THE SATURDAY REVIEW not hope to hear from them when they shall be able to stand at Macaulay's side?

Dodd, Mead & Co. are issuing a new catalogue of Americana under the title of "Books Relating to America." On Page 18 we find an interesting description of Benjamin Franklin's masterpiece of printer's work, published in 1744 and entitled "M. T. Cicero's Cato Major; or, His Discouree of Old Age." Another interesting item which is fully described is William Hooke's "Nevv Englands Teares for Old Englands Feares," printed in London by I. D., 1641.

Two New Studies of Shakespeare.*

These two volumes—"William Shakespeare: Poet, Dramatist, and Man," by Mr. Mabie, and "Guglielmo Shakespeare: Il Poeta e l'Uomo," by Signor Garlanda—represent from curiously different points of view an epitome of about all the scholarship and culture that the Avon poet has inspired. While Mr. Mabie has striven to be essentially modern in his treatment—it is astonishing what a clear and vivid personality he has managed to fabricate from the material at his disposal—on the other hand, Signor Garlanda having taken for granted certain well-authenticated facts in the poet's life, considers the plays and poems as works of art without attempting to discover therein the mystery and secret of the poet's life.

A by no means unimportant feature of Mr. Mabie's work is the illustrations that the book contains. Besides several handsome photogravures of modern scenes of Shakespeare's country—Mary Arden's cottage, the Stratford Grammar School, Stratford from the Memorial Theatre—there are reproductions in half-tone and drawings of much historic material, such as prints, paintings, manuscripts, and sculpture. In a word, out of the scant data concerning the actual life of the poet, the interpretations of contemporaneous records, the commentaries on the plays themselves, Mr. Mabie has surrounded himself with the atmosphere of the Elizabethan period, and in it has constructed an intensely human figure that strongly impresses the imagination, if not always through the reproduction of absolute fact, then through a keen sense of visualization. The illusion never weakens. In this way, tracing the education of the poet and the development of his genius Mr. Mabie passes through the plays, and adds to what they reveal of the poet's knowledge, ideas, and life hits of aesthetic comment which are altogether charming.

This is the main point: The aesthetic quality of Mr. Mabie's work. We may accept or reject the portrait he draws, but we cannot be unmindful of his style and the general literary plan he has followed. His book may present nothing new to Shakespearean scholars, but it puts before the eyes of those who care for polite literature a volume of much charm and culture.

To the Italian reader, Signor Garlanda's work will appeal as one which for the first time presents a synthetical study of the achievements of the great English poet before his eyes. To one who has studied Shakespeare solely through English sources much appears crude and not infrequently commonplace and trivial, but when passing through the purely historical plays we come to the tragedies and comedies the action of which takes place in Italy, we find Signor Garlanda full of a fine enthusiasm for the Englishman, which shows how truly the latter understood Italian color and character. In these pages we find a new phase of the poet presented, which has little in common with the work of Anglo-Saxon commentators. A fresh and vigorous meaning, too, is found in the passages from these particular plays that have been rendered into Italian, and the Italian titles, "Romeo a Giulietta," "Otello," "Il Mercante di Venezia," "Come vi Piace," "Tutto è Bene Quello che ben Finisce," and "Fatica d'Amore Perduta," fall softly from the tongue. But to his own countrymen, however, Signor Garlanda's work comes as a revelation and an education.

Paul Du Chaillu's New Books.*

Photographed upon that mysterious film upon which the record of many impressions are made is the picture of a small boy who carried around with him as an inseparable companion a large green book with a very fierce gold gorilla on the cover. The boy neither knew nor cared that the critics were wagging their heads at the author and thrusting their tongues in their cheeks as they discussed his narrative. He confidingly accepted the gorillas and dwarfs and other impossibilities which the critics rejected, and the event proved that he was right.

Paul Du Chaillu, African explorer, hunter, lecturer, writer of books of travel and adventure, is still making hay—long may his sun shine—after forty years. The unsurpassed charm of the large green book was largely due to the author's vivacity and enthusiasm, and these qualities still characterize his work.

In the latest book from his pen, which he calls "The World of the Great Forest," Du Chaillu has given us travel, but it is the travel of the beasts and birds of the forest through their own wilds. The adventure is not that of human beings who hunt and live in the everlasting gloom of the African wilderness, but of the hunted. In other words, it is natural history made attractive and even exciting by a competent and at the same time imaginative authority. The book is composed of a series of sketches or stories, each dealing with some new animal or group of animals, and showing a very remarkable familiarity with its habits of life.

The animals all talk very plain English, which may be an advantage or disadvantage, as one chooses to regard it. It is perhaps as well that they talk just enough to explain their own life, with its manifold dangers and alarms and triumphs, but not enough to suggest that they are perhaps a notch above human beings of average intelligence or information. If it is true that we could not well prize the ghastly, dismal creatures of Kipling's jungle tales, or hearty, free-and-easy Brer Rabbit, or the idealized creations of Mr. Ernest Seton-Thompson's imagination, at least we may be thankful that Mr. Du Chaillu has not made the mistake of giving us another book full of Kiplingized or Thompsonized beasts. He has done a peculiarly good work for the boy of this generation, who would become acquainted with the great and almost unworked world of the Dark Continent.

The Guanionlens, the great eagles, whose station for observation is so far up in the heavens that they are not visible to the creatures in the forest; whose eyes are so keen that they can detect from that awful elevation the slightest movement of life in the treetops; who choose for their nesting places the tops of the tallest trees, and who devour monkeys, are portrayed with masterly touches. So, too, the lives of the monkeys—Nkemas—with all their tribulations, their long journeys after food, their fight with their natural foes the parrots, and their final fate at the hands (or rather claws) of the Guanionlens, are described with great spirit. We really have brutish Ngooboo than a mere hippopotamus could be supposed to inspire, and even the Nginas (gorillas) present attractive phases.

Our old friend, Rikkitikkitavi of the jungle book, or his African cousin, Ichneumon, poses under the unfamiliar name of Ntoto, but he is the same quick, fearless little fighter, whose unalloyed hatred for the huge omembas (snakes) leads him into numerous conflicts, till at last old age stiffens his joints and unstrings his muscles, so that one day he is vanquished and his bones crushed by his old enemy.

There is one striking thing shown in the life chapter of each of the animals, and that is how hard he has to work for a living and how often he is obliged to go hungry. Even the great leopard cannot always find antelopes to bring to his young, and at last becomes a man eater, and meets his death at the hands of the enraged hunters. The leopard, by the way, is one of the few beasts who is shown to have the somewhat heartless habit of separating from his wife and family when the young have begin to grow beyond their cubhood.

This book is cleverly illustrated with numerous full-page drawings, some of which are almost startling in their vigor, as, for instance, the one where the huge male gorrilla is shown killing a serpent. It suggests a terrific and solitary Laocoon who has turned the tables upon his scaly adversary.

Take it altogether, work of author, illustrator, and publisher, "The World of the Great Forest" is a book which carries in itself a strong recommendation to the favor of the boys of all ages, from eight to forty-eight.

The art season is on in full force, and there are a number of exhibitions of various kinds in progress. These include the annual display of the drawings of Charles Dana Gibson at the Keppel Galleries, some two score pastels, water colors, and drawings by Rosina Emmet Sherwood at the Macbeth Gallery, a display of twenty-two pictures by Walter L. Palmer, the painter of the American Winter, at the Avery Galleries; an exhibition of pen and ink drawings by American artists at William's Art Rooms, 397 Fifth Avenue, of eight portraits by Augustus Franzen at Oehme's, of seven portraits by Miss Julia Haven at Knoedler's, the annual display of paintings by American artists, with a group of water colors by Charles Warren Eaton at Kats's Gallery, in Columbus Avenue, and of some sixty etchings by modern Dutch and French artists, which attracted much attention at the Paris Exposition last Summer, at Wunderlich's.

***

The first large art sale of the season will take place at the American Art Galleries on the afternoons of Tuesday, Dec. 4, and the four following days, when the carved furniture, curios, relics, and other objects collected by the late Joseph W. Sprague of Louisville, Ky., will be sold. There will also be sold at these galleries, on Thursday and Friday evenings, Dec. 6 and 7, some 200 oils, watercolors, and drawings, by American and foreign artists, belonging to various owners. The Sprague furniture, curios, and relics, as well as the pictures to be sold on Thursday and Friday evenings of next week, are now on exhibition in the galleries. Mr. Sprague, who was a wealthy bachelor, retired from business in 1882 with a fortune, and after that time devoted himself to travel in the East, where he found for the most part his collection of carved furniture, wood, and ivories, Oriental potteries, and porcelains and lacquers. He was extremely sensitive and retiring by nature, and would never allow his treasures to be described in the press. Thus it happens that the extreme richness and beauty of his collection was not generally known until after his death, which occurred last year. It would be impossible to give a detailed description of even the most notable objects in this collection. They must be seen and studied by all art lovers. There are some 500 lots in the collection. The pictures, which are exhibited jointly with the Sprague collection, are on the whole well selected. They comprise examples of many of the better American landscapists and figure men and some good paintings by modern foreign brushes, notably those of Lerolle, Tissot, Desgoffe, Verestchagin, and Delpy.

Charles Dana Gibson has his annual display of original drawings at the Keppel Gallery. These are, with the exception of a few designs, all of the high-bred American girl who has become known as the "Gibson Girl." The artist has drawn her now for lo! these many years, and there are few households in the land, with any pretensions to cultivation, where she is not known and loved. But even the good-natured American public may have too much of a good thing, and it is to be feared that the "Gibson Girl" is one of these good things who, or which, has worn out her welcome. It is unnecessary to notice at all in detail the drawings now on view. They are known of all men and women who peruse the pages in which the "Pipp Family" and "The Widow" have wandered. Delightful as are all these presentments of young American womanhood, graceful as they are in drawing, and refined in atmosphere, they are, it must regretfully be said, growing monotonous. Why does not Mr. Gibson give his hard-worked girl the vacation she richly deserves? That the artist has ideas beyond the girl with which his name and fame are indissolubly connected, is proved by the presence in the present display of three or four drawings, as, for example, "The Spinster's Reverie," "The Fallen Star," and "On the Sidewalks of New York." The first of these, to be sure, has little of novelty in its conception, as may be assumed from its title. The other two are also old in subject. They are, however, refreshing as a change from the inevitable girl above mentioned. It is to be hoped that Mr. Gibson will not be influenced by the fact that his girl sells well to refuse to give her the vacation suggested. Any temporary loss of income through such vacation would have a corresponding compensation in the approval and thanks of the majority of his sincere admirers.

At the recent exhibition of work held at the New York School of Art, 57 West Fifty-seventh Street, the prize of $100, presented to the Shinnecock School of Art by William Gifford Beal for the best work of the Summer in Mr. William M. Chase's school, was awarded by a jury, consisting of Bruce Crane, William Coffin, and Irving Wiles, to Miss Francis Q. Thomason. Honorable mention was given to Ernest Meyer, Miss Carolyn Stehlin, and Miss Walters. A scholarship prize for the best work in the New York Summer School of Art went to Miss Anna Price, and the regular prize for drawing in the New York School of Art was awarded to Rae Bredin.

Mr. Cannon's "Clearing Houses."*

There has been much written about the Clearing House, that the name of that institution, with its general functions, is very familiar to the business community in every large city, and vaguely so throughout the country. Probably among the bankers having direct dealings with one or more Clearing Houses its purpose and the scope of its influence are pretty well understood; but outside of this not very extensive circle there is a plentiful lack of information and no small amount of misunderstanding as to the subject.

Mr. Cannon's book will leave no excuse for ignorance or serious misapprehension on the part of any one who cares to inform himself. It is a very full and clear and minute account of the Clearing House as an institution and of the methods by which its work is done, and it includes a detailed description not only of the Clearing House in New York, which is of course by far the most important in the country, but also of like institutions in other parts of the United States and in Canada, London, and Japan. It might, perhaps, have been as well if some of these descriptions had been somewhat less in detail and if the author had contented himself with pointrendered by the book is in enabling him to trace the curious and broad development ing out the differences between the typical —and parent—institution in New York and the others. But this is a matter as to which Mr. Cannon must be assumed to know better than any one else the audience he addresses. In any case it is not important.

To the general reader the most interesting and probably the most valuable service of the Clearing House from very small beginnings, and at all its stages by perfectly free growth, without the slightest governmental initiative or regulation. It now exerts a more powerful influence on the financial and commercial movement of the country than can be traced to any other single source, with the possible exception of the United States Treasury. It began as a contrivance for saving time, trouble and risk in the collection of checks drawn on the various banks of New York and deposited in others, and was the simplest sort of labor-saving machinery. It has of banking in nearly all essential regards, become an organization through which practically all the banks of the country arrange matters of common concern, and gradually it has come to fix the standard The most striking function of the Clearing House is the protection of its members from the consequences of panic—of unreasonable and unreasoning alarm—in times of financial disturbance. This is done by the issue of interest-bearing certificates, issued on collateral approved by a committee appointed for that purpose, the certificates being used in the settlement of balances between the banks. It will readily be seen that this function necessarily involves a knowledge of the condition and conduct of the banks, and hence has grown up a system of very careful and impartial investigation, and, to some extent, supervision of the member banks and of banks clearing through members.

To this phase of the Clearing House work Mr. Cannon has given particular attention, and his volume has a distinct value on that account, as well as for its more technical professional information. It is written in a very clear and direct style, simple and adequate.

Another Romance of the Revolution.*

In the present activity among a certain class of writers to produce historical fiction, it is refreshing to come across a writer who, in giving a picture of the Revolution as it was in the South, does not puzzle her readers by an attempt to put her dialogue into contemporaneous vernacular. In "A Daughter of Freedom" we read a clear-cut and interesting tale, related in the simple narrative style of to-day. The illusion is maintained through incident and description; there is no attempt to preserve "color" through a jumble of archaic expressions, the validity of which no one but an expert philologist would be able to determine. "A Daughter of Freedom" completes a historical trilogy by this author, the preceding volumes being "A Girl of '76," and "A Revolutionary Maid." The scene of action i the Southern campaign, and the heroine Byrd Graham, who lives at the home of her Tory grandfather, her faithful negro boy, Indigo, and the adventures they all meet with are sure to be attractive to youthful readers. As to historical accuracy, that is sufficiently well maintained so as not to run riot with the average school history.

A SHORT HISTORY of

MONKS & MONASTERIES

Fascinating.—Detroit News Tribune.

When James Anthony Froude undertook to write the History of the Saints he encountered the same obstacles that Alfred Wesley Wishart met in writing his excellent work, "Monks and Monasteries." There were unlimited materials from which to draw, but without sufficient authenticity to justify the record to be made up from them. The late professor of history at Oxford gave up the task as vain one, but Mr. Wishart has pursued his to a successful conclusion, and having winnowed the grain from its disproportionate quantity of chaff, presents us with a volume for which students and general readers must alike feel grateful. He has sifted his authorities so carefully that the book has the stamp of truth in every statement placed there, however so deftly, that the literary grace of the work is fully and delightfully preserved. Scholarly without being pedantic, earnest and careful without showing either prejudice or partisanship, he sweeps the great field which his title includes with a strength and evenness that give the book the hall-mark of sterling worth. His conclusions are drawn upon no hypothetical grounds, and if modestly presented do not lack the convincing qualities which Mr. Wishart so plainly sees and so effectively puts into view.—Philadelphia Times.

Mr. Wishart brings the advantages of a trained mind and the scholarly instinct to his work.—Boston Globe.

A valuable contribution to the voluminous historical literature of the Catholic Church.—New Orleans Picayune.

A captivating theme. . . . A well told tale. . . . Vivid and clear. . . . The writer is to be praised for the impartial spirit he exhibits. . . . The volume proclaims the student qualities of the author. His scholarship is lighted up with a clear and discriminating literary style.—New York Times.

In NATURE'S REALM

By Dr. CHARLES C. ABBOTT

Author of "Upland and Meadow," "Notes of the Night," "Outings at Odd Times," etc.

ILLUSTRATED BY OLIVER KEMP

With a photogravure frontispiece and ninety drawings, 8vo, hand-sewed, broad margins, extra superfine, dull-surfaced, pure cotton-fiber paper, deckle edges, gilt top, and picture-cover in three tints and gold; 300 pp., fully indexed, $2.50 NET. At all booksellers, or sent carriage free, by the publisher, on receipt of price.

PRESS NOTICES.

He writes delightfully.—Hartford Courant.

An artistic work. . . . Delightful . . . instructive.—Atlanta Constitution.

The charm of such books as these lies in their essential simplicity and naturalness, but the special value of Dr. Abbott's lies in the fact that he never becomes so absorbed in the study of component parts as to fail in an adequate comprehension of nature as a whole.—Outlook, New York.

Not long ago, in reviewing Mr. Wishart's important history of "Monks and Monasteries," The Times had occasion to speak of the dignified form which had been given to the book by a new publisher, Albert Brandt, of Trenton. From the Brandt press we have now another noteworthy volume, presenting the work of a familiar author, but presenting it with a richness of external form it has not had before. This is "In Nature's Realm," by Dr. Charles C. Abbott. All readers are familiar with Dr. Abbott's sympathetic nature studies. He is one of those men, like White of Selborne, who do not need to go far afield to find matter to interest them; to whom the woods and meadows, the streams and the skies of their own vicinage are unfailing sources of delight; who know the signs of the seasons and their myriad manipulations of animal and vegetable life and who can describe what they see not merely with scientific accuracy, but with poetic appreciation. The dainty vignettes and marginal illustrations which decorate the fine broad pages are the work of Oliver Kemp, who apparently is to be credited also with the fascinating cover design. . . . Mr. Brandt has presented his neighbor's work in a form of which it is altogether worthy and has made a book that will attract attention by its beauty.—Philadelphia Times.

Miss Earle's Clever Little Stories.*

The first story, which gives its name to the volume, and the pretty embellishment of "bleeding hearts" to the cover, is the longest of the group of eight well-told little tales. One objects at the outset to the old General as quite impossible, not, alas, in his badness, but in his Rochester-like freedom of confession to a young girl upon an even briefer acquaintance than the one that encouraged that estimable gentleman of "Jane Eyre," to unfold his unsavory past. "Excusin'" the old General, as Uncle Remus would say, the story gives a faithful picture of a certain phase of country life in Virginia, and of the maidenhood of a generation ago, brought up "in a sort of shy ignerance," not knowing what badness really meant in a man, but regarding it as a sort of fascinating mystery. Miss Sarah, thinking "ignorance, virtue, and insiscerity, reserve," is well contrasted with the frank, clear-eyed New York girl. "Miss Sarah is surs that a hundred things which make up my daily life are wicked, and yet she shuts her ears to all the wickedness the General boasts of, and her eyes to all his face tells."

The other stories deal with many sorts of people. We particularly note those relating to that nomadic tribe of modern life, the tribe of the commercial traveler. Romance has hitherto edged away from him, but Miss Earle shows him to be worth study, and we rather hope she will make a specialty of him.

The conceit of "The Tinklin' Simlins" is an amusing one, and the Scriptural rendering very natural to one to whom "simlins" are much more familiar than "cymbals." For the rest, it is a good story of just such a brave, unschooled woman as Miss Murfree loves.

All the tales are of interest, and are characterized by a deftness of literary touch that makes the book a very pleasant companion for a leisure hour.

Mr. Martin's "Lucid Intervals."*

The title of this volume of pleasant essays will suggest to not a few of its readers a certain eminent professor, for more than half a century a teacher of girls, whose highest praise of any recitation was to say, "Miss —— has a lucid interval." He would surely have commended Mr. Martin's book by declaring that it lives up to its name; that it represents lucid intervals, and these only on the part of its writer.

It consists of clear-headed and happily expressed views upon such topics of universal interest as "Children," "Husbands and Wives," "Education," "Riches," "Energy and Its Consequences," &c. The author does not dive deeply beneath the surfaces of these subjects, but he plays upon it very attractively, and contrives to bring up useful and suggestive bits of wisdom from less remote sources than the "unfathomed caves." A genial humor pervades the volume, and it is not easy to quarrel with the writer's conclusions, if we except those upon warlike topics, wherein, indeed, Mr. Martin himself seems to have an uneasy consciousness of being rather less "lucid" than usual.

Crowded and jostled as we are by the rush of new books, there is always room for a thoughtful observer's clever talk. It is an agreeable relief from importunate heroes and heroines to sit with the student of human nature, when, in his dressing gown and slippers, he unbends and chats easily of life as it is. It is a pleasure to agree with him; sometimes a greater pleasure to differ from him.

The reader of "Lucid Intervals" will enjoy the former pleasure to the full—the latter very moderately; but, in either case, he will have shared some good talk, which has gained by illustrations, most of them in unusual sympathy with the text.

The Fourth Edition of the Remarkable Mexican Romance

is now ready. The story has been universally commended. "No novel with Mexican scenery for its background surpasses this," says The N. Y. Times. The Philadelphia Press says it is "highly original and dramatic, the free mountain air seems to blow through its pages." "A romance worth reading," says The Brooklyn Eagle.

A Dream of a Throne. The Story of a Mexican Revolt. By CHARLES FLEMING EMBREE. Illustrated by HENRY SANDHAM. 12mo. Cloth, extra, $1.50.

A Dream of a Throne—Other Opinions

A powerful story of war and love, with constantly changing movement, strong color, and striking effects.—Philadelphia North American.

From the beginning the reader's interest is enlisted, and he follows this story of warfare, adventure, and love keenly to the end.—Art Interchange.

This book will excite wonder and admiration. It is a Mexican prose-epic.—Philadelphia Item.

There are many graphic descriptions in the story, many dramatic situations, many figures that move naturally, and love, mystery, and battle are added to its attractions.—The Argonaut.

In "A Dream of a Throne" we have, outside of history, the most considerable contribution to American literature inspired by Mexican themes. It is emphatically a story of the open air, of high and romantic adventure, and as all alive with the noise of horses' feet, as filled with intrigue, desperate fight and the clash of arms, as the great historical romances of the elder Dumas.—Mexican Herald.

Will hold the interest to the close, and is well worth reading for its fine descriptive passages.—Boston Transcript.

Lacks but little of being a great novel. The style and manner are singularly happy and attractive. The description of the lake country amid its setting of mountains, in places is exquisite.—Living Church, Milwaukee.

The distinguishing characteristics of this book are its abounding wealth of characterization and its glowing richness of local color. Gorgeous scenic effects, striking dramatic contrasts, rapid development and action, and a whole catalogue of romantic episodes, constitute such a tout ensemble as will give relish to the appetite of the most jaded novel reader.—Booklovers' Library.

BIG BATTLE WITH DE WET

Kitchener Cables that the Boers Attacked Boshof Twice, but Were Repulsed.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The Evening Standard last evening reported that a great fight was in progress between Gen. Knox and Gen. De Wet, near Rouxville, (in the southeastern extremity of the Orange River Colony,) and that the capture of Gen. De Wet was considered imminent.

The first dispatch from Gen. Kitchener in his new capacity of Commander in Chief of the British forces in South Africa is dated Bloemfontein, Nov. 30. It confirms the reports of fighting between Gen. Pilcher and Gen. De Wet, as cabled Nov. 29, and adds other reports—that Gen. Knox was in touch with Gen. De Wet's force near Tafelberg, twelve miles north of Bethulie, (Orange River Colony,) and that the Boers attacked Boshof on Nov. 28, and renewed the attack on Nov. 29, but were repulsed without British loss.

Lord Kitchener also reports that Gen. Paget was fighting Nov. 28 and 29 with the Viljoen and Erasmus commands, and that he drove the Boers to a position in the vicinity of Rietfontein. The British casualties were heavy. Col. Lloyd and five other officers were wounded; five men were killed, and fifty were wounded.

BLOEMFONTEIN, Dec. 1.—A patrol of fourteen South African constabulary, during the night of Nov. 28 engaged a contingent from Haasebeek's commando, southwest of this town, with the result that thirty-five Boers are reported to have been killed or wounded.

Canadian Children's Gift to Queen.

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.—Enormous crowds gathered to-day to view the testimonial to Queen Victoria from the girls and boys of Canada. The testimonial is contained in the largest album ever printed on this side of the Atlantic, and contains thousands of photographs, over 100,000 names of juvenile subscribers to the six-penny soldiers' fund, and a draft for upward of $16,000. In the testimonial the children pay a high tribute to Lord Minto, the Governor General.

FRANCO-BRAZILIAN DISPUTE.

BERNE, Dec. 1.—The award of the Swiss Government in the Franco-Brazilian boundary dispute gives Brazil 147,000 square miles of the contested territory. France gets about 3,000 square miles northward of the Tumuc Humac Range.

The foregoing dispatch is supposed to relate to the dispute between Brazil and France over the territory of Connani, which was until recently a sort of buffer State between Brazil and the French possessions. Both countries claimed much of the territory, and in 1895 there was a conflict between French troops and Brazilians. This conflict was primarily due to the discovery of gold in the Carserenne district, and a proposal was made to arbitrate, but for a time Brazil held back. Finally, however, on Nov. 26, 1897, the Chamber of Deputies approved the arbitration treaty and the Swiss Government was chosen as umpire.

ALGER TALKS OF EAGAN.

Says the Latter Was Wronged by Gen. Miles in Charges on the Beef Question.

Special to The New York Times.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 1.—Gen. R. A. Alger, ex-Secretary of War, passed through the city to-day. He was accompanied by Col. Hecker, Frederick M. Alger, and John Millen of Duluth, Minn. They will inspect lumber lands and other property belonging to Gen. Alger's farm. Gen. Alger, in an interview, discussed the business of the next session of Congress, the restoration of Gen. Eagan, and other things. When asked what would probably be the next session's course, he said:

"The first and most pressing business before the next Congress will be the passage of an army bill, enlarging the army and making general improvements in its efficiency. I regard the passage of such a bill as very necessary, and I hope it will go through.

"As to the Nicaragua Canal bill, I think it will ultimately be passed, but it is one of the doubtful things which one can never tell about. Probably the next session will not have the necessary time to devote to it, but whether it is passed this session or not, I think it is bound to come sooner or later."

Gen. Alger was asked if he thought Gen. Eagan's restoration probable. In reply, he said:

"Gen. Eagan's restoration is a matter which lies entirely in the discretion of the President. He forgot himself and was unsoldierly in his vituperations, but he stated what he believed to be true, and what was proved to be true, in language unbecoming a soldier. He was wronged by Gen. Miles in his charge on the beef question and lost control of himself. He was one of the best Commissary Generals in the army, and while I regard the affair as a very great misfortune at the same time it is impossible to make a statement as to his restoration to active service."

GIRLS BURLESQUE A WEDDING.

The Marlborough-Vanderbilt Nuptials Caricatured in the Woman's College at Baltimore.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 1.—The unique skeleton feast a few nights since at the Woman's College was followed up this evening, by the brilliant burlesque wedding of Consuelo Vanderbilt to the Duke of Marlborough. Among the guests were Queen Victoria, the Prince of Wales, and President and Mrs. McKinley. The costuming was remarkable, the portrayals of the characters being highly interesting.

The wedding march from "Lohengrin" was played by the Woman's College Carreno. The choir sang the words to the music. The choir boys, attired in kimonas; the ushers and the flower girls, carrying floral designs, were no ordinary persons, but bright and pretty college girls gathered from the country at large and all parts of the civilized world.

The decorations were profuse. Large cabbage heads were draped with ribbons and other decorations were in keeping. Bishop Potter, the presiding clergyman, was assisted by eminent divines. The Bishop asked the following questions:

"Dukey, wilt thou have this woman to be thy beloved wife? Wilt thou love her, honor her, board her, lodge her, so long as ye both shall live?"

He answered: "You bet."

"Consy, wilt thou take this man to be thy dearly beloved? Wilt thou serve him, disobey, scold, and rule him until he dies?"

She said: "Yum, yum."

The mock ceremony was followed by a reception, in which the students paid their respects to the Queen and Prince and threw rice at the bride and bridegroom.

CHEYENNE'S WATER TAINTED.

Expert's Report on Cause of Typhoid Outbreak Causes Sensation.

Special to The New York Times.

CHEYENNE, Wyoming, Dec. 1.—Cheyenne is a beautiful city, the climate of which is delightful nearly the year round, but there has been an epidemic of typhoid fever existing for several weeks, and the citizens have been at work to locate the cause. A bacteriologist was sent for at the expense of the city, and his report was so alarming that when it came it was held up, and those most interested, together with the newspapers, were unable to get at the bottom of the trouble.

The Leader set to work in a systematic way, succeeded in getting a complete copy of the report, and sprung it upon its readers this evening. It has caused a great sensation. The report shows that the water supply of the city is contaminated with typhoid bacteria. In one instance no less than four masses of refuse were located near the filter bed, and one of them directly over it. Bones of animals were lying about the filters. Camp fires had been made in the immediate vicinity, and horses and stock had been tied within twenty feet of the stream which furnishes the water supply. The reservoir of the city is located in the lowest part of Cheyenne, and is declared by the report to be the drainage ground for the entire city and Fort Russell—a natural breeding place for bacteria. In summarizing the report the doctor says:

"The water supply of Cheyenne is responsible for the present epidemic, and particularly in the lower galleries or filters above referred to."

There have been over fifty deaths within a few weeks, and among the victims were several prominent persons.

An outlay of $175,000 will be required to bring water from the mountains, and so do away with the dangers of the lower elevations.

TAXES TO BE DOUBLED.

Illinois Franchise Corporations' Assessments Will Be Raised.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 1.—All committees reported to the State Board of Equalization this morning. The City and Town Lots Committee reported a surplus of $2,082,753, Personal Property a deficit of $10,613,721, and Lands a deficit of $44,022,569. The reports were sent to the Committee on General Equalization, who will apportion the deficits and surplus, and report back to the board Monday morning.

At the second session of the board this morning the Capital Stock and Railroads Committees reported. These reports will lie over forty-eight hours under the rules, and are in the hands of the Clerk, who refuses to let any one see them. The actual figures will not be given out until the Monday morning meeting of the board.

It is stated, however, that the grand total of the full cash value of capital stock has been placed at $275,000,000, against $132,575,625 last year. How much of this increase has been levied against the franchise corporations of Chicago is not known, but it is said to be $27,000,000. The assessment against the franchise corporations will be twice what it was last year.

The Committee on Railroads reported an increase of $2,000,000, the grand total being about $80,000,000.

HUNTER SCARES ASTOR MAID.

Incident May Result in Closing the Ferncliffe Grounds.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Dec. 1.—The broad acres of Ferncliffe, Col. John Jacob Astor's domain at Rhinebeck, are well stocked with game, and until recently hunters have been allowed to shoot on the place with the implied understanding that the privilege was not to be abused. To-day it was rumored here that some member of Col. Astor's family had been shot by a careless sportsman. Color was given to the story by the fact that application was made this afternoon at the Sheriff's office for the appointment of four Deputy Sheriffs from among the employes on Col. Astor's place, with power to drive off or arrest intruders.

Joseph Scaman, Clarence W. Ackert, Matthew West, and Peter Madden were appointed. It was ascertained that although nobody had been shot a careless hunter nearly sent one of the maids into convulsions on Thursday. The man was shooting near the mansion, and fired so close to the maid that the shot grazed her head.

A hurry call was sent to Chief of Police Sleight at Rhinebeck, and he made a hasty search of the grounds, but the offender had disappeared. Col. Astor has been generous in allowing the public free access to his grounds, and the incident is much regretted.

WANTS TO BE A SENATOR.

Thomas Lowry a Candidate for Seat Once Held by C. K. Davis.

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 1.—Thomas Lowry, the millionaire street railway man, will be a candidate before the next Legislature for the position made vacant by the death of Senator C. K. Davis. While this is not given out by Mr. Lowry himself, it comes from an authentic source. G. G. Hartley of Duluth, a confidential business associate, has been with Mr. Lowry in New York and is on his way to his home. He asserts that Mr. Lowry will be a candidate.

Mr. Lowry, he says, since the death of Senator Davis, has received so many offers of support from such strong sources that he has decided to make the race, and expects to be elected.

A LUCKY WOMAN MINER.

Former Telephone Girl Brings $400,000 Back from Alaska.

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 1.—Carrying drafts of nearly $400,000, Miss Margaret Kelly, formerly a telephone girl of Boston, arrived in Minneapolis to-day on her way to Chicago, where she will visit friends, and to Boston to see her parents and provide for them.

"We had many hardships on the trip," said Miss Kelly. "Several members of our party died. So far as financial results are concerned, we have done well. The McGuire girls and I opened a small hotel in Alaska, which later we sold for $11,—. Then we invested in more claims. We worked two and cleaned up $40,000 in six months. Eventually we sold them for $400,000 cash."

The following roads, in addition to the Chicago and Grand Trunk, will be known as the Grand Trunk Western: Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee, Detroit, Saginaw and Muskegon, Chicago, Detroit and Canada Grand Trunk Junction, and the Michigan Air Line.

A House for Daughter's Wedding Gift.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 1.—Real estate transfers were recorded to-day showing that Judge Gottfried Krueger had purchased land adjoining his mansion in High Street. Judge Krueger announced when questioned concerning the transfer that he proposed erecting upon the property a residence as a wedding gift to his daughter, Lillian, who is to be married next month to a son of ex-United States Senator James Smith, Jr.

TREATY WITH NICARAGUA

Agreement for a Waterway Signed in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Secretary Hay this morning, for the Government of the United States, and Señor Correa, the Nicaraguan Minister, for his own Government, signed a treaty whereby the latter Government concedes to the Government of the United States the necessary rights and privileges within her bestowal for the construction of the Nicaraguan Canal.

This action is taken in anticipation of Congressional action upon the pending Nicaraguan Canal bill, and the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. Pending the submisison of the document to the Senate, which body must ratify the agreement, its terms will not be made public. It is understood, however, that generally Nicaragua grants to the United States Government the exclusive right to construct and operate the canal between the Atlantic and Pacific across Nicaragua, including the free use of the San Juan River, and of Lake Managua as part of the water course.

Nicaragua is also to rid herself of any outstanding treaties that would tend in any way to abridge the privileges to be acquired by the United States. It is understood also that Nicaragua concedes to the United States full authority to police the canal. Nicaragua is to receive in compensation a certain amount of the securities of the canal construction company, and although it is not possible now to learn the figure set down in the treaty, it is believed to approximate $5,000,000.

The State Department already has entered into an arrangement on similar lines with the Republic of Costa Rica. This was because Costa Rica has established a claim to the right bank of the San Juan River, which must of necessity form about a third of the length of the canal, should the Nicaragua route be selected, and be constructed on the lines which will be suggested by the Walker Commission.

An understanding also has been arrived at with the United States of Colombia covering the same rights and privileges for the Panama route as are conveyed by Nicaragua and Costa Rica, in the case of the Nicaragua route. So the State Department now has cleared the way for such action as Congress may care to take in the case of either of the canal routes which have been found feasible.

CHICAGO CAN ISSUE NO BONDS.

Court Holds City Has Exceeded Legal Limit of Indebtedness.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Judge Chetlain today decided the municipal bond case against the city. The decision in effect holds that the city has already exceeded the legal limit of bonded indebtedness, and an injunction is ordered restraining the municipal authorities from issuing bonds for bridge construction in accordance with ordinances recently passed by the City Council. The opinion of the Court, if upheld by the higher tribunal, will leave the city without recourse in the matter of raising money for permanent improvements, except by an act of the Legislature.

Under the decision the Legislature may amend the revenue law by requiring that the assessment be made upon the actual value of taxable property and reducing the rate of taxation. This would permit the city to increase its limit of bonded indebtedness, but in no other way can this be accomplished except by an amendment to the Constitution. By the assessed valuation, the Court holds, is meant the value upon which the taxes are computed.

An appeal was taken on behalf of the city. An effort will be made to obtain an immediate decision in the Supreme Court.

The bill for an injunction, upon which the Court's decision was rendered, was filed by Eugene H. Fishburn, who sought to restrain the city from issuing $100,000 bonds for the construction of a bascule bridge to cost over $586,000.

WILLIAM H. CRANE HURT.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 1.—A party of prominent business men of Baltimore, with William H. Crane of New York as their guest, met with a serious accident this afternoon by being thrown from a tally-ho coach. The brake broke while the coach was descending a grade.

Charles H. Dickey, who was handling the ribbons, tried to turn the four horses into a cross street, but the turn was too sharp, the big coach careened, and the entire party was spilled. Mr. Dickey was hurled nearly across the avenue. One of his elbows was broken and he was severely bruised. Mr. Crane's ankle was broken. George Osborn, Gen. Lloyd Jackson, Robert Ramsay, A. L. Gorter, a city official, and George F. Patterson were bruised and shaken up.

EMBARGO ON DOGS REMOVED.

The Two Leading St. Louis Hotels Will Now Admit Them.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 1.—Dogs will be received as guests at the Planters' and Southern Hoteis, the two leading hostleries of St. Louis, from to-day forward. The embargo on the canine pets has been lifted by the managers, and families who travel with their pets are happy over the decision.

The barring of dogs from the hotels has caused much inconvenience, worry, and loss of trade. Under the improved plan the pet will be admitted to every part of the hotel frequented by his master except the dining room and the Turkish bath. The dog will be charged for board and lodging, and at the end of the sojourn any damage to the furniture will be added to the bill. The dog kennels in the basements will be abolished.

Miss Julia Marlowe and Miss Rose Coghlan, two actresses at the Southern, are responsible for the change. They have pet dogs, and made such a vigorous protest against their being kept in the basement and fed on bones and other common dog food that a conference resulted, in which it was decided that dogs would be received as guests.

Chicago Reduces Her Debt.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Chicago's indebtedness was decreased $557,250 to-day by Controller Kerfoot, who paid $500,000 of the principal on water certificates held by private persons, and $57,250 of the interest. The reduction was made possible by the cutting down of the expenses in the water fund. County Treasurer Raymond notified Controller Kerfoot that he was ready to turn over to him $2,000,000 to the credit of the refunding fund, which has long been due to the property owners who made deposits with the city for improvements, which were not made.

Eels Stop a Water Wheel.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Dec. 1.—Engineer Embler has had trouble with the water wheel of the button factory at Marlborough. A few days ago the wheel stopped and business was suspended. Men were set at work investigating, and taking the cap from the wheel it was found that two eels four feet long had become entangled in the mechanism. They were dead, and when cut away the wheel again moved.

1,200 FILIPINOS SURRENDER.

MANILA, Dec. 1.—Twelve hundred bolomen entered Vigan, Island of Luzon, yesterday afternoon, and surrendered to Capt. Green of the Thirty-third Infantry. This is the largest number of men who have yet surrendered in Luzon at one time.

Gen. Tinio has been keeping a swarm of bolomen along the mountains, and they have impoverished the food supply and cut off the leaders of the Tagalogs, but a considerable number of the Ilocanos, who had become lukewarm, believed that the surrender would hasten the collapse of Gen. Tinio's power.

WANTS TO PAY MORE TAXES.

R. M. Bruce of Greenwich Says He Does Not Pay Enough—What Millionaires Schedule.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Dec. 1.—Robert M. Bruce, one of the millionaires of Greenwich, a former cotton broker and intimate friend of E. C. Benedict, has caused a sensation by appearing before the Board of Assessors of the town and asking them to have his assessment raised 50 per cent. He said that he had never paid any attention to the making out of his list of taxable property, leaving it with the Assessors, and letting them add the 10 per cent. provided by law. He had looked the matter up recently, and concluded that he was not paying all that he should into the town treasury, and so asked for the raise. The Assessors promised to do as he asked, and it is understood that they will raise the taxes of all the other millionaires here in the same proportion.

Mr. Bruce's example is the subject of much comment, and it is expected will be followed by many who respect his opinions. For many years past Greenwich has raised $90,000 by taxation and spent $30,000 more, and the debt has rolled up to nearly $400,000. The town appointed an Investigating Committee, and it reported that more money must be raised by taxation. The laying of the tax last Fall was put over until next Spring, when the Assessors had figured up the amount of taxable property and an increase of the tax rate seemed probable.

Economists have looked up the matter and found that there appears to be a law for the poor man and another for the rich one. The law states that each property owner must put in a true list of the real value of all property, real and personal, but the general rule among the middle class has been to pay on 60 per cent. of the value. The millionaires in some instances have not paid 10 per cent. A change is to be made at once.

Among the New York millionaires who own property and reside here are men of National reputation. The town books reveal the following figures on last year's assessments: Mr. Bruce paid on $65,340 of property, divided as follows: Eight houses, $45,500, 23½ acres of land, $10,550; timepieces, $150; pianos, $200; furniture and libraries, $3,000; penalty, $35.94. He will pay this year $1,699 in taxes, the rate being 13 mills. A. A. Marks, the wooden leg manufacturer of New York and Chairman of the Town's Investigating Committee, who has many speedy horses, puts in this list: Houses, $14,000; 40½ acres of land, $6,720; invested in manufactories, $800; 8 horses, $800; 4 cattle, $80; carriages, $500; timepieces, $25; piano, $100. Luke A. Lockwood, Wall Street lawyer and counsel for the investigating committee: Two houses, $5,000 acres of land, $6,000; 6 horses, $800; 4 cattle, $80; carriages, $150; timepieces, $50; piano, $100; furniture and library, $500. Charles T. Wills: 3 houses, $23,000; Indian Harbor Yacht Club house, $7,000. J. Kennedy Tod, banker: 3 houses, $30,000 110 acres, $26,400. George I. Tyson of Riverside Yacht Club: 8 houses, $42,500; 58 acres of land, $14,000.

R. S. O'Loughlin schedules 2 houses $21,000, 12 acres of land $3,300; John H. Gourlie, 3 houses $34,000, 80 acres of land $20,000; Col. A. B. Hilton and wife, 1 house $30,000; Commodore E. C. Benedict and wife schedule a total of $156,640, consisting of houses $100,000, 65 acres of land, $37,500, 13 horses $1,300, 7 cattle $40, carriages $1,500, timepieces $200, piano $100, furniture and libraries $2,500, bank stock $6,500, invested in vessels and commerce $7,000; Henry O. Havemeyer and wife admit $67,500, as follows: Six houses $51,400, 191 acres of land $16,100; William Rockefeller and wife are taxed $64,450, on 6 houses valued at $13,300, 272 acres of land $51,150; Mrs. A. A. Anderson, who resides on the "Boss" Tweed place, pays on $134,555. She has 5 houses $57,400, 268 acres of land $50,000, 10 horses $500, 15 cattle $355, carriages $100, timepieces $100, piano $100, furniture and libraries $1,000, all other taxable property $25,000.

John W. Hendrie, the philanthropist, who died last week, leaving an estate of nearly $500,000, paid taxes on $22,010. If the millionaires pay their proportion of the tax this year and every succeeding one, as the town people expect the Assessors will make them do, the town debt problem will be easily solved. It would appear from the above figures that many of the millionaires own no furniture or bank stock, that their horses were old nags, that they have no libraries, and that their musical instruments are ancient.

WESTCHESTER LIGHTING TRUST

New Concern with $12,500,000 Capital to Absorb Other Companies.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, Dec. 1.—The Westchester Lighting Company is the name of a new gas and electric light trust, which has been formed in Westchester County, and which it is said proposes to absorb all the other gas and electric light companies in the county. Simultaneously to-day certificates of increase of capital stock of the company from $2,500,000 to $12,500,000 were filed in Albany and in the White Plains Clerk's office.

The certificate says that of this sum $10,000,000 is common stock, consisting of 100,000 shares of the par value of $10 each, and $2,500,000 is preferred stock of the same value. The Directors of the new trust comprise Charles P. Werner, Louis B. Grant, Richard F. McKirney, M. J. Werner, Charles M. Hemingway, N. D. Daboll, Henry A. Kenworthy, Charles W. Squires, W. W. Scrugham, and Reginald P. Giles. The papers were drawn up by ex-Lieut. Gov. Sheehan.

It is said that the new corporation proposes to erect several extensive plants throughout the county as soon as it obtains new franchises and rights in the towns of White Plains, Yonkers, Mount Vernon, New Rochelle, Pelham, Portchester, Rye, Harrison, Mamaroneck, Tarrytown, and Peekskill.

The Huguenot Electric Light, Heat and Power Company, which it is reported the trust is trying to buy out also, filed a certificate of extension of business power and rights in Westchester. Among other things it proposes to manufacture gae for supplying light in every township of Westchester, supplying steam to consumers from a central station or through pipes and conduits, and electricity for power. The capital stock is fixed at $50,000, divided in 500 shares. The Directors comprise John J. Crennan of New Rochelle, F. A. Stratton, and C. H. Werner of New York. The principal office of the company is in New Rochelle.

DETECTIVES GUARD DUKE OF MANCHESTER

British Nobleman Arrives with His American Bride.

GREETED BY MR. ZIMMERMAN

Police Officers Accompany the Party from Liner to Hotel — Reasons Given for Their Presence.

The Duke of Manchester arrived yesterday evening on the American Line steamship St. Louis with his bride, who was Miss Helen Zimmerman, daughter of Millionaire Eugene Zimmerman of Cincinnati, whom he married about two weeks ago in England.

They were met by Mr. Zimmerman and his brother Martin and two Central Office detectives, who accompanied the party from the liner to the Holland House and staid there. Many reports were current as to the reason for the presence of the detectives, and contradictory explanations were given by those interested.

Mr. Zimmerman admitted that they were there at his request, but declined to say what for. The Duke himself later declared that the police officers had been sent to guard him. Capt. McClusky having received an anonymous letter informing him that he (the Duke) was likely to be pelted with bad eggs by a mob when he landed. Capt. McClusky was reticent. He declared that an anonymous letter had been received by Mr. Zimmerman, and turned over by that gentleman to him. He refused to say what was in the letter.

Mr. Zimmerman, who had been in town for a week preparing for the arrival of the young couple, went down the bay with his brother Martin in a revenue cutter and boarded the steamer at Quarantine. He had been up since early morning awaiting news that the steamer had been sighted. When he finally climbed up the ladder which had been raised from the upper deck of the cutter to the main deck of the steamer it was dark, and no passengers were above to watch for the coming of friends.

On the revenue cutter, seated in the pilot house, were Central Office Detectives Valley and Stripp. What the detectives were there for none knew. Mr. Zimmerman, when asked, said he did not know that there were any detectives aboard. Detective Valley admitted that they were there in connection with the Duke's arrival, but for further information referred his questioners to Capt. McClusky, who would remain at the Central Office until the two detectives had made their report.

Mr. Zimmerman and his brother were followed up the ladder by the two detectives. Mr. Zimmerman was directed to State Rooms 3 and 5, which comprised the suite occupied by the bridal pair on the way over. He entered and closed the door after him. The detectives stood at the door a few minutes, when, in answer to a knock, they were admitted.

FATHER'S EYES TEAR-DIMMED.

Mr. Zimmerman appeared shortly. He had tears in his eyes, and came, he said, to inform the reporters that as soon as the Duke had finished declaring his baggage, he would be glad to see them and give them whatever news they desired.

The Duke looked better than when he visited New York last year. He was dressed in a light gray suit with a narrow white stripe running through it, and he wore a long black fur-lined overcoat trimmed with astrakhan collar and cuffs and fastened with frogs. On his head he wore an ordinary grey steamer cap.

When he had finished with the revenue officers the Duke, accompanied by his bride and her father, entered the reception room, and Mr. Zimmerman reappeared to invite the reporters. During the interview, which was witnessed by an interested crowd of fellow-passengers, the Duchess had scarcely anything to say except to her father, who, she said, she found looking well and happy. The Duchess is pretty, with a fine skin and blond hair.

She wore a long, loose, black traveling coat that reached to the bottom of a black traveling gown. The coat was trimmed with dark-brown fur. Around her neck she wore a white lace collar, and around her waist a black silk sash. Her hat was low and wide, and was made of black velvet, trimmed with ostrich feathers, and a light black veil, which was drawn over her face.

Throughout the interview she sat on a settee near where her husband was standing, and seemed as much interested in the business of the reporters as they were themselves.

The Duke made a playful allusion to the time when for a few months he himself was a New York reporter, and then introduced the reporters in a body to the Duchess.

"We do not yet know how long we will stay here; probably a month or so," he said. "I do not know even what our plans are. We came here to visit Mr. Zimmerman, and, naturally, whatever plans he makes for us are ours.

"I expect we will stay here at the Holland House, where Mr. Zimmerman has made arrangements for us, until next Wednesday. Then we go to Cincinnati, where I am told Mr. Zimmerman will give us a reception the week after next. From there we hope to travel out West. I also expect we will visit Mrs. Yznaga in Natchez, Miss."

During the interview, the detectives, who had followed the Duke closely wherever he went, had taken up positions at the entrance of the reception room. Both officers still refused to say anything as to the nature of their business with the nobleman, but it was rumored about the ship that they were down to inquire about the Duchess's maid, who found and returned the jewels lost by Mrs. Fannie Ward Lewis.

DUKE EXPLAINS JEWEL INCIDENT.

When the Duke was asked regarding the detectives and when the subject of the jewels was suggested, he said:

"I'll tell you about that. It seems Mrs. Ward lost a diamond-studded purse in the garden of Mrs. Potter, and her Grace's maid picked it up and handed it to the Duchess. Her Grace put the purse in a trunk without even opening it, and that day we left for Ireland. Upon arriving there she discovered the purse and a card of the owner inside of it.

"A reward for the recovery of the purse, I believe $1,000, had been offered, we then discovered, and I personally sent a telegram to Mrs. Ward, saying she might pay the reward to the maid. And from there on is where I lost track of things, because they did not interest me. All I know is that the purse was duly restored to the owner."

"How do you account for the detectives, then?" was asked.

"Only this: Mr. Zimmerman is a personal friend of Capt. McClusky, and he requested his men to see that we arrived safely at the Holland House. Besides, my servants have never been in this country, and baggage might be lost or something unless experienced men were there to look after it."

It was pointed out to the Duke that Mr. Zimmerman as an American could hardly suspect the Duke to be endangered in a closed carriage going up Broadway, and that baggage was in no danger of being lost from the American Line pier, and that Detective Valley had said Capt. McClusky would remain at Headquarters awaiting a report from the detectives. The Duke, however, stuck to his story. In answer to further questions he said:

"As to my taking my seat in the House of Lords, there is no ceremony attached to that. I have a seat already. It is only in the case of new-made noblemen that there is a ceremony when they are admitted. I have four country seats, but the one which I prefer and where I will probably spend much of my time is Tandragee Castle."

On the way up the bay the Duke aid Duchess attracted considerable attention from the other passengers. They were often pointed out, and little groups of curious crowds collected to gaze at them from a distance. Mr. Zimmerman took charge of the party immediately upon landing.

The Duke and Detective Valley entered a coach at the entrance of the pier, and Mr. Zimmerman and the Duchess followed in another, while Martin Zimmerman and Miss Martha and Miss Helena Evans, the Duchess's aunts, who accompanied her on the St. Louis, followed in a third coach.

At the Holland House the suite of rooms on the northeast corner of the hotel had been reserved. The detectives were furnished with dinner by Mr. Zimmerman's orders, while the party retired to their rooms.

Mr. Zimmerman was again asked regarding the detectives. He said:

"They have been sent at my request." He declined to state why he had thought them necessary."

Regarding the Fannie Ward incident he said:

Later in the evening the Duke came down stairs and was again asked about the presence of the detectives. He said he supposed it was merely a matter of courtesy and that he had paid little attention to it, thinking that perhaps they had come to see that his baggage was safely landed with the aid of his English servant.

This explanation, however, did not satisfy his questioners, and upon being further pressed he said:

"The Chief of the Detective Bureau received an anonymous letter saying that I and the Duchess might be rotten-egged when we arrived here."

Mr. Zimmerman subsequently said that such a report as this was absurd, and when some one remarked that the Duke said so, Detective Valley said: "How would he know about Capt. McClusky receiving a threatening letter?"

Capt. McClusky, when told of the Duke's statement regarding the eggs, said:

"An anonymous letter was sent to Mr. Zimmerman and referred by him to me. What was in that letter I will not say."

DUKE AMUSED, FATHER-IN-LAW ANGRY.

About midnight the Duke and Mr. Zimmerman came down stairs again. The Duke was immediately surrounded by a crowd of newspaper men, and the report that two other detectives were watching the hotel was made known to him. He smiled goodnaturedly and remarked:

"I suppose we will have a detective at every door after a while. Really this is growing quite amusing. Do any of you know these detectives? I would like to meet them and get some information from them about their reasons for being here. It is a mystery to me. I would like to help you boys out if I could, but I can't, you know. I'm all in the dark myself."

Mr. Zimmerman's good-nature did not hold out as well as the Duke's. The talk caused about the hotel over the visit of the detectives and the questioning of the newspaper men wore out his patience.

"Now, gentlemen," he said finally, "there is nothing in this, and I am getting tired of it. I will go and see McClusky and have an explanation of this annoyance."

He was told he would not be likely to find Chief McClusky at headquarters, and apparently abandoned his intention of going to see him. He and the Duke went upstairs. But about ten minutes later Mr. Zimmerman came down again, called a cab, and was driven to the Thirtieth Street Police Station.

He was allowed to use the police telephone to call up the Detective Bureau. He asked for Chief McClusky, and was informed that the Chief was not there. Mr. Zimmerman then requested of the Sergeant that a statement be sent to all the newspapers that the two detectives had gone with him to the steamer, through the courtesy of Chief McClusky, to save the Duke from any annoyance by crowds.

On his return to the Holland House Mr. Zimmerman made a similar statement to the newspaper men there.

"There is no truth in the story of the anonymous letter," he said. "No one is under surveillance, and there is no mystery whatever. I tried to get Capt. McClusky to have him make that statement to you, but, as I couldn't find him, I make it myself."

TIBER OVERFLOWS ITS BANKS.

The Pantheon and Forum at Rome Inundated—The River Still Rising.

ROME, Dec. 1.—Owing to rains which have recently fallen, the Tiber has flooded the country near its mouth.

The rise in the river exceeds that of 1870, but the damage has been limited by the recently constructed dykes at the lowest points.

The Pantheon and the Forum, the neighboring streets, and a part of the hospital San Spirito are inundated. The surrounding country and the Protestant cemetery outside St. Paul's gate are also submerged. Railroad service is greatly retarded.

The river is still rising.

Special to The New York Times.

KENOSHA, Wis., Dec. 1.—The Fidelity Security Company of New York has refused to make good any losses to private individuals through the peculations of John Burg, the Post Office clerk, who was convicted of robbing the mails.

SALT TRUST WINS IN COURT.

Need Not File Articles of Incorporation in Michigan.

Special to The New York Times.

LANSING, Mich., Dec. 1.—The petition for a mandamus to compel the National Salt Company, organized under the laws of New Jersey, to file articles of incorporation or memoranda of association and also annual reports in Michigan, has been decided by Judge Snow, before whom the case was tried, in favor of the company.

The Judge stated that no other decision was possible, as the Legislature has made no provison requiring outside corporations to file articles in order to transact business in the State. If the company had refused to pay its franchise fee the courts could have vitiated its contract, but having complied with this demand, the company is unassailable under the present statutes.

MISS ROCKEFELLER'S WEDDING.

Ceremony Will Be Postponed Until She Is Cured of Deafness.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 1.—The wedding of Miss Alta Rockefeller, daughter of John D. Rockefeller, to E. Parmelee Prentice, a Chicago lawyer, which was to have taken place Dec. 1, has been postponed until such time as Miss Rockefeller's deafness is cured.

Miss Rockefeller has been in Vienna, Austria, for some time undergoing treatment. Her hearing, which was almost entirely gone, is slowly but surely returning, hence her physicians pleaded for her to remain and postpone the wedding, guaranteeing the complete restoration of her hearing. Miss Rockefeller consented, and recently cabled her mother of the change in her plans. Mr. Prentice, who went over to Austria to accompany his fiancée to this country, agreed with the plan. The wedding will probably take place next Spring.

Populists Want a New Party.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 1.—Chairman Robinson of the State Populists has issued a call for a convention here Dec. 22 to form a new party out of the remnants of the recently defeated parties. It will embrace Silver Republicans, Socialists, Democrats, Populists, and dissatisfied Democrats. The name of Federate Party has been selected for the organization. There will be a meeting of the Populist National Committee at St. Louis Dec. 29, and delegates to represent this State will probably be selected at the coming meeting of the State Committee here.

CHARTER REVISION REPORT IS MADE

Many Changes Suggested for the City Government.

A Board of Aldermen, Two from Each Assembly District.

Mayor's Term, Four Years—His Power of Removal Absolute—Single Headed Police Commission — More Powers for the Controller.

The commission appointed by Gov. Roosevelt under an act of the Legislature of 1900 to examine into the local government of the city and the effect and workings of the charter, and to suggest advisable legislation made its report yesterday, and at the same time made public its report. With the report the commission submitted a bill to be transmitted to the Legislature providing for certain amendments to the Greater New York charter. Substantially the report of the commission is as it was summarized in THE NEW YORK TIMES of yesterday.

In opening its report the commission calls attention to the need of a local legislative body, and adds that "many well-informed persons" urged that a constitutional amendment be adopted prohibiting the Legislature of the State from passing special laws not applicable to all of the cities of the State. While the report does not advocate so radical a constitutional change, it suggests that many of the objects of such an amendment might be effected at once, if both houses of the Legislature were to refuse to consider purely local measures which the cities were competent to deal with. The commission then recommends the abolishment the city at large. On this the report says:

"It appears to be entirely free from doubt that the great departments of public safety should be centralized and in strong control. There can also be no question but that the Departments of Finance, of Law, of Public Charities, of Correction, of Docks, and of Taxes should be centralized and uniform in their operation. But when we come to the departments which deal with the public works of the city a very different question is presented. The present charter centralizes all of these departments and unites them in a Board of Public Improvements. In this respect the commission is satisfied that the scheme of the present charter has proved most unsatisfactory in its workings, more especially with regard to the boroughs other than Manhattan. It therefore recommends a very great enlargment of the powers, duties, and responsibilities of the Borough Presidents."

The Presidents of the Boroughs of Manhattan, Brooklyn, and the Bronx shall each receive an annual salery of $7,500, while the Presidents of the Boroughs of Queens and Richmond shall each receive $5,000 per year.

"Extremely unsatisfactory" is the comment of the commission on the workings of the charter so far as it relates to local improvements, both those paid for by local assessment and those paid for by the city as a whole.

"This is particularly true," says the report, "of local improvements paid for by assessment on the property benefited."

It then calls attention to the satisfactory manner in which local affairs were conducted in the Borough of the Bronx prior to consolidation by an elective officer known as the Commissioner of Street Improvements of the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth Wards, who discharged all administrative duties relative to such matters as sewers and streets, both in regard to their original construction and their subsequent maintenance. The commission recommends the abolishment of the Departments of Sewers and Highways, and that their functions be transferred to the Presidents of the several boroughs.

LOCAL IMPROVEMENT DISTRICTS.

The report recommends that the city shall be divided into twenty-five "local improvement districts." The board in each district shall consist of the President of the borough in which the district is situated, and the Aldermen whose districts are in the "local improvement district." These districts are given permanent names and boundaries—names which have in most cases historical significance—instead of being numbered. The districts are designated as follows: Staten Island, Newtown, Jamaica, the Heights, New Utrecht, Red Hook, Carlton, Williamsburg, Flatbush, Bushwick, Bowling Green, the Bowery, Corlear's Hook, Greenwich, Kip's Bay, Central, Chelsea, Riverside, Yorkville, Bloomingdale, Washington Heights, Harlem, Morrisania, and Chester.

The commission recommends that the resolution of a Local Improvement Board, if approved by the President of the borough and by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, shall be all that is necessary in order that proceedings for a local improvement shall be begun. The President of the borough is given a veto power in order to safeguard the interests of the borough against possible reckless action and the approval of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment was thought necessary, as the city as a whole is the contracting party in such cases. Finally it is recommended that where the expense of any improvement is to be borne partly by the city as a whole, the consent of the Board of Aldermen shall be obtained if the city's share shall equal the sum of $500,000.

The establishment of a Bureau of Buildings in the office of each Borough President is recommended, and the commission recommends the abolishment of the Department of Public Buildings, Lighting, and Supplies. The powers of the head of this department, so far as they relate to public buildings, are to be transferred to the President of each borough. The powers relative to supplies, which are now exercised in some of the departments, have been given to the heads of departments generally. The powers of the department relative to gas and electricity have been conferred upon the Commissioner of Water Supply. The commission further recommends that the Board of Public Improvements be abolished. The powers now vested in that board which have not been transferred to the various departments and to the Presidents of the Boroughs have been given to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

POWERS OF BOARD OF ESTIMATE.

The commission has recommended a considerable extension of the powers now conferred upon the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. Under the plan of the commission, this board will be in reality the centre of all legislative activity in relation to financial affairs, and of much of the administrative activity of the city. It will be a cabinet of the most important administrative officers, and will be composed of the Mayor, Controller, President of the Board of Aldermen, and the Presidents of the five boroughs, all elective officers. The Corporation Counsel and the President of the Department of Taxes and Assessments, appointive officers, are not made members of the board, as they are under the present charter.

On the question of representation the commission says: 'What should be the representation of the different elements in the Board of Estimate and Apportionment has been one of the most difficult questions which the commission has had to answer. We propose to give three votes to each of the officers elected at large; two votes each to the Presidents of the Boroughs of Manhattan and Brooklyn, and one vote each to the Presidents of the Bronx, Queens, and Richmond. It will be perceived that the total number of votes in the board will be sixteen, and that nine of these votes will be cast by the officers elected at large, assuring to them a control of the board.

In addition to the other duties conferred, the Presidents of the Boroughs of Queens and Richmond are to have control of the cleaning of the streets in their boroughs.

The commission devoted much time to the question of bond issues, and calls attention to the fact that such issues have been held up in both houses of the Municipal Assembly, where at present the issue of bonds must be approved by three-fourths of all the members elected. The commission proposes to vest in the Board of Estimate and Apportionment the issuing of bonds in cases where it is not discretionary. In cases where it is discretionary the Board of Aldermen is given what is practically a veto power. Any action must be taken by the Board of Aldermen within six weeks after receipt of a copy of the resolution of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment authorizing the proposed bond issue. Grants of franchises must also be acted upon within six weeks after the Board of Estimate and Apportionment frames the proposed legislation.

ONE POLICE COMMISSIONER.

In recommending the creation of a single-headed Police Commission, the report says:

"Much of the lax and negligent administration of the Police Department has been the result of divided responsibility due to the existence of a board composed of four Commissioners, such board being alleged to be bipartisan in character. As a part of the new scheme, the Mayor is given the absolute power in his discretion to remove a Police Commissioner at any time, and it will, therefore, be difficult for the Mayor to resist public demands for efficient administration of the Police Department.

"The commission has not received from any source whatever an approval of the present system, which has, in one form or another, been tried in the former City of New York for many years past. On the contrary, the system of a single-headed police department, such as was formerly in force in the City of Brooklyn, has been advocated before us by representative bodies of taxpayers and by many private individuals.

"We may add that the recent action of the Governor in holding the Mayor of the City of New York to personal responsibility for the action of the Police Department upon election day in the City of New York, and other events fresh in the public mind, serve to emphasize the importance of an undivided and single responsibility for the control of the Police Department.

The commission's plan provides for the appointment of a Commissioner of Police at an annual salary of $10,000 and two deputies at $4,000 each. The commission gives as one of its reasons for suggesting so large a salary for the Police Commissioner the belief that it will tend to secure a man of the highest character to accept the office. On the subject of the Chief of Police the report says:

"The commission believes that the best police administration may not always be obtained by the selection of the Chief of Police from among the members of the uniformed force, and it has therefore given power to make such selection outside of such force; but when so selected the provisions for a retiring pension are not to be applied to him. It is, however, provided that if selected from the force, the Chief must be chosen from among the Deputy Chiefs or Inspectors, and thus there will be due regard for seniority and long service. The same principle has been adopted for all promotions; and with the application of the new civil service provisions inserted in the charter, dead-locks between the Civil Service Board and the Police Department relative to promotions should become impossible."

The executive powers of the Chief have been preserved, but he may be retired at any time by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Mayor. The financial affairs of the Police Department are to be with the Controller, in line with the general plan to give that official direct control and handling of all money belonging to the city. The Detective Sergeants in Manhattan are made permanent officers, as the Detective Sergeants in Brooklyn always have been, and are placed in the line of promotion to Captaincies.

The Bureau of Elections is taken from the control of the Police Department. The commission provides for a bi-partison board of four Commissioners of Election, who shall receive $3,000 a year each.

The commission recommends that the Fire Commissioner be given two general deputies, and that the organization of the department be modified so as to assimilate it to the organization of the Police Department.

A single-headed commission for the Department of Health is recommended. Attention is directed to the fact that at present the charter provides that the President of the Board of Health shall not be a physician, and it is suggested that the Mayor be not restricted in his choice of a Health Commissioner. The commission did not deal with the power of the Board of Health in reference to tenement and lodging houses, leaving that matter to the Tenement House Commission appointed last Winter by Gov. Roosevelt.

THE CITY CONTROLLER.

The salary of the Controller is increased from $10,000 to $15,000. At the present time he receives, in addition to his salary, a percentage upon the collections made under the transfer tax. It is recommended that the transfer tax be paid into the city treasury. The management of the Departments of Police and Education, and of all pension funds, has been placed in the Department of Finance, and the Controller has been given increased powers in the way of refusing to pay exorbitant bills for supplies In dealing with the question of taxation the commission confined itself to a few amendments in connection with the plan of assessing and collecting taxes, among others one giving the right of inspection by the public of the list showing the taxation of personal property. The date when the annual taxes become a lien—heretofore a matter of uncertainty, and therefore of inconvenience to real estate interests—has been definitely fixed at the first Monday in October.

Under the head of "Municipal Ownership," the report says:

"We have been urged by many of those who have addressed us to make provision for the ownership by the city of what are known as 'public utilities.' Water works, gas works, electric-lighting establishments, ice plants, printing establishments, and docks are some of the subjects to which our attention has been particularly directed. We are convinced, for reasons which we need not here elaborate, that the present policy in regard to the municipal ownership of all the water supply of the city, and of the wharves and bulkheads on and ferries to Manhattan Island, should be continued. We are not, however, prepared to recommend any wider general extension of the principle."

The report recommends that the East River Bridge Commission be abolished and that this bridge, now being constructed, be placed in the Department of Bridges.

DEPARTMENT OF WATER SUPPLY.

No material change is recommended in the Department of Water Supply, but to this department is given the powers in relation to gas and electric conduits now vested in the Commissioner of Public Buildings, Lighting, and Supplies. The report declares:

"We condemn the legislation called to our attention by you, which has given special privileges to the Ramapo Company, by means of which that company seeks to monopolize the most readily accessible sources for the supply of water to the city, and in the interest of the city and its citizens we recommend the repeal of that legislation."

The existing provisions of law prohibiting the making of any contract for the supplying or selling of water, except with the approval of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, together with the separate written consent of the Mayor and Controller and the right of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court to review the making of such a contract, are retained. Attention is called to the fact that in the Boroughs of the Bronx, Queens, and Richmond there are exceptional cases in which it is now essential and may be for years to come to get water by private contract. Amendments are proposed which will enable the city to condemn water rights in all parts of the State provided that no sources of supply shall be taken which are in use for any other municipality, or which may become necessary for the supply of another municipality.

On the question of the city's debt limit in connection with this subject the report says:

"The constitutional provisions against increasing the city's debt operate in practice so as to make it exceedingly difficult for the city to borrow money for the purpose of extending its sources of the water supply. Money may, indeed, under the Constitution, be borrowed without limit for this purpose, but in case the total indebtedness, including that incurred for the water supply, exceeds the limit imposed by the Constitution the City of New York could not borrow money for other purposes essential to its continued growth—such as the extension of its docks and the building of new schools—until the total city debt had again been brought within the constitutional limit. The commission therefore recommends an amendment to Section 10 of Article VIII. of the Constitution, which will so far modify the existing limitations on the incurring of indebtedness by cities as to except from its provisions indebtedness hereafter to be incurred by the City of New York for purposes of water supply. The justification for this exception is the profit incident to municipal ownership of the water supply, and that bonds issued and expenditures made for such purposes not only do not add to the burdens of taxation, but that they actually tend to reduce such burdens."

Continuing, the report declares that "the day is not far distant when the pinch of water shortage will be actually felt. If, when that day comes the city is unable itself to supply the needs of its citizens, theoretical considerations, however sound, will not be permitted to stand in the way of securing additional water by the means most speedily available."

DEPARTMENT OF CHARITIES.

A single-headed commission for the Department of Charities is recommended instead of three Commissioners, as at present. The most important change recommended in the matter of public charities is that Bellevue and its allied hospitals, Fordham, Harlem, Gouverneur, and the Emergency Hospital, be placed under the administration of a Board of Trustees to be appointed by the Mayor. There are to be seven Trustees, to be so appointed that the term of office of one member of the board will expire every year.

To aid the Mayor in making his selection of Trustees the amendment further provides that ten days previous to the date of appointment he shall call upon the Presidents or other executive heads of the following organizations: The New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, the Particular Council of New York of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul in New York, and the United Hebrew Charities of the City of New York, to present a list of names not less than twice the number of Trustees to be appointed, whether in making the appointment of the seven original Trustees or in filling the vacancies that occur from year to year thereafter. The Presidents of these three societies have agreed to act in this advisory capacity. The Mayor may, if he wishes, call upon other organizations or upon individuals to suggest names, or other organizations or individuals may suggest names to the Mayor if they see fit so to do. The Mayor may make his selections from the lists submitted to him, but he is not bound to do so. The Charities Commissioner is made a member of the Board of Trustees, ex officio.

In reference to this subject the commission says: "The experiment of conducting city hospitals by Boards of Trustees rather than by the executive officers of the City Government, has been successfully tried in Boston, Cincinnati, and other large cities."

Amendments are recommended which will give the Charities Commissioner greater power in investigating the circumstances of children who are sought to be made wards of the city. The City Magistrates are to be required to establish a special part to be known as "The Children's Court." The Commissioner is also endowed with increased powers in finding homes for dependent children.

The abolition of the Brooklyn branch office of the Department of Correction is urged on the ground that the Kings County penitentiary is the only penal institution of any importance within the jurisdiction of the department, and that the Warden of the penitentiary can perform all duties required. An amendment is also offered to permit the employment of convicts in certain cases in public work carried on by the city.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

In reference to the Department of Education the commission suggests a system as follows:

"The borough boards are to be abolished; the Board of Education, consisting of forty-six members, appointed by the Mayor, is to be in entire charge of the educational system, excepting so far as limited powers and duties are devolved upon local School Boards in small districts. The members of the Board of Education are to be selected from the several boroughs in about the same proportion in which delegates are now sent to the Board of Education from the several borough boards. The Board of Education is to divide the city into forty-six local school board districts, in each of which the Borough Presidents are to appoint five persons who, with a member of the Board of Education to be assigned by the President of that board, and a District Superintendent assigned by the City Superintendent, are to constitute a local School Board. The local School Boards are to have, in addition to the powers now conferred upon School Inspectors, both advisory and initiatory powers in relation to certain matters peculiarly the subject for local administration."

The Board of Education is to annually appoint an Executive Committee of fifteen members, to which it may depute such administrative duties as it sees fit.

Important changes are recommended in the system of school supervision. The City Superintendent is to be the executive head of the educational administration. There are to be six Associate City Superintendents, who, with the City Superintendent, will constitute the Board of Superintendents, having large powers in relation to all educational matters. This board is to nominate, transfer, and promote teachers; to prepare courses of study; to make rules for the supervision of the schools, and, in general, to determine the educational policy of the city, subject in all matters to the appeal of the Board of Education. The more immediate supervision of the schools is to be in the hands of fifteen District Superintendents, not constituting a board, but each assigned by the City Superintendent to duty in three of the forty-six local School Board districts, and one assigned to an additional district. They are to have seats in the local School Boards of the districts to which they are assigned, with the right to speak, but not to vote.

The commission recommends the repeal of the salary schedule of the Davis law, and that the teachers be paid their present salaries until July 1, 1901, and then "if by July 1, 1901, a new schedule shall not be adopted, the salaries of teachers are to be paid at the rates prevailing on Dec. 31, 1899." After the general amendments to the charter go into effect in 1902, ample provision is made requiring the Board of Aldermen to fix the salaries of all persons receiving any compensation from the city, including the teachers.

DEPARTMENT OF DOCKS AND PARKS.

The commission recommends that the limit now fixed upon the annual issue of bonds by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, without the concurrence of the Board of Aldermen, for dock purposes, be raised from three millions to five millions per year, in order to extend and increase the facilities of the port. The organization and powers of the Dock Board are not materially changed, except that contracts for repairs, without competitive bidding, must be concurred in by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

An amendment is proposed to prohibit the principal officers of the Law Department from engaging in the trial of cases in court for private clients, and from acting as referees or receivers.

In respect to the Park Department the commission recommends that the more important matters of park administration be dealt with by the Board of Park Commissioners, and not by individual Commissioners.

The commission further recommends a general provision affecting all officers, subordinates, and employes of the city, forbidding them to be members of any political party committees, or to be delegates to party conventions. Subordinates of the city are not prohibited from taking a proper and intelligent interest in political affairs. It is the belief of the commission, however, that municipal public servants should not actively participate in partisan politics. Their compensation is derived from taxpayers of all parties, and so long as they accept and retain office the participation of office holders in politics should not extend so far as the direction and management of political campaigns.

Regarding increases of salaries of city employes, the commission declares that the matter has caused alarm, and expresses the belief that expeditures for this purpose could be reduced several millions without loss of efficiency. The salaries of the Police Magistrates are fixed at $7,000 in Manhattan and the Bronx, $6,000 in Brooklyn, and $5,000 in Queens and Richmond.

THE COMMISSION WAS DIVIDED.

The proceedings of the Charter Revision Commission were marked by many long debates over the proposed changes. The report, as signed, is really a majority report of the commission, and on many of the provisions there was a large minority dissent. There was a threat at one time that the minority members of the commission would prepare to send to Gov. Roosevelt another report. Compromises were, however, adopted, and disagreements were settled.

The first division in the commission came on the provision as to the term of office of the Mayor. Many members wanted the term fixed at two years, with the privilege of re-election. The members agreed on the proposition to give the Mayor the power of removal during his term of office. They, however, hedged the increased powers of the Mayor by taking away his control of the Board of Estimate, as at present constituted. The members of the commission agreed that under the present charter the Mayor and his appointees, the Corporation Counsel and the President of the Department of Taxes and Assessments, made up a majority of the board.

These three men if they desired could dominate the proceedings of the board and decide arbitrarily as to bond issues. The Charter Revision Commission aimed to have the power of the board placed in officials elected by the people. After debating the question for several weeks it was finally decided to give the membership of the Board of Estimate to the Presidents of the boroughs, making them responsible to the people of their boroughs for all moneys appropriated.

The single head Police Commission also caused a long discussion. Most of the members were of the belief that the bipartisan board had proved a failure since the adoption of the charter, and responsibility for police matters should be placed on one man.

The Borough Government idea and the increase in the powers of the Borough Presidents occupied several weeks of talk. The members of the commission who reside outside of the Borough of Manhattan insisted on giving more power to the Borough Presidents. It was urged that all local improvements could be better handled by local boards under the control of the Borough President so that the needs of the outlying localities could be looked after. Under the present system the Board of Public Improvements has charge of initiating nearly all local improvements.

There was a spirited discussion on the proposed plan to place Bellevue and the emergency hospitals of the city under the control of a board of seven physicians to serve without pay. It was contended by several of the members that Charities Commissioner Keller had improved these institutions much during the past three years that no change should be made in the system. The proposition to establish a separate board of physicians to control the emergency hospitals was carried by a small majority of the commission.

The chapters of the report devoted to educational matters were the hardest to settle. Many of the Commissioners favored the approval of the Davis school law, but when it was found that such large increases in salaries had been made during the past two years it was decided to leave the question of teachers' salaries practically in the hands of city officials. Some member of the commission claimed that at present many teachers are paid very high salaries for teaching specialties, while classroom teachers who have the hard work to perform are paid lower salaries.

The proposition to abolish the Municipal Council and establish a single body, the Board of Aldermen to have charge of the legislative functions, was unanimously adopted. A difference arose over the extension of the powers of the Board of Aldermen. Some members contended that their powers should be limited, but it was finally decided to establish a large body representative of small sections of the city and give much more power than is now possessed by the Municipal Assembly under the interpretation of the charter by the courts.

OPINIONS ON CHARTER CHANGES

EDWARD M. GROUT, President of Brooklyn Borough—As a whole, I think the revision an admirable piece of work. I commend particularly the single-headed Police Commission, the single-chambered legislature, and the unlimited power of removal of the Mayor.

JOHN J. SCANNELL, Fire Commissioner—Heads of departments not to fix salaries? A godsend. I approve of the plan by which the Mayor would have absolute power of removal. I am in favor of one-headed commissions. I would go further and put the Fire and Police Departments under one head and give him $15,000 a year. I don't believe in the Board of Aldermen. Give the powers to the Board of Apportionment. Let us have something akin to a Board of Supervisors.

BERNARD J. YORK, President Board Police Commissioners—I believe in one-headed commissions. I favor the commission's plan. But the Commissioner at the head of the Police Department should be absolute. As to the option of choosing the Chief outside of the uniformed force, my view on absolutism covers that point. On the question of the Mayor having unlimited power to remove heads of departments, I do not believe that every head of department or any such head should be merely a clerk for the head of the municipality.

THEODORE W. MYERS, ex-Controller—The proposition to have a single head of the Police Department I think is a very good thing. The provision extending to the Mayor absolute power of removal of executive officers is I think also a good suggestion; so, too, is the proposed change in the Board of Eduction. I think the proposed increase in the salary of the Controller only fair. Both the present and amended charters are very cumbersome, creating a good many unnecessary offices, and cutting out some that are necessary. If these amendments are carried out, I think that in a year they will have to make many more changes. It will not decrease the city's expenses, but add to it, and that is not my idea of improvement.

ASHBEL P. FITCH—I approve of the raising the salary of the Controller. I have always favored a single-headed Police Commission.

FREDERICK BOWLEY, President of the Borough of Queens, said he considered the revised charter a vast improvement, especially the section relating to the Borough President. Mr. Bowley approved the report because it gave the President power to remove offenders and takes the consequence of retaining an incompetent man in office.

LOUIS F. HAFFEN, President of the Borough of the Bronx—I am in favor of home rule in the Borough of the Bronx and the other boroughs. The old Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth Wards enjoyed home rule before the charter went into effect, and prospered under it wonderfully.

GO TO SEEK GOLD.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Texas, Dec. 1.—A dispatch from Hermosillo, Mexico, says: "A party of five Americans left here to-day for Tiburon Island, where they will prospect for gold if they can gain the consent of the Seris Indians, who inhabit that piece of land. In the party is Jobson Ferroll, an old Arizona prospector, who visited Tiburon Island about five years ago and remained several weeks with the Indians. He asserts that the Indians are hostile to Mexicans, but that they will not harm American if the latter do not become too inquisitive.

"This party expects to join W. J. McGee of the Ethnological Division of the Smithsonian Institution, who is now on his way to Tiburon Island with a party of American scientists.

"Many of the Indians wear ornaments of pure gold, and Ferroll says he saw many evidences of the existence of gold on the island during his former visit to the Indians, but he was not permitted to pursue his investigations closely."

COTTON MILL DIVIDENDS.

Large Amounts Paid Out to New England Stockholders

BOSTON, Dec. 1.—The protracted uncertainty in China and the hesitation of exporters to continue shipments to that country until the situation clears do not seem to have greatly injured cotton manufacturing in New England. Many of the mills are not concerned in the China trade directly, but some have suffered on account of the troubles there. Nevertheless, a large amount of money was paid in dividends today at mill offices in this city. Among the corporations disbursing to-day are the following:

Nashua Mills, Nashua, N. H., $25 per share, and an extra dividend of the same amount; Great Falls Mills, Somersworth, N. H., 5 per cent.; Jackson Mills, Nashua, N. H., $50 per share; Lancaster Mills, Clinton, Mass., $16 per share; Lawrence Mills, Lowell, 4 per cent.; York Mills, Saco, Me., $22.50 per share; Pacific Mills, Lawrence, $30 per share; Massachusetts Mills, (Georgia,) 3 per cent.

In addition the following dividends are announced: Stark Mills, Manchester, N. H., $30 per share, Dec. 15; Amory Mills, Manchester, N. H., $3 per share, Dec. 15; Appleton Mills, Lowell, 4 per cent., Dec. 10.

Explosion Sinks Fishing Schoner.

STONINGTON, Conn., Dec. 1.—The two-masted fishing schooner Copia, which was equipped with two gasoline engines, was sunk at her dock here to-night as a result of an explosion of her gasoline tanks. The vessel was owned by Capt. Guidon Pendleton, who was aboard of her when the explosion occurred, but escaped injury. The roof of the cabin was blown off, and the vessel was speedily enveloped in flames, which the Fire Department was powerless to subdue. The full extent of the damage cannot be determined until the schooner is raised. There was no insurance.

GETS PORTO RICO FRANCHISE.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Dec. 1.—A most valuable franchise has been granted to Ramon Valdez. It consists of power rights in the Rio Plata, fifteen miles from San Juan. Sufficient power is obtainable for lighting the City of San Juan, for manufacturing purposes, and for the operation of a trolley system.

Senor Valdez, it is understood, will sell out his rights to the Rio Plata Electric Company, in which a number of Philadelphia capitalists are interested, which will spend $400,000 in exploiting the concession.

The grant was requested from Spain in 1898. An application for it has been before the council ever since that body was convened, and was obtained only after a hard fight, the first vote being a tie, and the final vote 5 to 3.

NEW MOVE BY TAMPA STRIKERS.

Say Railroad Men Will Refuse to Handle Cigars Made There.

TAMPA, Fla., Dec. 1.—Leaders of the general strike here declared to-day that they have a communication from President Gompers saying that all transportation of Tampa-made cigars will be stopped by the American Federation of Labor. He says, according to statements of the labor men, that he is aware that two of the railroads entering here have no union men, and that they cannot stop those roads from handling Tampa goods, but that all the men on the connecting lines of these two roads have the power to stop it, and will do so. He says he will have also the handling of empty boxes coming to Tampa stopped.

The Trades Assembly say they have assurances to-day that the boxmakers in every factory will refuse to make boxes for Tampa manufacturers.

BOSTONIAN MUST PAY $13,961.

BOSTON, Dec. 1.—The full bench of the Supreme Court to-day overruled the defendant's exceptions in the case of Philip M. Lydig of New York against Dwight Braman of this city, and the plaintiff holds a finding of $13,961 against the defendant.

The action was brought to recover damages for breach of an agreement made in August, 1888, to repurchase from the plaintiff $20,000 in bonds of the St. Louis, Kansas and Southwestern Railroad Company. The defendant took ten of the twenty bonds back, but subsequently refused to take back the other ten, and so this suit was brought. The agreement of the defendant was to repurchase the bonds "at any time," which the Court holds to mean within a reasonable time. The demand of the plaintiff upon the defendant to repurchase the bonds was made Dec. 19, 1895, which is held by the Court to have been reasonable.

AFRAID OF GOVERNMENT GUNS.

Marylander Wants Indian Head Cannon Turned the Other Way.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 1. — Lieut. Joseph Strauss of the United States Navy, by United States District Attorney John C. Rose, filed an answer to-day to a bill of complaint of Eli Gaffield of Stump Neck, Charles County, asking for an injunction to prevent Government officials from turning their guns in the direction of his property when testing them. Lieut. Strauss is Inspector of Ordnance in charge of the naval proving ground at Indian Head, Charles County, Md.

It was alleged in the bill of complaint that projectiles, in some instances weighing more than a ton, fell on Gaffield's property. The concussion had shattered the window panes of his house, and the foundation had been damaged. The value of the property, it was said, was damaged because persons transacting business in the waters surrounding it were afraid to approach.

Guns have been tested at Indian Head, it is claimed in the answer, since 1890, while Gaffield is alleged to have bought his home in 1891.

DISPUTE OVER A TROTTING HORSE

YONKERS, N. Y., Dec. 1.—Judge Kellogg's courtroom at this place was crowded to-day with sporting men who had come to hear the proceedings brought against George H. Kaler, the well-known sporting man. Kaler was arrested on a warrant sworn out by James P. Toole, also a sporting man, and the reputed owner of Flora McIvor, the trotting horse. Poole accused Kaler of having taken the horse from his stable without his knowledge or right.

When Kaler was arraigned he pleaded not guilty. After some delay the former charge was withdrawn and another substituted, charging "John Doe" with having taken the horse. It developed in the preliminary hearing that a colored man in the employ of Kaler had entered the stable of Poole and had taken the horse. The hearing in the second charge was set down for Tuesday, before Judge Kellogg.

It came out at the hearing to-day that Kaler gave Poole $500 some time ago to go to Tennessee and purchase two horses for him. It was claimed that he bought two horses for $150 each, and that "Flora McIvor" was one of them. Poole says that when the case comes to trial he will prove that the horse now in dispute was bought by him with his own money. The horse in dispute is the one that won several prizes, among them one at the recent meeting at the Empire State track.

BLEW HALF HIS HEAD OFF.

Fisherman Who Wanted to Shoot Ducks Seized His Gun by the Muzzle.

GREENPORT, L. I., Dec. 1.—John Anderson of New Suffolk, while fishing in Gardiner's Bay, yesterday, discovered a lot of ducks. He had a loaded shotgun in the cabin of his boat, which he kept within reach while he fished. Anderson, when he saw the ducks, reached over, took hold of the muzzle of the gun, and pulled it toward him. The trigger caught on the side of the door, and he received the charge full in the face. One side of his head was blown off.

Some time later William Griffin found the boat with the body in it adrift and towed it to this place.

NEW TRIAL FOR ARMOUR & CO.

Suit Against Chicago for Property Destroyed to be Heard Again.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Judge Haney has allowed a new trial of the suit of Armour & Co. against the city for the recovery of damages for the loss of three railroad cars which were burned in the Fifty-fifth Street yards during the American Railway Union strike of 1894. The recovery was sought under the act which makes a municipality liable for injury done to property by riot. The first trial resulted in favor of the city.

Injudicious remarks of counsel in support of the plea to exempt the city from liability caused the granting of a motion for a new trial. A great number of similar cases are on the court calendars, in which different companies are seeking damages for property lost in the strike of

PROPERTY OWNERS' DENIAL

Statements About Houses Complained of by Supt. McCullagh.

Representatives of Prominent Estates Indignant—St. Clement's Church People Will Seek Redress.

Much indignation was manifested yesterday by the friends and representatives of well-known estates and residents alleged to be the owners of property on the east side complained of by Superintendent of Elections John McCullagh, as occupied by disorderly persons and gamblers. District Attorney Gardiner's having had a title guarantee company look up the owners of many of the premises mentioned, made known his determination, through his assistant, Forbes J. Hennessy, to notify the owners of this property of the uses to which their buildings were being put, and if the evils were not at once eradicated to institute criminal proceedings.

Among the estates designated as owning east side property in which vice and gambling flourish were those of Peter Cooper, Peter Lorillard, William Ketcltas, Hamilton Fish, Jr., Peter Stuyvesant, and William Astor, together with John Jacob Astor, Henry Hart, J. J. Kernochan, Mrs. George Peabody Wetmore, and the rector and Trustees of St. Clement's Church, in West Third Street. Owing to the absence from the city of Col. Gardiner and Mr. Hennessy, the full list of ninety titles could not be obtained.

The evidence in the majority of the cases was secured by Superintendent McCullagh and private detectives. One hundred and three cases were submitted to the District Attorney, two affidavits accompanying each case. Acting upon this evidence, Mr Hennessy several weeks ago obtained from Magistrate Zeller about a hundred warrants, three of which were served, two of the prisoners being subsequently discharged.

Assistant District Attorney O'Reilly, who was associated with Mr. Hennessy in the prosecution of the cases, said yesterday that about eighteen more warrants would be executed and that notices would be sent to all property owners against whose premises complaints had been made. The evidence in many cases, he said, did not justify the issuance of warrants, having been collected not by Superintendent McCullagh's deputies but by private detectives.

Superintendent McCullagh, when seen, said that private detectives had collected the evidence against the disorderly houses and gambling resorts and that his deputies had looked up the excise violations, while in pursuit of their duties in locating colonization. The duties of his deputies, Mr. McCullagh added, ended here, and the evidence of illegal practices was furnished to the District Attorney, the proper prosecuting officer, whose duty it was to look up the owners.

"I don't know the owners of any of the places," he continued. "My men simply obtained evidence of lawbreaking, and this was turned over to Col. Gardiner. Of his action in the matter I do not care to say anything."

Among the places complained of by Superintendent McCullagh, as published, is 110 West Third Street, said to be owned by the rector and Trustees of St. Clement's Church. This number is the church building itself. The members of the congregation are highly incensed at the publication of the name of the church, which has been active in suppressing vicious conditions in the neighborhood, in connection with the ownership of any building occupied as an evil resort. The Rev. E. H. Van Winkle, pastor of the church, when seen, said:

"The statement that St. Clement's Church owns property on which is situated any illegal resort is not only an outrageous libel, but a pure fabrication. The church owns no property on which any dwelling is situated. The church itself includes the numbers 106, 108, and 110. Unless a retraction of the otatement is made, we will certainly prosecute the responsible parties, and I shall so announce from the pulpit.

"It is disgusting that the District Attorney should lend himself to anything of this kind. However, some such retaliatory measures might have been expected to follow Bishop Potter's inauguration of a vice crusade. St. Clement's has suffered much from the immorality of the neighborhood and I myself have been spoken to by women from behind the blinds of houses in West Third Street and on the street itself. I have reported these matters to Police Headquarters and to Capt. Chapman. The latter, I think, tried to improve the locality and told me of the great difficulty of obtaining any convictions in such cases. It is a very serious matter to have with the ownership of property where gambling is carried on or vice exists, and we shall certainly seek redress."

The representative of Rutherford Stuyvesant, said to be the owner of 78 and 110 Third Avenue, on the District Attorney's list, characterized the statement as libelous, and said that Mr. Stuyvesant, while leasing the land, owned none of the buildings thereon, and was ignorant of their use or character.

At the offices of the Kernochan estate it was denied that the property at 186 Chrystie Street, complained of as a disorderly resort, was a part of the estate.

The Lorillard estate's representative said concerning 136 Bowery, which Peter Lorillard was said to own, that the property was sold about ten years ago.

Ex-Mayor Hewitt, representing the Cooper estate, was out of town, as was the representative of the Astor estate, alleged to own 279 and 286 Bowery.

POLICE ORDER TO SALOONS.

Sunday Business Must Be Confined to the Back Room.

Special orders were sent out yesterday from the Police Department to every saloon in the city notifying each that a strict outward compliance of the excise law must be observed. Roundsmen from the different precincts carried the word to the saloon keepers.

"Shades must be up and the barroom clear of people. You can do business in the back room, but no selling over the bar," was the instruction given to each saloon keeper.

The first news of this order was given to meetings of the liquor dealers' associations in what is known as the "Yorkville District." Each police precinct has its own special local organization of liquor dealers. The "Yorkville District" association meets near the East Sixty-seventh Street Police Station. While a special meeting of the association was in session on Friday night a Roundsman from the police station appeared and gave the above-quoted order. The same order was passed along the line to those saloons doing business in the precinct of which the West Forty-seventh Street Station is the centre, and to all the other precincts in the city.

For a long time the saloons have been accustomed to draw down the shades, and then sell over the bar, as well as in the back rooms, on Sunday. The police have made no objection to this plan, and the new order given out yesterday created surprise and consternation. One of the officers of the Liquor Dealers' Association, who is in the jurisdiction of the police of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, said last night:

"The order was received by us, all right, and we will obey it. You see, it is just this way. There is a howl about reform in the city, so the police have to do something. They order us to put up the blinds so they can see inside of the bars, but they do not object to our selling liquor in the back rooms. This will allow them to say that they are enforcing the liquor laws, at least, and we are willing to help them in this move. This won't last long, but for a time we will obey the order. It really has nothing to do with the suppression of vice, but 'it goes,' so that is the end of it for us."

Along Eighth Avenue elaborate arrangements were being made by saloon keepers last night to comply with the new order, and a quiet word was given to each regular customer to "work the back door, as nothing was doing at the regular bar on Sunday just now."

EAST SIDE WOMEN'S MEETING.

To Co-operate with Committee of Fifteen in Its Work.

The leaders in the movement of the east side women to co-operate with the Committee of Fifteen in driving the keepers of vicious resorts from the tenements held a conference yesterday. They decided to call a meeting of women for next Saturday at 3 P. M. in Liberty Hall, 257 East Houston Street, for the purpose of organizing a women's committee on the suppression of east side vice and arranging a practical plan of campaign. Leopold Datner presided at yesterday's conference. As spokesman for those who attended the conference, he said:

"We are trying to promote the welfare generally of the east siders, and this movement is not intended to abridge the just liberties of any citizens. We want to stop, among other things, the distressing cries of certain peddlers and other unnecessary noises which sometimes make sick people delirious on the east side. The east side needs a cleaning up morally and physically. The committee will not be against the small stores and shops which have to be kept open in some districts on Sundays or anything else that contributes to the lawful comfort of the people. But we want vice driven out."

AGAINST GAMBLING IN BUFFALO.

Commissioners Instruct Police to Rigidly Enforce Every Law.

BUFFALO, Dec. 1.—The Captains and precinct specials were summoned before the Police Commissioners to-day and directed to enforce rigidly every law, and especially the law against gambling. In an interview subsequently, Police Commissioner Cooper said the Commissioners had been made the scapegoats of inefficient or conniving subordinates, and that they will not stand it.

Report after report has been made that there was no gambling, but the Commissioners receive undoubted proof that gambling is going on, and the conditions are ten times worse that it was believed they were. Hereafter any member of the force if he neglects his duty will be dismissed.

SWISS CLUB'S BANQUET.

More than a hundred members of the New York Swiss Club attended the eighteenth annual banquet of the organization in the Holland House last night. In the long dining room on the parlor floor there were hung the names of many men celebrated in the history of Switzerland, each one inscribed in gilt letters on a highly decorated placard and surrounded by evergreens.

Before every guest was placed an artistic programme, prepared for the occasion with illustrations by the club's artist, P. C. Frauenfelder. Until far into the small hours of morning the banquet hall and corridors round about it resounded with Swiss songs, interspersed every now and then with "The Stars and Stripes," or "America."

Dr. T. B. Ploda, Minister from Switzerland to this country, was the guest of honor. He made an address in German, a patriotic eulogy of his native land. Other speakers were J. Bertschmann, Swiss Consul in this city, and Dr. Charles L. E. Lardy, Secretary of the Swiss Legation M. L. Muhlemann responded to the toast to the United States, telling of the resources of this Nation and declaring that nowhere else on earth were men of all races and creeds being successfully welded into one people. He referred to the victory of the gold standard as one that all Swiss-Americans should appreciate, a sentiment that the audience heartily applauded. The toastmaster was Dr. F. Schwyzer, and among the prominent guests were R. A. Fischer, A. W. P. Alenson, and E. Stierlin.

The most picturesque feature of the affair was an old Swiss who stood at the door of the banquet hall. He had a long gray beard, and wore the uniform of an Alpine soldier of the fifteenth century. His cap was of the Tam o' Shanter variety, and brown in color. His jacket fitted loosely, but his nether limbs were tightly bound by mouse-colored knickerbockers and leggins of the same hue. In his hand he carried an old-fashioned spear, with which he saluted as each guest passed into the room.

The Swiss Club has 160 members, this being only a small percentage of the inhabitants of that nationality who live in New York. Three or four times a year the organization has "smokers" and informal dances, meeting once in each twelvemonth for a banquet like that of last night.

CHARLES PARKS ARRESTED.

Indicted for an Assault for Which Magistrate Discharged Him.

Ex-Alderman Charles Parks of 259 West Fourteenth Street, indicted by the November Grand Jury for assaulting George Wenner of 1,000 Forrest Avenue in May last, was arrested on a bench warrant by Detectives Cuff and McNaught yesterday and admitted to $1,000 bail by Recorder Goff. Parks's daughter, Mrs. Mitchell, became his surety.

Wenner alleges that Parks assaulted him in a saloon at Fourteenth Street and Eighth Avenue in a dispute over some change. Parks was discharged by the Magistrate in the Police Court. The matter was presented to the October Grand Jury, which dismissed the complaint.

The matter was resubmitted to the November Grand Jury by the Parkhurst society, which was interested in the case, and the indictment found.

Parks says Wenner, after the dispute about the change, attacked him with a knife and that he struck the complainant with a cane in self-defense.

DARING ROBBERY IN CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—A daring attempt was made last night by five men to rob an Ogden Avenue electric car at Randolph and Canal Streets. The robbers were beaten off after a furious battle with the crew of the car and several passengers, but not until Edward J. Wright, President of a commission house on South Water Street, was robbed of a satchel containing more than $300 in currency and checks. There were twenty passengers on the car.

When the police patrol wagon arrived on the scene in response to a riot call turned in by a citizen they found the conductor, John Steindeck, lying insensible in the street, bleeding from half a dozen wounds. The interior of the car was wrecked. The windows were broken and the floor and seats spattered with blood.

During the fight in the car several women fainted, while others leaped panic-stricken from the car. Several passengers whose names the police were unable to learn received cuts and bruises.

LIEUT. HOBSON IS ILL

In the Presbyterian Hospital with Typhoid Fever Symptoms.

Dr. Bellamy Says that His Patient Has a Strong Constitution and Will Come Through All Right.

Lieut. Richmond Pearson Hobson, United States Navy, is lying ill at the Presbyterian Hospital, in this city. Lieut. Hobson's illness is slowly but surely developing into typhoid fever, and, although he was reported as resting easily last night, the physicians who are attending him admit that their efforts to ward off the disease have been unsuccessful.

According to the statement of J. G. Berton of 46 West Fifty-fourth Street, who is Lieut. Hobson's nearest friend in this city, the latter was in Washington, D. C., when the first signs of the sickness were noticed. "This was three days ago," said Mr. Berton last night, "and as soon as Lieut. Hobson became aware that he was threatened with a serious illness, he returned to this city and went to his rooms, at the Army and Navy Club.

"On Friday night he became worse, and Dr. Russell Bellamy of 35 West Thirty-first Street was called in, and this morning it was decided to take the Lieutenant to the Presbyterian Hospital. He is very much run down, and his system is weakened as a result of his hard work in tropical climates."

According to Dr. Bellamy, Lieut. Hobson is a man of remarkable constitution, and therefore his chances for a speedy recovery were excellent. "His chances of having typhoid fever," said Dr. Bellamy, "are ninety-nine in a hundred, but he is strong and has lots of stamina, and, although men of muscular development fall easy victims to the disease, I believe that he will come through it all right."

Lieut. Hobson is at present on a leave of absence, which he obtained in October last on account of his eyes, which have been giving him a good deal of trouble. He has recently returned from China and Manila, where he was sent to determine if it would be worth while to raise the Spanish ships sunk by Dewey in Manila Bay. From this mission he returned early in September.

Shortly afterward he was assigned to duty at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. After he obtained his leave of absence he went South to his native State—Alabama—for a short visit, during which he made the famous speech to the effect that Admiral Sampson's heart was breaking on account of the Schley controversy. His last appearance in public was on Nov. 25, when he spoke before the Young Men's Christian Association in this city.

MR. ODELL'S INAUGURATION.

Arrangements for the Ceremony Have Been Perfected.

ALBANY, Dec. 1.—Secretary of State McDonough, who is making the arrangements for the inauguration of Governor-elect Odell, has completed the plans with the exception of some of the minor details. Mr. Odell having expressed his preference for as quiet an inauguration as possible, the military escort will not be an imposing one. It will consist of the Tenth Battalion of this city and the Orange County Separate Companies, the Fifth and Tenth of Newburg, and the Twenty-fourth of Middletown.

The inauguration ceremonies, as usual, will be held in the Assembly Chamber at 11 o'clock in the morning, but admission will be by ticket. After the ceremonies Gov. Odell will go down to the Executive Chamber, where he will receive the State officers and attachés of the State departments, and later the citizens. From 4 until 6 o'clock Gov. and Mrs. Odell will hold a reception at the Executive Mansion.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, Dec. 1.—United States Shipping Commissioner Joseph M. Dickey, Captain of the Governor's Guards of this city, last evening informed that command at a meeting held to perfect arrangements that they were to have the right of line in the parade at Albany on the occasion of the inauguration of Governor-elect Odell, and each was to receive a ticket admitting him to the chamber where the inauguration is to take place. After the parade and inauguration the command will banquet at the Kenmore. The guards are exempt members of Company E, Nineteenth Battalion, in which Mr. Odell was a Sergeant for a time.

Capsized Off Mexican Coast.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The United States Ambassador to Mexico has telegraphed to the State Department information received by him from the Mexican Government that the vessel that a vessel named The Czar of San Francisco, was found capsized off El Paso recently. The vessel was towed to Las Pas, near San Blas, apparently loaded, and with her hull in good condition. The local Mexican authorities have been instructed to take all necessary steps to care for the vessel and her cargo.

Schooner Ashore at Hog Island.

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 1.—The schooner S. H. Wheeler was to-night reported ashore at Hog Island. No details of the accident can be obtained. The Wheeler is owned by the S. B. Marts Company of Baltimore, and has long traded with this port.

Young Pastor for Important Church.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 1.—Announcement was made here late to-night that the Rev. Dr. L. A. Ferris of Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., has accepted a call to the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church of Baltimore, one of the largest and most important churches of that denomination in Maryland. Dr. Ferris is but thirty-two years old. He has been four years in his present pastorate at Dobbs Ferry. He is said to be one of the most eloquent preachers in the Methodist Church. He will succeed the Rev. Dr. Joseph E. Smith, but will not assume the pastorate until next March, after the meeting of the Baltimore Conference.

Fred Degetau, First Commissioner from Porto Rico, elected by the Republican Party, was a passenger on the steamer San Juan, which arrived at Quarantine last night. Mr. Degetau is on his way to Washington, D. C. He will stop at the Imperial Hotel, in New York.

OHIO ELECTRIC ROAD SOLD.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Dec. 1.—Andrew Radel, Vice President of the Middlesex and Somerset Traction Company, has purchased the Akron and Cuyahoga Falls Rapid Transit Electric Railroad of Ohio and took possession of the property to-day. No figures are given, but it is understood that the price is well up in the hundred thousands. The plant, in addition to twenty-five miles of electric street railway equipment, includes the electric lighting plant at Barberton, Ohio. The road's terminals are in Akron, Kent, and Barberton. Mr. Radel will spend a quarter of a million in improving and extending the system.

The report that Mr. Radel was acting for the Whitney-Rockefeller syndicate of New York is emphatically denied by him. Mr. Radel is one of the most extensive owners of electric roads in this country. Recently he disposed of his interests in the Bridgeport, Milford, Shelton, and Westport lines, which he developed, to the Whitney syndicate.

"I have consummated the deal, so far on my account," Mr. Radel said to-day, "but there will be other people associated with me in the ownership of the property. I have, of course, spent some few days looking over the property, and have had visiting me here at different times the man who has been running it. He is Thomas H. Walsh of Akron, and he will continue to manage the property for me. In fact, this was one of the conditions of the purchase. Mr. Walsh is a lawyer, and got into the trolley business rather against his inclinations. He was first occupied with getting franchises, and after that, when the contractors who built the line refused to put in more money to keep it up to date and thoroughly well equipped, he was obliged to take hold of the management to save his own interests."

WEDDING HAD TO BE DEFERRED.

Fifty Guests, However, Merrily Partook of the Feast Prepared.

RED BANK, N. J., Dec. 1.—George H. Douglas and Mrs. Lucy M. Austin, both of Lincroft, near this place, were to have been married last night, but a divorce decree stood in the way of the ceremony, and the wedding was postponed until next Saturday.

Mrs. Austin was divorced from her husband a few days less than six months ago. She was a resident of Connecticut at the time, and the laws of that State declare that neither of the divorced parties shall marry within six months after the decree has been granted. Mrs. Austin was apprised of this, and it was corroborated by a Red Bank lawyer, who was called in just before the wedding was to have taken place.

Dr. S. H. Thompson, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of this place, arrived at the house shortly before 8 o'clock, the time for the marriage, but when he heard of the divorce decree he sought legal advice, with the result that the wedding was put off. About fifty guests were present, and Mrs. Austin was attired in her bridal costume. A big feast had been prepared, and not to disappoint their guests Mr. Douglas and his bride-elect invited them to partake of the dinner, which they did right merrily.

THREATENED JUDGE STRONG.

Grover, the Accused Man, Escaped While the Constable Dined.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Dec. 1.—Wilfred Grover of Cranbury, recently wrote a threatening letter to Judge Strong. A warrant was issued and handed to Constable Farr to serve. Farr went to Grover's residence and was invited to dinner. He accepted.

Grover, during the meal, excused himself, and went up stairs. The constable later went in search of his prisoner, and found that Grover had escaped through a window. He is still at large.

Big Safe Concern's Reorganization.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 1.—The receivers appointed four years ago to take charge of the affairs of the Herring-Hall-Marvin Company, safe manufacturers, have about completed their work. A final order for the winding up and adjustment of the affairs of the company, applied for to Judge Andrew J. Kirkpatrick of the United States Circuit Court will be signed by the latter as soon as counsel can prepare it. The defunct corporation will be replaced by a new company, which will be known as the Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Company, and will be governed by a board of officers, of whom some will be those who were identified with the old company. The consideration for the sale of the old company to the new one has not yet been announced.

Vault Under a Historic Homestead.

FREEHOLD, N. J., Dec. 1.—A vault constructed of heavy stone and cement has been discovered under the historic Hendrickson homestead at Holmdel. Some people advance the theory that it must contain the treasures of the old Dutch Hendricksons, who first came to America from Holland over 200 years ago. The original part of the Hendrickson homestead was built in 1696. It is under this part of the house that the vault was discovered by James P. Hendrickson, the present owner. Mr. Hendrickson has as yet made no effort to break open the vault.

Bond Issue for Newark's New City Hall.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, Dec. 1.—Bonds for $1,000,000 for the new City Hall will be issued as soon as possible. This was decided upon to-day by the City Hall Commissioners in conference with Controller Johnson and the Finance Committee of the Common Council. Auctioneer M. J. O'Connor this afternoon sold the Boys' Lodging House property in Market Street for the new City Hall Commission, to which it had been transferred by the Common Council. The highest price bid was $71,000, offered by an agent of William E. Lehmann.

Arrested in Newark, Wanted Here.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 1.—Arthur B. Hoffman was arrested here this afternoon on a charge of forgery. A bench warrant for Hoffman's arrest was issued by a Manhattan Magistrate. It was sworn out by Frederick M. Beckes of 98 Seventh Avenue, New York, who says he cashed Hoffman's spurious check for $38. It is said that Funk & Wagnalls, the New York publishers, for whom Hoffman worked, also want the prisoner.

Would Reorganize Jersey City Police.

President McGill of the Jersey City Police Board caused a sensation at Friday night's meeting of the board by a speech in which he advocated the abolition of the detective force. He said detective work should be done by patrolmen, who might receive extra compensation for such work. He favored designating Sergeants as Lieutenants. The police force, he said, should be "a civic organization on military lines."

Special to The New York Times.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Canada, Dec. 1.—The man must be awake day and night who can keep track of the numerous enterprises that Francis H. Clergue is inaugurating here at the Sault, and can follow the operations of the great Eastern syndicate that has backed Mr. Clergue with its faith and millions.

Within the month this "Cecil Rhodes of Canada," as the Dominion is beginning to term him, has broken ground for what will be one of the large steel rail and plate mills of the American Continent, and designed to make a steel not rolled anywhere else, a steel for rails and plates of the famous nickel alloy so noted as harder and more durable than any other. He has completed arrangements to dam the Michipicoten River at its falls and to develop the 50,000 horse power there running to waste. The falls of this stream, away off in the wilderness of Northern Canada, in what was a year ago an unknown forest, are 100 feet straight down, and 85 feet more to the foot of the short rapids, and the volume of water is very great. They are but a few miles from the railway that Mr. Clergue has just pushed into the wilderness, and near the iron mine he has opened since the commencement of the year, and will be utilized in part to provide power for these enterprises.

Another new development is the opening of a gold mine on the Michipicoten, said by outsiders to be remarkably rich. Still another November development is the purchase of steamers for a line of passenger boats to run along the north shore of Lake Superior and into Georgian Bay.

All these new developments are the outcome of the original idea, under which the water power of Lake Superior was first harnessed by this remarkable man, and many of them are forced upon him by the situation as he has found it, one enterprise making another necessary in order to attain profitable development and proper utilization of facilities uncovered. The conditions in Algoma when Mr. Clergue entered it were as wild and forbidding as those of South Africa when Cecil Rhodes began carving out an empire.

SOME OF THE ENTERPRISES.

The dozen or fifteen Algoma companies associated under the parent organization are engaged in numerous undertakings. They are operating one of the largest pulp mills on the continent; they are erecting another to make sulphite pulp to the value of $1,500,000 yearly; they are building railroads, one to Hudson Bay, another through the nickel belt of Ontario, from which the nickel of the world is now produced, and another along the Michipicoten iron ore range that they have discovered and are opening; they are building canals to harness all the water that flows out of the greatest lakes in the world, except so much as the Government may require for the movement of ships to Lake Superior; they are completing works for the production from nickeliferous pyrrhotite of sulphurous and sulphuric acid, sulphite liquor, and sulphurous anhydride; they are completing works for the reduction of the roasted clinder which is a by-product of this ore into nickel steel or a ferro-nickel ore of value in the arts; they are commencing the foundations for a large blast furnace to reduce their own iron ore into pig to use in alloy with this nickel-steel for the rolling mills for which they are laying foundations, and they have finished a large electrolytic plant for the production of caustic soda and bleaching powder.

In order to operate all these varied undertakings the company must have an immense number of resources, all on a large scale. It has been given by the Canadian Government a grant, covered with timber and underlaid with minerals, amounting to 1,650,000 acres. On this grant are the most extensive spruce forests yet in private hands, and spruce is the wood of woods for the manufacture of paper. It has bought one of the large nickel mines of the Sudbury region, capable of turning out 500 tons a day. It is opening and developing a hematite iron ore mine on which there are estimated to be millions of tons of excellent ore. It is acquiring salt mines in Eastern Ontario for the basis of its caustic soda and bleaching powder, and it has the right of use to all the otherwise unused water of Lake Superior, under the direction and control of the Governments of the United States and Canada.

THE NEW POWER CANAL.

This company has completed and in service one of the largest water power canals in Canada, giving it 20,000 horse power. On the Michigan side of the boundary it is completing a canal of 50,000 horse power that is the largest in the United States. It is four times larger than the great American Government ship canal that passes the enormous commerce of the Northwest. This power canal is being cut for two and one-half miles, a channel 25 to 70 feet deep and 200 feet wide, for half of its length through walls of solid sandstone, and the rest through heavy clay. At the upper end engineering necessities and the requirements of the navigable channel from which it takes water have made this canal about a quarter of a mile wide, and into it the stream flows at a very low velocity. At the lower end it widens at the point of discharge to a great stream 1,400 feet in width, and the water, after passing down through eighty great turbines, will move on its way to Lake Huron at the rate of less than a mile an hour. The river into which it flows runs at the same point four times as fast, so there will be no interference with navigation and the free steerage of vessels. Ships pass this point at the rate of more than 100 every day, and the slightest obstruction would be fatal.

To build this canal, all the latest and most economical contrivances have been brought into play. The digging, whether in dirt or rock, is done by great steam shovels, taking out their yards of clay or tons of rock at a dipperful. Power drills and channelers for cutting the rock as it lies in place, thus leaving a solid wall of the original strata, are operated by compressed air which is distributed along the length of the work and can be tapped almost anywhere by the turn of a valve. Great pile drivers are sinking timbers for a support to the smooth timber floors and sides of the canal in places where the walls are earth, so that there shall be as little friction as possible and the water be delivered with the practical head as close to the theoretical as skill will permit.

At the lower end of this immense canal the foundations are now in for a power house, of stone and concrete, to be 1,380 feet long and 100 feet in height and width. In this power house the water will have a fall of seventeen feet, and it will be made to pass through eighty great turbines, now under construction in a Massachusetts shop. These wheels will drive dynamos sufficient to give 50,000 horse power. The electrical installation will be by the Westinghouse Company and of the latest design.

PULP FOR THE WORLD.

These two canals, one on each side the Sault River, will not take all water of the flow of Lake Superior in excess of what may be needed to operate the ship locks and float vessels in the ship canals there. So work has commenced on a third power canal for the company. This is to be of almost the size of the Michigan canal, and will be located on the Canadian side, some distance back from the river. It will not be needed for some years, and will be ready then. Rock from this excavation and that of the Michigan canal is being used in the construction of the handsome but plain manufacturing buildings of the company on both sides the international boundary.

The pulp mill on the Canadian canal is of a capacity of 100 tons a day of mechanical wood pulp. The spruce comes from the company's own lands and from tracts on which the Government has granted stumpage privileges at very low cost. There are acres of spruce forest in the hands of this company to last it longer than the life of any person connected with the enterprise. The woods of Canada north of the Sault, almost to Hudson Bay, are spruce. Spruce grows there to a size not reached anywhere else in the West; trees two or more feet in diameter and 100 feet high are common. The timber can be floated almost directly from the stump to the grinders at the mill.

This mill is a marvel of mechanical skill, new processes there used being quite largely the invention or adaptation of Mr. Clergue or his brother, B. J. Clergue, the manager of the mill. The mill ships to all parts of the world. During the Paris fair it supplied thousands of tons of pulp for papermaking there. A few days ago it completed a shipment of several thousand tons to England, on its own ships. It has a large and steady market in Japan, shipping across the continent on the Canadian Pacific Road. It furnishes pulp to the very centre of the pulp and paper trade of the Western United States in Eastern Wisconsin, and is known all over the paper world.

ROAD THROUGH THE WILDERNESS

Aside from the water power, pulp mill, and soda decomposition works, the latter of which is a minor feature of the enterprise, the only completed industrial operation is the iron mine at Michipicoten. Two years ago there was a gold fever at Michipicoten River. It is 125 miles north of the Sault, on the shores of Lake Superior, near no settlements but a post of the Hudson Bay Company and an Indian mission. Among the many who made a track over which to reach the wilderness one prospector found, not gold, but an outcrop of hematite iron. He took samples to Clergue, who examined the location and paid the man the price he asked. It was $500, and the chance was worth that much. Men were sent in to examine and prospect more thoroughly and found a vast deposit of ore, hundreds of feet in length and width, exposed, or covered only by rotting leaves and mold. Diamond drills were taken to the property and examinations made, both on land and through the ice of an adjacent lake, at whose bottom, 120 feet down, the ore was found to continue.

And then happened a marvelous thing. It was August of 1899 when it was decided that the iron must be utilized. It lay twelve miles back from Lake Superior, but the intervening distance was as rough as any mountains of the Rockies, and it was a task for the mountain engineer to build there. Winter was coming on, and during its six months of continuance there would be no communication with the outside world except over 120 miles of ice or freezing, storm-swept waters. Supplies were gathered together and a scow load of men, horses, food, tools, and machinery was hastily towed to the bay of Michipicoten. The forest loomed an apparently impenetrable wall; back of it rore the hills, almost straight from the water's edge; the distance to the mine was cut by ravines, bet et by lakes of great depth, and crossed by rivers and mountainous walls of rock. That was in August, 1899. In July, 1900, the first cars of ore passed down out of the opened mine, over a track laid in 80-pound steel, in cars of fifty tons capacity, pulled by 110-ton locomotives, and the ore thundered down a dock built of materials at hand into ships bought by the company and brought direct from Liverpool. Since then about 50,000 tons have been shipped to furnaces in Canada and the United States.

AFTER FAILURE, SUCCESS.

All the money that has been spent at the Sault and elsewhere in this great undertaking has been the result of what may be termed a failure, and it has been the outcome of a brave attempt to recover for the original loss. The result is one of the greatest, if not absolutely the most important, industrial development in America to-day, important not only in the $20,000,000 that is being spent and daily pay roll of thousands of dollars, but in the development of new and original processes of manufacture and industrial chemistry, in the utilization of hitherto wasted materials, and in the improvement and use of great natural resources before valueless.

Some years ago, when the attention of capital was turned to the tremendous possibilities in water powers, Mr. Clergue went West for himself and some Philadelphia friends to find an available power that they might improve and make money from by the lease of horse power in quantity. The Sault Ste. Marie, with Lake Superior as its milipond and an available fall of seventeen to eighteen feet, seemed to him the most alluring prospect. He secured charters of old water power companies there and went to work. In a short time his company had 20,000 horse power available for sale. To their surprise no one wanted it. It was considered too far off. In order, then, to save the investment they had made it was necessary to use this power themselves, and to this problem their attention was turned. It soon became evident that development to be successful in that far wilderness must proceed upon the principle of utilizing only what raw materials were at hand, and of using them to the fullest extent that science would permit.

The Lake Superior region is a vast basin of mineral and timber wealth, largely undeveloped. To the north of the Sault stretch interminable forests of spruce, to the east are the world's mines of nickel, both shores of the lake are rich in copper and iron, the copper on the south side native, that on the north chalcopyrite and bornite. It was to the woods that Mr. Clergue first turned his attention. He had been in paper mills about his home in Maine for years, and knew the process of manufacture. So a mill was erected. It is now making $800,000 worth of pulp a year. At first it was impossible to sell the product at any distance on account of difficulties of shipment. Processes were devised that remedied all this. These are carefully guarded, and to this day the most conspicuous sign about the mill entrance is "No photograph instruments permitted inside."

SURMOUNTING DIFFICULTIES.

The next step in the evolution of a great industrial scheme was natural. Sulphite pulp is worth nearly twice as much as mechanical wood. Why not make sulphite? There was no sulphur for paper mills at less price than that from Sicily, and it cost much for freight alone. Off 100 miles to the eastward were the great nickel mines, whose ore is a combination of sulphur, nickel, copper, and iron. If the sulphur from this could be utilized a revolution in chemistry would be effected and a supply of raw material had at small cost. So the chemists that had been gathered about the new concern were given the problem and put to work to solve it. This they did, and the company is now completing a great plant for the reduction of this nickeliferous pyrrhotite into sulphur and ferro-nickel ore. Every atom of the sulphur is eliminated. It is used in making liquor for the pulp and for various other commercial products that will be sold in competition with Sicilian sulphur, &c.

This problem solved, it was easy to erect a mill for making the sulphite pulp. This mill will be running in a few weeks. From the pyrrhotite, freed of the last atom of sulphur, there was a by-product of ore rich in nickel. This, in accordance with its lines of policy, the company proceeded to develop. There was abundance of cheap electric power. The smelting of ores by electricity without the use of fuel had been an iridescent dream of scientists. It was attacked in the complete laboratory of the company at the Sault and solved. Every one of the hard cutting tools in use at the great machine shops of this concern is made of nickel steel, reduced from its own ores by electrical smelting under its own discoveries and patents.

STEEL FOR KRUPP WORKS.

The company has so thoroughly satisfied itself, and has been able to so satisfy such people as the Krupps of the success of its electrical smelting of iron ores that it has made a contract with that firm to ship it all the output of the Sault furnaces in electrically smelted nickel steel for a term of years, up to 250 tons a day. This contract was closed more than a year ago, and so far nothing has been done under it but in the way of preparation. During the coming year, however, the company expects to begin the shipment of large quantities of steel to Essen and Magdeburg, to the Krupp works. The company is erecting furnaces to make this steel, and the buildings to house them are completed.

The nickel ore found at the company's Sudbury mines is too rich in nickel to make a hard steel without the addition of a non-nickeliferous pig iron, and here is where the company's Michipicoten mines come in. It was not until these mines were seen to be needed for this purpose that their development was commenced. In order to supply the pig iron for this admixture, plants have been prepared for large blast furnaces at the Sault, and these will be constructed at once. Pig iron from these and ferro-nickel from the sulphur furnaces will be used in steel furnaces for the making of nickel steel rails and plates, and works for the manufacture of these latter articles have been commenced within the present month. The buildings are of an aggregate length of 2,600 feet. An old plant in Pennsylvania has been bought, is being dismantled, and all available parts will be brought to the Sault.

For the separation of the copper contained in the company's Sudbury ores, processes were introduced necessitating the use of sodium in quantity. An electrolytic process was perfected by the company's chemists, so that in its new alkali works they are decomposing salt into its constituents. As a by-product there was chlorine. To utilize this for nothing commercially valuable must be permitted to go to waste—the company will make a bleaching liquor, using lime water instead of lime as the carrying agent. The East Ontario salt mines are said to have been purchased in order to provide a source of raw material for the sodium works.

NEEDED SHIPS AND GOT THEM.

With the beginning of shipment of iron from Michipicoten the company needed ships for the work, having decided that all possible parts of the operation should be in its own hands. The Canadian canals between the Atlantic and the great lakes were completed last Summer. The first ships to pass up them to the lakes were four steel ore ships that had just been bought in England by the Algoma Steamship Company, a subsidiary concern of this company. This Fall the first ships to pass down the canals to the ocean loaded with cargoes for delivery in unbroken bulk on the other side of the ocean, were these four. Part of the cargo was pulp from the company's works, part was steel billets shipped by the Carnegie Company, at a rate that made the shipment from Pittsburg cost Carnegie $3 less a ton than if he had sent the shipment via New York City.

What a line of waterway is that, from the interior of the American continent to the far ports of the oceans. It has been the dream of a century; now it is accomplished, and the first use of it has been by this new North American company, which, with Yankee shrewdness and cash, is so marvelously developing the Canadians' country.

When the four steamships of the Algoma Steamship Company return to the upper lakes next May they will be accompanied by eight more vessels, four 3,000-ton steamships and four similar sized barges, all now building in England for the same company. By that time, too, there will be in operation a line of three passenger ships between the Sault and Clergue's new Manitoulin Railway to the East, and to this new Michipicoten railway to the Northwest, so that this new company, which will then be but one year old, will fly its pennant on fifteen large vessels, all engaged in profitable trade.

OPENING A NEW COUNTRY.

It is 200 miles from the Sault north to Missanabie, on the transcontinental line of the Canadian Pacific. Toward that point the Algoma Central Railway is now building. Track is being laid at the rate of a mile a day. Last week the first passenger trains were put on, and they are now running out from the Sault for fifty miles. For the encouragement of this 200 miles of road into the wilderness the Government has given 1,650,000 acres of land, the grant embracing the fee to the land and all that lies upon, in, or under it. For months the company has employed 150 of the best land lookers, geologists, and mineralogists, all examining the country so that the land to be taken under this grant shall be as valuable as possible.

When the road is complete to the Canadian Pacific there is a gap of 300 miles to the shores of Hudson Bay. For the construction of a road this additional distance there has been offered the company a grant that will probably amount to 3,000,000 acres more. It is not a barren northern wilderness, but a land filled with resources of value. There are vast forests of spruce, hemlock, pine, and cedar, of maple, elm, and birch; there are beds of limestone and lignite, of pottery clay, gypsum, and marl; deposits of copper, iron, and gold. There is the sea at the northern end, and in five years the markets of Chicago and the Northwest will be supplied with salt-water food fresh from the ocean at Hudson Bay.

Two less ambitious railway projects are the Manitoulin and North Shore and the Michipicoten lines, the former opening the riches of Sudbury and Manitoulin and the latter the length of the new Michipicoten ore range, whose length no one yet knows.

The company has leased a part of the power to be derived from its Michigan Canal to the Union Carbide Company, and another part to the American Alkali Company, and the price for power to these companies is but $10 per horse power per year. At this figure there is a large net revenue from the canal, and a considerable power to be used in other ways.

TWENTY MILLIONS THE COST.

In order that the diversion of such a tremendous quantity of water as will flow through these three power canals may not permanently lower the level of Lake Superior, the company will, the present Winter, begin the construction of remedial works at the head of the rapids of Ste. Marie. These are planned by its engineers, under the supervision of its consulting engineer, Alfred Noble, and will be installed under the direction of the War Department Bureau of Engineers. It is intended that as the flow through the power canals increases, the dams of the remedial works shall be increased similarly, so that the facility of flow through one shall be offset by a retardation through the other, and in time, when all the available water shall pass through the canals, the rapids of Ste. Marie shall be dry and the Chippewa shall no longer fish or plunge reckless tourists through the mighty flood. Then every drop of water running out from Lake Superior shall have its work, either to turn a wheel or bear a ship.

There have been spent in this enterprise about $5,000,000, and the plans call for the expenditure of about $15,000,000 more, in addition to the road from Missanable to Hudson Bay. While the enterprise is essentially Canadian, in that its development is upon Canadian territory and of Canadian materials, the money that is flowing into it is American, largely Philadelphian, in part also from New York and Boston. The great grants of land and cash by the Canadian Governments have not been without reason, for the land is to be opened and made productive and the undeveloped resources are to be made valuable, while there are to be placed each year 1,000 male settlers along the grant. These will be Englishmen.

In all its various ramifications and extensions this company has earned the right to be called one of the most energetic and radical of the great industrial enterprises of the age. Every line of work it has undertaken has been the growth from the original and central idea, and as such has become part of a well-rounded whole. There is no such thing as dissipation of energy in a wild scattering of operations; for each fits into the rest. It is this, and the skill that directs and the scientific ability that has discovered and invented so many new and startling possibilities of work or manufacture, that are most significant of the success of the enterprise.

INSPECTOR LIGHT ARRESTED.

Fabian J. Light, an Inspector in the Health Department, was arrested at his home, in Richmond Valley, yesterday, charged with having allowed his horse to go for several days without proper care. Light has been in this city for several days, owing to the illness of his wife. On Thursday George Elliott, agent for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals on Staten Island, found Light's horse so weak from the lack of food that it could scarcely stand. The animal had chewed the edges of the feed box and the boards of the stall. Light returned that night and took the horse to Manhattan. The agent entered a complaint, and Light was arrested. He said the horse had been well cared for. He was held on his own recognizance for examination next Wednesday morning.

During the Cuban campaign Light was a member of Roosevelt's Rough Riders, and took part in the battle of San Juan Hill. He was wounded in the head by a piece of shell and received a bullet wound in the body. At the close of the war he came to New York and received an appointment on the Board of Health staff.

SNATCHED WOMAN'S PURSE.

James Kelly, nineteen years old, of 45 Powhattan Avenue, Brooklyn, was arrested at Rutgers and Henry Streets last evening by a patrolman from the Madison Street Station. He attempted to snatch a pocketbook from the hand of Mrs. Elizabeth Weindrug of 42 Henry Street, while she was standing in front of her door.

Mrs. Weindrug hung on to her pocketbook, however, and the struggle attracted the attention of the policeman, who gave chase and caught Kelly at Rutgers Street. When he was searched at the station the pocketbook was found in his possession.

A half hour later a boy, who said he was the younger brother of the prisoner, called at the station and asked if his brother could be bailed out.

When told that he was charged with a felony and that bail could not be accepted at a police station for so serious a charge, he went out and bought some supper and sent it in to his brother. He said Kelly had given his correct address and that he had never heard of his being arrested before on any charge.

THE CZAR CONVALESCING.

His Wife Nurses Him Herself, and All State Papers Are Submitted to Her.

YALTA, Dec. 1.—The condition of the Emperor this evening is satisfactory. The decline in his temperature since Sunday is explained as being the result of a diet of extract of beef and milk. His physicians are satisfied with the progress he has made, and if no complications supervene the daily bulletin of his condition will be discontinued shortly.

The following bulletin was issued to-day: "The Emperor passed a very good day yesterday, and slept very well last night. His Majesty's condition is very satisfactory. At 9 o'clock yesterday evening his temperature was 97, pulse 60. This morning his temperature was 96.1, pulse 60."

His Majesty is entering the period of convalescence. A nurse and his body physician are in constant attendance, but the Empress has not ceased her watchful care and is attending personally to the wants of her husband. In spite of the strain, her Majesty shows no signs of fatigue, and enjoys good health. She looks remarkably well.

The Czarina has submitted to her all urgent State affairs, so that any communication for the Emperor passes through her hands.

The statement that Queen Victoria had sent her private physician to report upon the illness of the Czar is without foundation, but the Queen is daily informed of the course of the Czar's malady, and all news relating to the imperial family. Most of the Ministers are here, but Yalta is rapidly becoming empty, as the season is over. The weather is dull, with an easterly wind, but the temperature is pleasant.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 1.—A Minister stated this afternoon that the Ministers of Foreign Affairs, the Interior, War, and Finance were not expected to leave Yalta before the middle of December, as the physicians of the Czar will not probably allow audiences before then.

Nobody but the Czarina has entered the Czar's bedroom since his illness began, the professional attendants excepted. His Majesty's convalescence will probably require six weeks, and the Emperor will hardly leave Yalta before the Russian New Year. Some of his physicians advise him not to return to St. Petersburg this Winter.

However, the Minister alluded to in the foregoing thinks his Majesty's return within a few weeks is probable, the climate of Yalta being inclement in Winter and the wooden summer house now occupied by the Czar being unsuitable. Kieff has a good Winter climate, but the present Czar has never lived there. Tzarskoye-Selo, near here, is regarded, all circumstances considered, as the most pleasant locality in Russia. It has a high situation, elevated above the St. Petersburg fogs. Consideration for the Empress also suggests a residence in a modern palace.

A woman in Court circles gives a new version of the origin of the Czar's illness, saying his Majesty took a sea bath while he was still overheated from tennis playing.

FREDERICKSZ LOSES OFFICE.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 1.—During the last week the bulletins referring to the Czar's health have not been signed by Baron Fredericksz, the Minister of the Court. The law positively requires the signature of the Minister of the Court in such cases.

The explanation, according to an excellent informant, is as follows: Ten days ago the Czarina went to Baron Fredericksz and commanded him not to telegraph to anybody a single word without first showing her the message. "I will obey," replied the Baron.

The following day the Czarina received a long message from the Dowager Czarina, at Copenhagen, urging her to spare her strength, to leave matters to the attendants, and not to be anxious, lest, in the delicate state of her health, an accident overtake her. The Czarina was displeased, and asked Baron Fredericksz if he had telegraphed to the Dowager Czarina anything which could cause her to send such a message.

The Baron answered: "Yes."

"But did I not say you must show me all messages?" asked the Czarina.

Baron Fredericksz replied that he believed himself bound to answer the Dowager Czarina's inquiries.

"You forgot yourself. You cease to be Minister," said the Czarina.

The Czar sent for the Chief Master of the Ceremonies, Gudovich, but it is believed that Prince Kotzubel, a personal friend of the Czar, who always accompanies him on his travels, will succeed Baron Fredericksz. Prince Kotzubel is now in the Ministry of Domains.

SLAIN BY LONDON "HOOLIGANS."

East End Ruffians Murder a Policeman —A Woman Shot.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The recent increased activity of the police against "Hooliganism" in Whitechapel has been speedily followed by a revengeful murder. Early this morning Constable Thompson attempted to disperse a band of "Hooligans," when one of the latter turned and stabbed him to death.

Thompson was closely connected with the search for the perpetrator of the "Jack the Ripper" murders.

Another band of armed "Hooligans" shot a woman in the Limehouse district last night, and various other assaults by these rowdies have been chronicled.

Governor General of Warsaw Dead.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 1.—Prince Alexander Imeretinsky, Governor General of Warsaw, died yesterday evening.

Prince Imeretinsky had the title of Serene Highness. Besides being Governor General of Warsaw, the most important Government of Russian Poland, he was Governor of the Vistula, including Kalisz, Kielce, Lomza, Lublin, Plotrkow, Plock, Radoln, Siedlce, and Ssuwalki. He was a General of Infantry, an Aide de Camp General, and a member of the Imperial Council.

Prof. J. T. Mommsen Dead.

FRANKFORT-ON-THE-MAIN, Dec. 1.—Prof. Johann Tycho Mommsen died yesterday evening. He was a brother of Theodore Mommsen, the celebrated German historian, and was born at Garding in 1819. He made a special study of philology. From 1846 to 1848 he traveled through Greece and later obtained a professorship at the Husum College, (Schleswig.) Banished from that town after the first war of the duchies, he became, in 1850, professor at the Eisenach educational institute and in 1864 Director of the Frankfort Gymnasium.

Daniel Macaleese, M. P., Dead.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Daniel Macaleese, member of the House of Commons for the North Monaghan Division, is dead.

Daniel Macaleese was born in 1840, in the North of Ireland. He was for the most part a self-educated man, and was a journalist, having risen through the grades of clerk, printer's reader, reporter, &c. He was the editor of The Belfast Morning News under the late E. Dwyer Gray, M. P., and at the time of his death edited The Ulster Examiner and was the proprietor of a local Monaghan paper, The People's Advocate. He was a home ruler of the anti-Parnell faction.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 1.—The Cunard liner Lucania, which sailed from here for New York to-day, had on board Haddon Chambers, the dramatist, and Winston Spencer Churchill, who is to lecture in America.

Lecture by Mrs. Andrew D. White.

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—Mrs. White, wife of the United States Ambassador, lectured this afternoon at the American Woman's Club upon the Island of Foehr, where she spent the Summer, and upon Frisian customs and antiquities.

German Census Being Taken.

PLEA FOR ANGLO-SAXON UNION.

J. Henniker Heaton, M. P., Begins Series of Articles in The Observer.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—John Henniker Heaton, Member of Parliament for Canterbury, has begun a series of articles in The Observer on Anglo-American relations, in which he pleads for a union of the two countries as a combination of moral and material forces that no power in the world could overcome. He explains that by union he means such identity of interests and policy as unites Great Britain and her colonies.

Mr. Henniker Heaton asserts that an unsigned alliance already exists in the form of the mutual attraction of two kindred peoples, one unassailable on land and the other on sea. This, he says, accounts for the happy issue of more than one crisis in recent years, and represents the fairest hope of humanity.

KAISER NOT WELL INFORMED.

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—Baron von Wangenheim's assertion in the Reichstag that Emperor William is systematically misinformed is still discussed by the press. The Cologne Volks-Zeitung says editorially that it is notorious that his Majesty does not read the papers representing various parties, but only daily extracts made by personal employes. "Thus," the paper adds, "depending entirely upon the personal prejudices of his entourage, he sees only such clippings as his entourage wants, and is, necessarily, getting wrong impressions."

The Volks-Zeitung strongly admonishes the Emperor to hereafter devote half an hour daily to glancing personally over the leading organs of each party, saying that then he might really "feel the pulse of the nation."

MEET DEATH IN THE SEA.

Trade in American Meats Declining.

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—The trade in American meats is more and more restricted throughout Germany. A striking case is at Gera, where a large business firm, that of Beyer, has been ruined by the authorities of the principality of Reuss forbidding the official examination of his American meat. Beyer is unable to sell it without a certificate of inspection.

DR. KENNEDY IN THE TOMBS.

Dr. Samuel J. Kennedy, under sentence of death for the murder of Dellie Reynolds in the Grand Hotel two years ago, having been granted a new trial by the Court of Appeals, was yesterday removed from Sing Sing Prison and placed in his old cell in the Tombs, in "Murderers' Row."

Handcuffed to State Detective Jackson, Dr. Kennedy enjoyed a short period of comparative freedom during the trip to this city, and his subsequent arraignment before Justice Fitzgerald in the Supreme Court for formal transfer to the custody of the Sheriff.

Appearing none the worse for his imprisonment, aside from a slight pallor, Dr. Kennedy, neatly dressed, was taken to Warden Johnson's office, in Sing Sing Prison, at 9 o'clock, and given $3 and the valuables taken from him when he entered the prison.

After bidding the keepers good-bye and thanking them for their kind treatment, accompanied by his lawyers, Dr. Kennedy walked to the railroad station. Concerning his own case and the other occupants of the condemned cells, particularly Roland B. Molineux, Dr. Kennedy was quite reticent, saying that, upon the advice of his counsel, he preferred not to talk of his own affairs, and that he did not deem it proper to say anything about Molineux.

Mrs. Kennedy was not at the Grand Central Station upon the arrival of her husband, and he was at once driven to the Supreme Court. Assistant District Attorney Le Barbier, for the State, said to Justice Fitzgerald that the papers in the case were regular, and that the arraignment was a mere formality.

"The code, however, in such cases is to some extent vague," said Mr. Le Barbier, "and in order that the proceedings may be entirely regular, your Honor has been appealed to to sign the formal order of transfer. The District Attorney makes no objection to the order."

Justice Fitzgerald signed the order, and Kennedy was then taken to the Tombs. There he was welcomed heartily by Warden Hagan.

"I am greatly pleased at the change from Sing Sing to the Tombs," said Dr. Kennedy, "although I was quite well treated there and had the run of the library, which privilege was greatly appreciated. Freedom, however, if only for a few hours, is enjoyable, and I took advantage of the opportunity presented to get a good smoke and look around at the city again. Of my own affairs I cannot speak at present."

Forged Notes Circulated.

The police of East Fifty-first Street are looking for George Metz, 1,330 First Avenue, who, it is alleged, forged the name of William Auerbach, manager of the Peerless Bottling Company, 206 East Fifty-Second Street, where he has been employed, to two notes, one for $2.50 and the other for $4. Metz passed one note on William Whitehouse, a grocer of 916 Third Avenue. A boy, John Connell, thirteen years old, of 52 Sutton Place, presented another one last night at the same place. He said that a man named George had given him the note. The boy was sent to the Gerry Society rooms.

A number of fights occurred between the Short Line men and the Pennsylvania section men.

RECORD OF THE TOURNAMENTS

Fidelias Now Lead in National and American National Series—Corinthians' Costly Defeats.

The occurrence of Thanksgiving Day during the week caused a considerable falling off of activity on the part of the local bowlers, as the games in most of the tournaments were suspended on Wednesday, while on Thursday there were no matches at all. In consequence fewer changes in the standing of the clubs resulted.

In the National League the Fidelias increased their lead by winning three more matches, and now seem to have victory within their grasp. The Golden Rods not only increased their high score by over a hundred, to 1,002, but in consequence moved from third to second place.

The two games which the Corinthians won in the Columbia League tournament during the week restored them to first place in that league, but in the American National tournament their loss of two games on Tuesday dropped them from first to fifth place, and gave the Fidelias the lead in that tournament, as well as in the National League.

The Knickerbockers lost their lead in the Harlem League tournament to the Empires, but partially made up for it in the North Side League by moving from sixth to fourth place in consequence of their two victories on Wednesday.

In the Bank Clerks' League the Mechanics and Traders' National Bank team dropped from sixth to thirteenth place as a result of losing two games on Tuesday, but there were no changes in the leaders. There were no changes in the Life Insurance or Fire Insurance Leagues, as their weekly games were omitted.

In the Brooklyn Interclub League the Crescent Athletic Club maintained its lead, but the Carleton Club displaced the Brooklyn Bicycle Club in second place.

The first round of the Brooklyn Bank Clerks' League tournament was completed on Tuesday, the Williamsburg Savings Bank being compelled to relinquish first place to the Franklin Trust Company by the loss of a single game on that date. There were no changes in the leaders of the other Brooklyn tournaments.

ROAD DRIVERS ORGANIZED.

National Club Formed to Govern Amateur and Matinee Races.

A National organization of amateur reinsmen, the pet project of a number of wealthy patrons of the light-harness horse in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, and Chicago, which has been under consideration for the past three months, was practically perfected yesterday after two meetings held at the Hoffman House. A morning conference considered suggestions for the work of organization, and another meeting, held in the evening, acted on the plans proposed. There were present L. M. Quimby of Boston, Dr. H. H. Kane of the New York Driving Club, C. K. G. Billings of Chicago, and Harry Devereaux, the authorized representative of the Pittsburg (Penn.) and Cleveland (Ohio) Driving Clubs, all acting for their respective organizations.

The general plan approved was that the association when completed be known as the Amateur Drivers' Club of America, and be composed of delegates representing the amateur associations of road and matinée drivers in New York, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Ohio; Pittsburg, Kansas City, and Denver, Col., all of which have expressed the desire to become members of the National body, and clubs in other cities that may join later. The governing body, it was decided, shall frame rules regulating road driving and matinée or amateur races, and shall take control of all amateur racing. A plan was proposed and approved that each season one or more National race meetings for amateur drivers be held in cities approved by the general body, at which meetings there shall be trophies offered by the National association, these trophies to include one for the championship among the gentlemen reinsmen. The purposes of the organization will be to promote interest in road driving, and the races and the championship trophy are expected to induce amateurs to buy and maintain a higher class of harness horses.

FIVE FELL IN STEEPLECHASE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Fine weather drew a big crowd at Bennings to-day, and the racing was the best of the meeting. Three of the finishes were of the hair-raising sort. Three favorites won. McMeekin, William Barrick's high-class three-year-old, made his first appearance at Bennings in the last race. He was an odds on favorite, but Burns had to ride the horse hard in the stretch to head off Kinniklinic. The steeplechase was a chapter of accidents, five of the seven horses going down or refusing before the race was over. Two of the jockeys, Lynch, who rode Silver Fox, and Adams, who was on Fairle, had ugly falls, and both were badly shaken up. It was thought Lynch was seriously hurt, but he recovered. President Howlands has received word from The Jockey Club that the petition for an extension of the meeting until Christmas will not be allowed, and the meeting will close next Saturday. Summaries.

RAINBOW AGAIN DISQUALIFIED.

Newport Yacht Racing Association Takes Action on the Famous Case.

As an aftermath of the yachting controversy precipitated by charges made by Herman B. Duryea against Capt. George Parker, the sailing master of Cornelius Vanderbilt's seventy-foot racing sloop Rainbow, the Newport Yacht Racing Association yesterday made public its action in disqualifying the Rainbow in the series of races sailed under its auspices off Newport during last July and August. Mr. Duryea, in a private letter to Mr. Vanderbilt, two months ago, accused Capt. Parker of having violated the racing rules by taking additional ballast aboard the yacht after official measurement. Mr. Vanderbilt at once assumed responsibility for his skipper's act, and sent letters to all the yacht clubs under whose auspices he raced during the season. He acknowledged and explained the error aa due to misinterpretation of the rules and asked that the Rainbow be disqualified. All the clubs disqualified the boat after due consideration of the case.

The action of the Newport Yacht Racing Association has been looked forward to with interest as giving light upon the special rules adopted by the owners of the four seventies. These rules were not operative in the other races of the quartet and have never been made public. The letter of the association's committee to Mr. Vanderbilt follows:

Dear Sir: We have received your communication in reference to the races sailed under our auspices at Newport during the past Summer.

These races, as advertised, were sailed under "the special rules adopted by the class." The rules relating to ballast are:

"Should it be found that any yacht exceeds 70 feet, any or all of the other yachts may, at the option of their respective owners, add movable ballast for the purpose of making it or them equal in length to the longest yacht. Ballast, however, shall not be added for any other purpose."

"Nothing in this or the preceding clauses shall be construed as a prohibition against the addition of any article or equipment other than ballast and copper. Nothing, however, shall be stowed in holds of yacht between kelson and floor frames, except sails and one additional ton of lead, which has been provided by builder, must be carried during season of 1900."

Under the rules, therefore, the committee regret that they have no choice other than to disqualify the Rainbow in the series races sailed at Newport. Respectfully yours,

RALPH N. ELLIS,
WOODBURY KANE,
A. CASS CANFIELD.

The meetings will be held in Plymouth Church, the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, the Central Presbyterian Church, and the Ross Street Presbyterian Church.

DUNCAN AND HERRESHOFF TALK.

Manager of Cup Defender Visits the Designer in Bristol.

Special to The New York Times.

BRISTOL, R. I., Dec. 1.—William Butler Duncan, Jr., who recently accepted the management of the new cup defender to be built here, visited Bristol last evening for the first time since he actually became the leading yachtsman in charge of the craft that is to sail for the cup against the British challenger next August. Mr. Duncan was met at Bristol Station by the designer, "Mat" Herreshoff, on the arrival of the 7:10 P. M. train. It is understood that much of the plans was arranged between the two men previously by mail, but various other matters that needed discussion before any final decisions were made were the reasons which brought Mr. Duncan to Bristol at this time.

Mr. Duncan and the designer dined at the home of the latter, and later the two men went to the model room in the house, and there sat up the greater part of the night, discussing plans about the construction, rig, and sail plan of the craft that it is expected will beat the Columbia four or five minutes over a thirty-mile course. It is said that even by beginning work on the new defender the latter part of December it will be quite a task to have the boat completed and rigged by the middle of next May.

Another visitor at Bristol to-day is C. Oliver Iselin. The movements of Messrs. Duncan and Iselin were apparently timed so that both could consult with the designer at the same time about the many important details of the new vessel. Mr. Iselin can give much valuable advice on matters in this respect from his experience as successful manager of three cup defenders. This morning all three talked matters over at the office. Mr. Duncan and Mr. Iselin declined to discuss their plans for publication.

GAMES OF SOLDIER ATHLETES.

Good Contests by Company G in Eighth Regiment's Armory.

Dennis Horgan, the champion shot putter of Ireland, was the star competitor last night in the annual games of Company G, Eighth Regiment, and the Pastime Athletic Club, held in the Eighth Regiment Armory, Ninety-fourth Street and Park Avenue. A twelve-pound instead of a sixteen-pound shot was used, and for the greater part of the evening Horgan and the other mighty men of muscle were exerting themselves to the utmost to get the weight a few inches further than the previous put.

Horgan was the only scratch competitor, and he was beaten in the event on handicap allowance. Horgan made a put of 53 feet in a trial throw, but his best distance in the competition was 51 feet 3 inches.

The victor was S. S. McCauley, who hurled the shot 42 feet 2½ inches, and his handicap allowance of 14½ feet gave him the winning distance of 56 feet 8½ inches. T. B. Johnson of Columbia University got second place, with a total of 56 feet 3 inches, of which were allowed by handicap, his actual put of 45 feet 3 inches being the second best of the evening, next to Horgan's.

Columbia made a very good showing in the evening's results. M. B. Dean created quite a surprise by winning both the sixty-yard novice and the sixty-yard handicap run. C. A. Baker, another Columbia athlete, won the half-mile run, novice, a scratch event, in 2:15 1-5. Columbia therefore got three first and one second in the events.

The one-mile bicycle race was prolific in falls. F. J. Albreker, the only man who did not fall off, won the race. Most of the others jumped on their wheels again and rode on.

J. M. Nason of the Pastime Athletic Club, and the champion sack racer, made an effort to break the world's record at sack racing for 25 yards, which for twenty years had stood at 4 4-5 seconds. He failed

NEW NAME FOR MAYOR

Frank Brainard Suggested at a Dinner for Him.

Frank Brainard, first Vice President of the Produce Exchange, was the guest at a complimentary dinner given last night at the Manhattan Hotel by the members of the Produce Exchange Sound Money League. Louis Spence, one of the last speakers, complimented Mr. Brainard for his work as Marshal of the Produce and Maritime Exchange division of the sound money parade. He then spoke on the coming Mayoralty fight, and said Mr. Brainard was a man who had the confidence of both parties and he nominated him for Mayor. This speech, although a surprise to the diners, was received with cheers.

There were seventy-six persons seated at the tables when the dinner to Mr. Brainard began. President E. T. Barrows of the Produce Exchange presided. At his table were seated John Proctor Clarke, W. B. Douglass, F. H. Andrews, Alfred Romer, H. A. McGee, E. A. Drake, E. C. Rice, A. E. Blackman, Charles Armstrong, C. I. Hurd, J. V. Barnes, and Charles Rebadan.

President Barrows made a very short speech, complimenting Mr. Brainard on the work he had done in the great parade. In answering him, Mr. Brainard said that the Democrats deserved a good deal of the credit for the success of the parade.

"I believe we had more Democrats than Republicans in that parade," he said.

John Proctor Clarke, speaking of next year's municipal campaign, said: "I think the Democrats might adopt a new motto—'We may wear Croker's picture, but we'll march with Bishop Potter.'"

"But we won't march with Tom Platt," interrupted several of the diners.

Mr. Clarke stopped his speech at this point, and there was a general scene of confusion. President Barrows whispered to Mr. Clarke:

"Don't go on in that way, there are a good many Democrats present."

"All right, boys," said Mr. Clarke, coughing, "I guess we'll talk on some other subject."

After several other speeches congratulating Mr. Brainard on his success as a Marshal, Mr. Louis Spence was introduced as an old Democrat who had voted against Bryan and Bryanism.

"We should all remember that there is a great crisis coming at the next election. What we want to do is to elect a man who is thoroughly honest, who is a business man, and who will run the affairs of the city as an honest business concern."

"Mr. Brainard's the man we want," interrupted one of the diners. "I name the guest of this dinner, Mr. Frank Brainard, as candidate for Mayor."

Mr. Spence sat down amid a burst of applause although several of the diners intimated that his announcement had been premature.

"The publication of his name as a candidate now," said one of them, "will destroy all his chances." When silence had been secured, Mr. Brainard arose and said that there was no chance of his getting the nomination.

"Ally buds that blossom at this time of year," he said, "are sure to be snowed under through the Winter."

Others who spoke were Monroe Crane, Charles Rabadan, George William Ballou, Joseph F. Thayer, Henry McGee, and Vincent Loeser.

The diners learned that Mrs. McKinley and Mrs. Hobart were in the hotel, and sent a handsome bouquet of flowers up to them. Mrs. McKinley wrote a note thanking the donors on behalf of herself and Mrs. Hobart.

A CORNER IN EGGS.

Said to Have Been Engineered by Armour & Swift, the Chicago Packers—Immense Profits Already.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—The Times-Herald tomorrow will say:

"A corner has been made on eggs. The price is now 19 cents a dozen, and how high it will go no one but the men who are engineering the deal can tell. The men are Armour, Swift, and other packers and dealers. Those who control the corner have already made $500,000, and their profits have only begun. The deal is of such proportions that it makes the Phillips corner on corn seem insignificant.

"The deal has been engineered by the packers, Armour and Swift, who are the largest owners of refrigerator cars in the country, and who have facilitaties for handling eggs to better advantage than other dealers.

"There are also in the combine the Western Cold Storage Company, the Monarch Refrigerator Company, Purcell & Tinkham, and C. H. Weaver & Co., all of Chicago, Haskell & Bosworth of Beatrice, Neb., who buy at 150 stations in the country, are also heavily interested. Prices have advanced from 13 to 19 cents in the past two months, and prospects are for a still higher range. The consumption of eggs has been very heavy, and prices of fresh eggs have kept up between 20 and 23 cents for the past few weeks, which is unusual, owing to a scarcity. Not more than 2,500 cases of strictly fresh eggs are held in Chicago to-day."

GIVES FREEDOM TO A CONVICT.

Missouri Court Holds Pardon Once Recorded Cannot Be Recalled.

JEFFERSON, Mo., Dec. 1.—Judge Hazell, in the Circuit Court, to-night released W. J. Ray, a Christian County prisoner, on a writ of habeas corpus. The decision is important, because it holds that the Governor cannot recall a pardon after it has been recorded with the Secretary of State.

Ray was serving twenty-five years in the penitentiary for murder in the second degree. Gov. Stephens issued a commutation releasing him and, after it had been recorded in the office of the Secretary of State, recalled it, and it was never delivered to the prisoner.

Judge Hazell holds that the delivery was complete and considered the prisoner released.

Kingston Hunter Accidentally Shot.

Special to The New York Times.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Dec. 1.—George Balog of East Kingston will probably die from the effects of a charge of shot in his lungs, caused by the accidental discharge of his gun. Balog intended to hunt for game in Dutchess County yesterday, and in order to get there started to row across the Hudson River, which is nearly two miles wide at that point. In jumping into his boat he jarred the gun. The trigger struck the seat of the boat and the contents of both barrels entered his lungs.

Balog is a Hungarian. He was formerly employed in the brick yards, but managed to save considerable money, a part of which he invested in a complete hunting outfit.

Mr. Davis's Partner Injured.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 1.—F. B. Kellogg of the law firm of Davis, Kellogg & Severance, of which firm Senator Davis was a member, received a painful injury while returning from the Davis funeral this afternoon. He was leaving the cemetery in a carriage with C. A. Severance. As the horses stepped on to the Jackson Street Bridge, Mr. Kellogg stepped out to hold them until a train had passed underneath the bridge. The horses lurched forward and Mr. Kellogg was thrown against a lamp post. A bone in the right elbow was fractured, the injury being of a particularly painful nature.

Carl Schurz's Brother-in-Law Dead.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Bernard Miller, one of the oldest employes of the Custom House, died to-day. Mr. Miller was seventy years old, and had been employed as a clerk in the Auditor's Division of the Chicago Custom House for twenty-five years. He was a brother-in-law of Carl Schurz of New York, and was appointed about the time the latter was Secretary of the Interior.

Doctor Killed by Train.

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.—Frederick A. Hopkins, M. D., of this city was run over by a Grand Trunk passenger train about a mile outside of Montreal this afternoon and instantly killed. He was about thirty years of age, and has several relatives in Pittsburg.

YU-HSIEN TO BE KILLED.

Earl Li Announces that the Court Consents to His Punishment — A Chinese Envoy's View.

PEKING, Dec. 1.—Li-Hung-Chang has received a dispatch from the Court, which has agreed either to behead or otherwise kill Yu-Hsien, formerly Governor of Shan-Si, who personally killed many Christians. Members of Li-Hung-Chang's staff say the Emperor will probably send Yu-Hsien a silk cord, which is an intimation that he must hang himself.

The British and German Ministers met this morning in conference with United States Minister Conger, Dr. Mumm von Schwartzenstein, the German representative, remaining about an hour, and Sir Ernest Satow, the British Minister, two hours.

Though the Ministers refused to discuss the object of the meeting, it is generally believed that Mr. Conger requested their presence on receiving a message from Washington affecting certain positions in the joint agreement.

The United States Consul at Tien-Tsin reports increasing activity among the Boxers in the neighborhood of that city.

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—A representative of the Foreign Office here stated to-day that Germany has not indicated a disposition to modify her demands for the punishment of guilty Chinese officials, since she does not yet know what the different powers want.

"Germany, above all," the official said, "wants harmony of action. Germany foresaw that the note formulated by the Peking Ministers would not be accepted entirely by all the powers. We have to admit that several of the powers, including Russia, desire a change in several of the provisions. The whole matter is still involved in great uncertainty, so that it is impossible to predict what form the final agreement will take."

The Chinese Minister here, in an interview to-day, said:

"There cannot be a question of the execution of Prince Tuan or Gen. Tung-Fu-Siang, who are still de facto in control of the Court. They both keep the Emperor and Empress virtually prisoners. The Court is unable to go to Peking, even if inclined to do so. Besides, the long journey from Sian-Foo to Peking, now that the snow is on the ground, is almost impossible with the vehicles in use in those primitive districts. Starving out the Court is not feasible. The allies will be unable to carry out such a measure. However, even if it were possible, the provinces would rise in a body for the Court's defense.

"The worst feature is that the Court has lost confidence in Li-Hung-Chang and Prince Ching, who have demonstrated their impotence to deal properly with the invading powers. Under these circumstances it is certain that the Chinese troubles cannot be adjusted before Spring or Summer."

YANG-TSE OFFICIALS ALARMED.

Activity on the Defenses Owing to Rumors of an Expedition to the Valley.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 1.—Chinese officials are alarmed at the reports that the allies meditate an expedition into the Yang-tse Valley, and there is renewed activity on the defenses.

Munitions of war, including twenty 200-pound gun-cotton mines, have been sent from Shanghai to the Kiang-Yin forts.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—At a meeting of the Cabinet this morning the Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. Delcassé, announced that the Christians had re-entered the towns they formerly inhabited in the district of Shun-Tak, escorted by French artillery and Chinese troops. Official notices, he added, had been posted in the villages, requesting the populations not to disturb the Christians and announcing penalties for further outrages.

The Chinese authorities have been notified that they will be dismissed and their goods confiscated in case of renewed trouble. The Chinese who are known to have been guilty of murder will be executed in the presence of the French troops.

TIEN-TSIN, Dec. 1.—The British authorities have rented additional houses in which to quarter the troops, paying therefor $6,000 monthly. The United States gunboat Monocacy will winter inside the Taku bar.

It is expected that the port will be closed in another week.

THANKSGIVING DAY IN PEKING.

PEKING, Nov. 29.—United States Minister Conger invited the American residents to a special Thanksgiving service at the legation to-day. The service was well attended, most of the officers not on duty being present.

Minister Conger entertained a large party at dinner, and Gen. Chaffee also gave a dinner. The Americans generally endeavored to observe the day in much the same manner as it is celebrated in the United States.

THE DEATH OF COL. VON YORCK.

PEKING, Nov. 29.—Col. Count von Yorck, who commanded a German column of 1,000 men which had been operating in the vicinity of Kalgan, three nights ago slept in a room in which was a Chinese stove, burning charcoal. He was asphyxiated, and when discovered was very ill. He died yesterday. German troops will meet his body and escort it to Peking.

Col. von Yorck had distinguished himself during the Kalgan expedition by forcing his way to a difficult pass held by over 5,000 Boxers. The Germans report that the Chinese loss was heavy and their own slight, the exact number of the latter not being ascertained.

The Germans are still very active, small bodies of from 30 to 100 daily leaving Peking and seldom returning without some Boxers and arms.

To Relieve the Distress in Peking.

PEKING, Nov. 29.—Several wealthy merchants have given 100,000 taels toward relieving the distress in Peking, and have also joined with the relief committee in endeavoring to assist those having relations in the south to reach them. Over 400 of these will leave here on Saturday under an American escort. To Gen. Chaffee has been offered a steamer, with supplies, by Chinese merchants of Tien-Tsin to take refugees to Shanghai and Canton.

COL. LISCUM'S BODY ARRIVES.

Transport Thomas Also Brings Officers and Military Prisoners.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 1.—The body of Col. Liscum, who fell at the head of the American troops before the walls of Tien-Tsin, arrived here this afternoon on the transport Thomas. The body will lie on the Thomas until Monday afternoon or Tuesday morning, when it will be taken under military escort to the train, which will carry it to the National Cemetery at Arlington, Va., for interment.

Mrs. Liscum will accompany the body of her husband. Among the cabin passengers on the Thomas were Major J. A. Hull, son of Congressman Hull; Col. Webb Hayes, and Lieut. Col. Jose M. Lee. Major Hull has been assigned as Judge Advocate on Gen. Shafter's staff. The transport had also fifty-four army prisoners, eight insane, and many dead.

ROSE ROOMS AND ROSE GOWNS.

The managers are preparing to make up rose rooms at the Woman's Exchange, Madison Avenue and Forty-third Street. There will be rose parlors, rose tearooms, and rose bedrooms done chiefly in damask and La France roses. This is the work of an artist who will give an exhibition Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. She has devoted herself to the study of this one flower and has succeeded in producing an effect which is beautiful.

The rooms she decorates have hangings, draperies, screens, and cushions in one color scheme. A tearoom has a canopied couch, a new development of the "cosey corner," all in white, with the painted flowers in white. The tea table hangings also have the decorations of roses. In a bedroom the hanging of the bed and the coverlids are painted, as are also the draped dressers.

Interesting features of the work are bridal and christening cushions. The bridal cushions are those the bridal couple kneel upon during the ceremony, and christening cushions are little silken affairs upon which infants are presented at the font. Bridal and bridesmaid's gowns are also decorated in designs of roses.

THE NATIONAL ARTS CLUB

Additional Quarters to House Its Increasing Membership.

WOMEN HAVE ALL PRIVILEGES

A long list of proposed new members is one of the first things which greets the visitor's eye at the entrance to the National Arts Club, 37 and 39 West Thirty-fourth Street. The club held its second house warming last Wednesday and opened a second house to accommodate its increasing membership.

The Arts Club, or De Kay's Club, as people who know its founder, Charles De Kay, frequently call it, has surpassed every prediction as to its popularity, and its managers are now wondering if opening a new house may not be one of its annual features. The club obtained its charter in 1898, and in October of 1899 it took up its abode at 37 West Thirty-fourth Street. An adjoining building forms the new quarters.

The club numbers among its members some of the most prominent artists in the country, besides literary men and amateurs. It offers common ground upon which all may meet and by its exhibitions brings out the good work of established artists in all lines and introduces that of those little known. Many rare and interesting antiquities also find their way into the club exhibitions. The club believes it has discovered many clever people.

Women as well as men are admitted, and on the same terms, to club membership, and several hundred are numbered among the 1,100-odd names on the club list. The women have all the privileges of the club, including the restaurant, which is a delightful grillroom. There is a housekeeper and maids, in addition to the men servants, and the women have one room on the second floor to themselves. Here there are comfortable couches and toilet conveniences, a cup of tea can be sent up on an adjacent dumb waiter, and women can drop in to rest at any time during the day.

When the adjoining house at 39 was secured the two buildings were practically thrown into one. The grillroom is in the basement. On the main floor there is an additional exhibition gallery with a parlor and room which may be used for private dinner parties. On the second floor the front rooms of both houses are used for libraries. Back of the library in the new house is an enlarged billiard room.

On the upper floors the added space has made it possible to have fourteen sleeping rooms. These are for the use of the men members of the club, and may not be occupied by one person for more than a four night at a time if the rooms are in demand. Rooms in boarding houses are found for women members who come to town and desire accommodation for a time.

The decorations of the two houses have been done by Charles R. Lamb, one of the club members, and they are simple and satisfying. Green predominates, for the club keeps to its colors—green and gold—in its decorations, using the gold, however, sparingly.

The grillroom will accommodate from 80 to 100 guests. It is finished with a high wainscoting of green, and the walls above are tiled with Volkmar tiles, the work of Charles Volkmar, another of the club members. The chairs and tables are Dutch in design. There are fireplaces, with tuns, with shining spigots, set into the wall on either side, the genuine article.

There are Dutch clocks on the wall, and with the dull tones of the wood, the soft tones of the tiling, and maids in waiting in Dutch costume, it is one of the most attractive rooms in the house. There is a court in front of the house, which will be utilized in Summer for a garden, where the club members can take their luncheons.

One feature of the new exhibition gallery is that it is arranged to show stained glass both by day and night. This is a unique feature. Three windows by John La Farge are in the present exhibition. They were placed on view the day of the housewarming.

There are many other things of interest. A collection of Volkmar's pottery occupies a table in the centre of the second gallery; at one side are the brasses and coppers from the collection of Alexander W. Drake, and, a noticeable feature of the first gallery is the decorative mantelpiece and fireplace, some fine work in sculpture and painting by H. K. Bush-Brown and his wife. The latter painted the large panel above the mantel and the sculptured mantel supports are the work of Mr. Bush-Brown. This is one of the loan exhibits. There are also Indian bead work, blankets, baskets, embroideries, and modern tapestries, book bindings, monotypes, and fine leather work.

Perhaps the most interesting part of the modern work is the collection of rugs designed by Mrs. Douglass Volk, dyed with vegetable dyes and made under her direction by the women in the families of farmers of Centre Lovell, Oxford County, Me. Hanging on the wall of the front room is a beautiful piece of work by Mrs. Susan Hayes Ward, a piece of embroidery of original design, with a centre of yellow and a border of a fine blue, the colors having the soft tones of old embroideries. There is some fine work in colored plaster by Henry Linder and other things of equal interest.

On the Executive Board of the club are George B. Post, its President; Spencer Trask, Treasurer; Charles de Kay, Managing Director; Charles R. Lamb, who is Chairman of the Art Committee; A. R. McKim of the House Committee; Richard Watson Gilder of the Library Committee, and John De Witt Warner of the Membership Committee. Of the seventeen Vice Presidents of the club, all but two are out-of-town members.

One of the purposes of the club, upon which it places emphasis, is to "aid all good causes of art, such as the embellishment of cities, capitols, and other public buildings."

CHIMES ANNOY WORSHIPPERS.

One Brooklyn Church Demands that Another Change Its Time for Services.

There is a discussion between the members of Christ Episcopal Church, the Rev. Dr. Henry Darlinton, rector, and the congregation of the First Reformed Church, at Bedford Avenue and Clymer Street, Brooklyn. Christ Church is on Bedford Avenue, at the head of Morton Street, a half a block away from the Reformed Church. In the belfry of Christ Church there is a set of Anglican chimes—the only ones of the kind in the district.

The services of the Reformed Church, of which the Rev. Howard Wilbur Ennis is pastor, usually begin at 7:30 o'clock, while Sunday evenings the services in Christ Church begin at 7:45 o'clock. In these fifteen minutes the chimes of Christ Church are constantly ringing. The people of the Reformed Church have protested, as it disturbs their services. Repeated requests have been made by the Consistory of the Reformed Church upon the Vestry of Christ Church to cease the annoyance, but to no avail.

At a meeting of the Consistory of the Reformed Church recently, it was decided to demand of the Trustees of Christ Church to either change their hour for the beginning of the service so as to conform with that of the Reformed Church, or cease ringing of the Anglican chimes, which disturbed the Reformed Church.

When Dr. Darlington heard of the request of the Consistory of the Reformed Church, he consulted with his Vestry. A meeting has been arranged for Thursday night which will consider what action to take. If the Trustees of Christ Church change the time of their services, the Ross Street Presbyterian Church will be asked to begin their services at 7:45 o'clock.

Among the congregation of the Ross Street Church are former Mayor Wurster, Col. Andrew D. Baird, and John S. McKeon. The Ross Street Presbyterian Church's bell has been tolled continuously between 7:30 and 7:45 o'clock, to the annoyance of the members of St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church, half a block away, whose services begin at 7:30 o'clock.

FALLS IN A FIT UPON FIRE.

John Stabler, a carpet layer, of 64 West Ninety-eighth Street, met with a singular accident, which is likely to result fatally, in the big apartment house at Amsterdam Avenue and One Hundred and Eighteenth Street, last evening, while he was visiting his friend, Henry Roberts, janitor of the building.

Roberts was doing some work about the house when Stabler called, and in order that they might sooner be at liberty to converse he suggested that Stabler go to the cellar and draw the fires for the night. Stabler went to the furnace, and hauled the hot coals out on the cement floor, but while thus engaged he was seized with an epileptic fit, and fell upon his face and right side upon the blazing heap of coals.

The fire did not revive him, and Roberts, who noticed a smell of burning clothing, rushed down-stairs only to find his friend slowly burning to death. Stabler was taken to the J. Hood Wright Hospital, where the physicians, after examination, advised that the right arm be amputated. Stabler, slowly regaining his senses, refused to submit to the operation, but late last night, several hours after he was injured, gangrene had set in and the doctors then declared that the operation would have to be performed at once. They thought the chances were decidedly against the recovery of the patient.

FOUND MANY RARE INSECTS

Result of Curator Beutenmuller's Visit to North Carolina.

Collection Now Being Prepared for Exhibition at the Museum of Natural History.

They have an artist at work in the entomological department of the Natural History Museum this year assisting in the preparation for exhibition of last Summer's collection of insects. When these are ready the collection will be in better condition for the observation of the visitors than ever before. Some of the smaller specimens it has been useless to put on exhibition, for they are so small that to the naked eye there is only to be seen a tiny black dot on the white paper on which they are placed. The smallest measure a fiftieth of an inch or less. These will now be shown with sketches enlarged many times the size of the original. The sketches are made with pen and ink with the insect under the microscope, and the work is all done to scale.

A large and interesting collection was made this Summer by Curator Beutenmüller of the department, who spent three weeks in the Black Mountains of North Carolina, which is a rich field for the entomologist. Some 3,000 specimens were obtained, with perhaps 300 different species, all of them new to the department and some new to science. The work of mounting and classifying is now in progress.

From a pecuniary standpoint a collecting tour of this kind is simple, as the expenses are chiefly those for traveling. But aside from the expense, it requires a large amount of hard work and "know how." This Summer's collecting tour was one of particular interest. The Curator knew the region and something of what he might expect to find. What may be found and what will be found represent, however, two entirely different propositions. On previous trip the rare Numaretus impertectus, which feeds upon snails, and is difficult to obtain, was not to be seen. On this trip four specimens were obtained. The insects to be found in the Black Mountains are characteristic of high altitudes and many of them of northern latitudes. To the collector who, after a several miles' tramp through the hot valley, comes into the depth of the forest on the mountains, where the sun never enters, the chill of the air penetrating every bone, this latter characteristic does not seem peculiar.

The starting point for the entomological field is a little station called Black Mountain, a small centre containing a few stores and hotels, a point from which many people of the South start for their Summer homes in the mountains. Ten miles from there is the home of a guide who entertains a few guests in a couple of primitive little cabins. From this place ten miles in different directions will take the entomologist through a range of country very valuable from his point of view.

The mountains are heavily wooded, having many balsam trees, great boulders of rock, fallen timber in various stages of decay, and a rich soil covered with thick layers of leaves and leaf mold which have not been disturbed for generations. The mountain is also rich in fungi growing on the trees, always a good field for the entomologist. The peaks of the mountains are 6,000 feet or more high, and there are many deep ravines.

The implements for the work of the entomologist are few and small and his luggage for traveling is light, but in making a ten-mile tramp the impedimenta are unpleasantly bulky. There is a butterfly net, a sweeping net—a canvas bag on a ring with a handle with which to sweep the bushes—a big sieve with a bag attached; bottles of cyanide of potassium, alcohol, and chloroform, and small bottles and boxes for transporting the material obtained. A pair of pincers is a part of the outfit. The greater part of this was to be carried on every collecting trip.

There is no possibility of transportation for a collector, for there is valuable undiscovered material on every hand. Many beetles have their habitat under stones, and going up Mount Mitchell last Summer the collector estimated that he turned at least 500 stones. The day begins at 6 or 7, when a start is made. The whole day is spent traveling through the mountains, with a return at night, when the hands of the clock have made a full round. The evening is given up to roughly classifying specimens and putting them away with necessary data. Occasionally at night collections are made of insects drawn to the light around the house. The most valuable finds are made in the layers of leaves and leaf mold. This is sifted to dispose of the extraneous matter, which is thrown away, and the valuable material which remains is taken home in a bag to be sorted.

Only a general idea of the quality of the find is obtained during the day, and it is not until the material is carefully classified at the museum that a very clear idea of it is obtained. Deep in the leaf mold were found different blind beetles. There are a number of specimens of the black ground beetles, (Sterostichus;) there was the carrion beetle, (the Silphid;) the Rove beetles, from the fleshy fungi; the Staphylinidae, the Cychrus, bettles which live on snails and have long jaws with which to enter the shell, and roaches which live in the wood under the bark of trees, a variety characteristic of the Appalachian system, without wings and with short, thick legs which were not made for rapid progress. There are a few things that may be mentioned incidentally.

The different specimens are of species that cannot be obtained outside their natural haunts. They are not in the hands of the dealers either in this country or in Europe, and there is no collector in the region from which they came. Packed in layers of cotton or in small bottles a collection of this kind is easy to transport. There is already an interesting entomological collection at the museum, including the Hoffman collection of butterflies. When these recent additions have been classified and mounted, and the whole collection arranged as it will be eventually in the east wing of the building, it will be worth seeing.

JOKE TURNED AGAINST DRIVER.

His Employer Was in a Car the Truckman Was Obstructing.

A man who is fond of statistics calculates that more bad language results from the delays to street cars occasioned by the drivers of trucks and wagons than from any other cause. Truck drivers seem to take infinite delight in preventing the progress of the electric and cable conveyances, and the gripmen are unable to adopt retaliatory measures. Sometimes a gripman whose nerves are quite unstrung will give the offending wagon a jolt, with the chance that he will damage it and lose his job next day, or else be arrested. In the great majority of cases he contents himself with abuse, in the use of which the truck driver is usually a good deal more proficient than the injured party.

The passengers on a Broadway car last Wednesday witnessed a piece of poetical justice. It was one of the "rush" hours of the day, and most of those in the car were hurrying home to dinner. Just above Fifty-third Street a butcher's wagon got in front of the car and proceeded to stay there. It moved at about the pace of a funeral procession, and every now and then the driver would turn around on his seat and grin maliciously at the gripman. The latter appeared to be going insane. He literally danced with anger, and hurled denunciations at the driver. The conductor was almost as much worked up, and muttered unmentionable things under his breath.

One of the passengers was a stout German in a hurry. He fidgeted in his seat, declared it was an "outrage," and at last went to the front of the car, to find out the name on the back of the wagon, so that he could "rebort" the driver. As soon as he saw the wagon he started. Then he turned to the conductor. "You just wait," he said. "I move that vagon away."

"Move it away," said the conductor. "I guess you can't. There's nothing but a cyclone would move that blank dashed blank."

"Well," and the German chuckled, "I'm the cyclone. Just you see."

He went to the front platform of the car, and then:

"Fritz!" he shouted. "Hi! Fritz!"

The driver of the wagon turned around.

The road was clear in just about fifteen seconds.

"Ha," said the German. "Made late by mine own vagon. He's done his last yob for me."

And not a person in the car attempted to say a word for the driver who was to be discharged.

Marauding Indians Gathered In.

SILVER CITY, New Mexico, Dec. 1.—A band of more than 200 Indians, who have been slaughtering game and starting fires on the Gila Forest Reservation, have been returned to the reservation in Arizona by twenty mounted police from Fort Defiance. The Indians returned without trouble. The band consisted of Navahoes and Apaches, and the settlers were greatly alarmed, fearing depredation. The action was taken at the instance of the authorities at Washington.

MR. KRUEGER'S JOURNEY A TRIUMPHAL PROGRESS

French and Belgian Crowds Acclaim Him at Stopping Points.

HE ARRIVES AT COLOGNE

Is Not Officially Welcomed There, and He May Not Go to Berlin at Present—Speaks Well of Roberts.

COLOGNE, Dec. 1.—Mr. Krüger arrived here at 11:30 o'clock. A considerable crowd had assembled, and caused a dangerous crush. No official reception had been arranged, and Mr Krüger drove to the Cathedral Hotel, the crowd cheering as he left the station and as he drove along the route.

The absence of an official welcome is said to have been due to neglect to secure an understanding with the Imperial Court, which is necessary in the case of visits of the heads of States.

Hence it is reported that Mr. Krüger will probably not go to Berlin at present.

Mr. Krüger will receive a delegation of Bonn students to-morrow.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—A special dispatch from Berlin says:

"Mr. Krüger has been advised that Count von Bülow (the Imperial Chancellor) will only exchange formal visits with him; that public demonstrations will be suppressed, and that the proposed municipal banquets will be abandoned.

"While there are much sympathy for and curiosity to see Mr. Krüger, there is no chance of such a furore as occurred at Marseilles and Paris."

PARIS, Dec. 1.—Ex-President Krüger spent this morning in conferences with members of his party, only receiving three or four persons outside his followers Just before leaving his apartments he walked out upon the balcony. His appearance was the signal for warm cheering and the repetition of the cries that have greeted him wherever he has gone this week.

In the courtyard of the hotel were two covered landaus. There Mr. Krüger entered the carriage which took him to the station. The crowd outside had hoped to secure a final view of Mr. Krüger, but was disappointed. The first intimation that he was about to leave was the sight of the carriage driving out of the hotel at a quick trot. The landau was driven into an open parallelogram of mounted guards. When the carriages conveying Mr. Krüger's suite appeared a troop of mounted guards wheeled into the open side, and at a quick pace, Mr Krüger and his accompanying friends started for the Northern Railroad station.

The crowds along the streets and the people who filled the windows cheered warmly as the cortage passed, many women throwing flowers toward Mr. Krüger's carriage, while the men cheered and waved their hats.

At the railroad station there were a few hurried farewells, and at 1:40 o'clock P. M. Mr. Krüger departed for Cologne.

Mr. Krüger's journey this afternoon through Northern France was attended by scenes similar to those witnessed at Marseilles and Paris. At nearly every station passed crowds had gathered, who waved hats and handerchiefs and cheered Mr. Krüger as the train whirled along.

The first stop was at St. Quentin, at 3:40 P. M. The municipal authorities, many Senators and members of the Chamber of Deputies, and various delegations awaited the arrival of the train, which was greeted with cries for Krüger and the Boers. Mr Krüger and Dr. Leyds appeared at the door of the carriage, saluted the crowds, and received the authorities.

At Erquelinnes an enormous assemblage filled the station and greeted the traveler with enthusiastic acclamations. The President of the local Boer Committee read a long address, expressing sympathy with the Boers and the hope that the war would be terminated through arbitration by the signers of The Hague Convention.

At Jeumont the Paris Boer Committee bade farewell to Mr. Krüger, who replied at some length, referring to the warmth of the welcome he had received and the strength of feeling exhibited in favor of the cause he was urging. He said he hoped the new cry which he heard as he was departing from Paris, that of "Vive Arbitration!" would become the cry of Europe. He declared he would not stop his work until the South African Republics had regained their independence. It was a cruel war, which in the interests of humanity, should be ended. The hearty character of France's greeting was, Mr. Krüger said, forever engraved upon his heart, and he thanked Paris and France for the manner in which they had received him.

At Charleroi, the first stop on Belgian territory, rigorous police measures had been taken to prevent the invasion of the station, but the people were stronger than the police, and rushed upon the platform and gave vent to their feelings in cries favorable to the Boers. The train stopped for five minutes, and Mr Krüger greeted the people from the steps of the car. The train left Charleroi twenty minutes late.

At Namur a similar scene was enacted The train was then forty-five minutes late.

At Joumont Mr. Krüger said that when he landed in France he thought the barbarity with which the war had been conducted, adding that before he left France he wished to say that he had made Lord Roberts acquainted with these wrongs, and that the British commander had promised that the cruelties should cease, but whether he had not been obeyed, or whatever the reason, the barbarities continued.

Mr. Krüger said he felt it his duty to explain that as he had complained to the Chief of State, and not as the head of his family, for his own family had been treated with the greatest regard by Lord Roberts, and he thanked him for this.

The enthusiasm in other Belgian towns through which Mr. Krüger passed, rivalled that shown in the towns of France. At Liege a crowd numbering about 2,000 persons thronged the platforms and the approaches to the station. Among the gathering were a number of deputations with banners, and the Liege pro-Boer Committee, the President of which read an eloquent address expressing sympathy with the Boer cause and promising Mr. Krüger as magnificent a reception in Belgium, if he should stay there, as had been given to him in France. The crowd at the station was tumultuously demonstrative. Many members sang the Boer hymn while awaiting the arrival of the train, and when the latter was signalled, the people broke the barriers and rushed upon the platforms. The gendarmes, with fixed bayonets, tried to force them back, but the crowd swept the officers aside and massed around Mr. Krüger's saloon car, raising deafening shouts of "Vive Krüger," "Vive les Boers," and "Vive arbitration." Mr. Krüger spoke a few words of thanks.

As the train was starting cries were heard of "Down with the English," whereupon the curtains of the saloon car were quickly drawn, though before the train left the station, Mr. Krüger reappeared at the window and waved his hand. A group of students marched from the station to the British Consulate, followed by a small crowd, shouting, "Down with the English!" "Down with Chamberlain!" These cries were redoubled when the Consul, with his family, appeared on the balcony, but on their withdrawing the demonstrators dispersed.

Invite Krueger to This Country.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—The American Transvaal League in Chicago has prepared a message which will be sent to ex-President Krüger inviting him to visit the United States when he has finished his European tour

THE NEW BRITISH PLANS.

Cavalry, Mounted Infantry, and Mounted Police Relied on to End Boer Opposition.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—One of the responsible heads of the departments in the War Office said to-day, in an interview:

"Undoubtedly the situation in South Africa is serious. It resembles in many ways America's trouble with the Filipinos. We cannot expect to crush out opposition for some time to come. We are not withdrawing troops indiscriminately; nor are we indifferent to the gravity of the problem. The Household Cavalry has come home because heavy cavalry is practically useless. The infantry, too, is of comparatively small service.

"We rely upon two things to bring about peace—first, the transformation, so far as possible, of all the British troops in the disturbed districts into mobile cavalry and mounted infantry; second, through the establishment of a police force. Until the latter gets in working order even the cavalry will not be able to accomplish much. The police force should be similar to the Irish constabulary, only all the men will be mounted. When that body is organized I believe a change will quickly come over the situation."

The Canadian officers who returned here from South Africa this week express no surprise at the renewal of Boer successes. They only wonder that they have not been greater. The Canadians, however, are unanimous in expressing the belief that Gen. Kitchener is the right man to deal with the form of opposition now faced by the British in South Africa. Hardly any of the returning officers express criticism of Lord Roberts, even in the face of the recent reverses. The general feeling toward the Field Marshal is well put by The Sun of this city. It says:

"Lord Roberts is a brilliant, dashing soldier and has displayed consummate ability. But, after all, we fear he is too much of a humanitarian for the work now to be done. Once Kitchener gets to work on the Boers nothing will stop him."

THE CANADIANS IN LONDON.

Lord Mayor Thanks Them on Behalf of the City—Why the Contingent Did Not All Return Together.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The members of the Royal Canadian contingent of troops were received at the Mansion House to-day by the Lord Mayor and Corporation. His Lordship expressed the high honor he felt at entertaining a regiment "whose services to the Empire were so great that they had been acknowledged by the Queen's own lips, the highest honor which could be bestowed on returning troops."

The Canadians this afternoon visited the Guildhall, where the Lord Mayor again addressed them, thanking them in the name of the citizens of London for their great sacrifices and the heroism they had shown on the battlefield.

Col. Otter, replying, said it was a proud moment when the Canadians obtained the opportunity of testifying their loyalty and desire to serve the Queen and uphold the honor of the flag. The Queen, he added, might always count on the loyalty of the Canadians.

Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, the Canadian High Commissioner, followed with a few words of thanks for the reception accorded to the Canadians.

Henry Siegel of New York sat at the Lord Mayor's right in the Guild Hall. He referred warmly to the close ties between the United States and Canada, and to the sympathetic interest of the United States in the exploits of the Canadians.

How pathetic was the meeting of the Queen and her Canadian soldiers seems to have escaped the English papers. Sitting in a carriage the Queen watched intently the men as they marched by within a few feet of her, and she commenced her speech in brave tones. It was only a few words, but before it was finished tears rolled down her Majesty's face and her voice broke, and the end was almost a sob. It is not astonishing, therefore, that when Col. Otter replied it was in trembling tones, and not one of the men whom he led into nearly fifty engagements felt asbamed of the grizzled Colonel because his cheek was wet with tears.

The reason why only three companies of the Canadians came back to England is that, shortly before the end of the year for which the Canadians had volunteered expired, Col. Otter communicated with Lord Roberts, notifying him of the fact. The Commander in Chief said he would much like the regiment to remain longer, and asked Col. Otter to sound the men. The Colonel asked the officers, who, without consulting the men, enthusiastically guaranteed that their companies would remain. When the men heard this they took umbrage at not being consulted, and in unmeasured terms informed the authorities that they wished to return in the stipulated time. Lord Roberts wrote a letter practically begging them to stay a little longer; but the regiment being split up in various parts of the country, and the decision having been made, they voted to go direct to Canada, with the exception of Companies A and B.

Company I, being composed of regulars, was obliged to remain, and Companies A and B were stationed at headquarters. As a reward for staying in South Africa Lord Roberts enabled Companies A, B and I to participate in the Pretoria celebrations, and then sent them home by way of England, only a month later than their comrades.

Roberts's Journey to the Coast.

HEIDELBERG, Nov. 20.—Lord Roberts, journeying toward Durban, stopped here to-day. He made a speech to the volunteers, in the course of which he said he trusted the guerrilla warfare would not long continue.

GERMAN PROTEST LIKELY.

Manufacturer Boesnick Thinks He Was Unjustly Treated Here.

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—Otto Boesnick of Glauchau, the largest manufacturer of Henrietta cloth in the world, who exported 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 marks' worth of his goods to the United States, but who was charged with systematically undervaluing, upon which his American exports greatly declined, has submitted to Baron von Richthofen, the Secretary for Foreign Affairs, a strong protest on the subject. He is also agitating in the Reichstag for a retaliatory tariff against the United States.

It is understood that Dr. Von Holleben, the German Ambassador to the United States, will be instructed to present protests in connection with the Boesnick case.

SOCIALISTS IN THE REICHSTAG.

Take Up Large Share of Debates—Bills to be Introduced This Week.

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—The disproportionately large share which the Socialist members of the Reichstag have had in the debates since the Reichstag reconvened arouses much press comment. The Deutsche Tages-Zeitung says:

"It sounds strange, but it cannot be denied that the Socialists already dominate the Parliamentary proceedings."

During the coming week several Centrist bills will come up. Among them, on Monday, will be a bill demanding that the Government take steps against a coal famine and prohibit future restricting trusts and syndicates. On Wednesday Herr Lieber's so-called "Tolerance bill," intended to give Catholics and other religious minorities wider liberty of worship, will be introduced in the Reichstag, and the Government will introduce the Invalid Pensioners' bill, which increases the pensions from 40 to 70 per cent. of the younger army officers to an even hundred marks per month.

SITUATION AT CONSTANTINOPLE.

Relations Between the Porte and American Legation Friendly.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 1.—The rumors that a rupture of diplomatic relations between the United States and Turkey is imminent are unfounded. The relations between the Porte and the United States Legation are excellent. In fact, the United States Chargé d'Affaires, Lloyd C. Griscom, has been received in audience six times this year. Only a fortnight ago he was invited to a musical entertainment at the Yildiz Palace. This proves he is persona grata at the palace.

The visit of the United States battleship Kentucky to Smyrna does not influence the nature of these relations, though it does induce the Porte to more strictly concern itself with the United States' claims for indemnity, which were already on the point of solution.

Dr. Thomas H. Norton, who was appointed to establish a United States Consulate at Harpoot, is going Monday to take possession of his post at Harpoot. The United States Legation will continue to press its demand for an exequatur, but a prompt solution of this question is not likely.

The order to the Cramps of Philadelphia for a cruiser will be small, the price being less than 500,000 Turkish pounds.

Assurances to German Agriculturists.

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—Count von Bülow, the Imperial Chancellor, received a deputation from the Chambers of Agriculture to-day. He assured his visitors that the legitimate wishes of the agriculturists would receive full consideration in the future customs tariff scheme, "so far as compatible with the economic and general interests of the country."

WELL-KNOWN SINGERS ARRIVE.

Mmes. Sembrich and Ternina Tell of Their Plans for the Season.

Among the arrivals on the American liner St. Louis last night was Mme. Marcella Sembrich, the prima donna. She was accompanied by her husband, Prof. Wilhelm Stengel, and comes to America to inaugurate her season under the management of C. L. Graff.

When she sailed for Europe last May, it was generally expected that she would return, though it was known at the time that if she did it would not be as a member of the Grau forces. Two days after she sailed, Mr. Graff followed, and going direct to her home in Dresden, secured a contract for her present American tour. Her first appearance will be at a recital in Carnegie Hall next Tuesday. Other recitals in neighboring cities during this month will follow the New York recitals.

The company which is to support Mme. Sembrich will arrive about the middle of December. The first performance of the operatic tour will be given in Baltimore Jan. 3. The company will include Signor Lara, Signor Deusaude, Signor Dado, Signor Rossi, Signor Galazzi, and Mme. Mattfeld. Signor Bevignani, who will conduct the orchestra, was also a passenger on the St. Louis. The orchestra will to a large extent be composed of members of the old New York Symphony Orchestra. The tour of the company will include all of the large cities of the country, in many of which Mme. Sembrich has never been heard. The operas in the répertoire consist of those in which Mme. Sembrich has been most frequently heard while connected with the Grau Opera Company at the Metropolitan Opera House. They will include "The Barber of Seville," "Don Pasquale," "La Traviata," "Lucia," "Rigoletto," and "Faust."

Referring to the report that she was to quit the concert stage, Mme. Sembrich said the idea was absurd, as no such step had ever been contemplated by her. She was recently commanded to sing before the Kaiser, but was unable to do so, owing to her departure for this country. Concerning her forthcoming tour, she said:

"I am going to make the longest tour of this country that any star ever made, not excepting Mme. Patti. At the head of the Sembrich Opera Company, I will leave New York right after New Year's, and will go to the Pacific Coast. I will return, stopping in various places, and after singing in Indianapolis will go to New Orleans."

On the St. Louis also was Mme. Milka Ternina, one of the leading members of the Metropolitan Opera Company. She will join the company when it returns from the Pacific Coast, and in the meantime will sing in concerts with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Asked about her plans for the season and what she has been doing since last here, she said:

"I have sung in Berlin and Munich and sang almost all the time except for a little while when I rested at Carlsbad. I only know positively of one new opera that we will have that I will be in. That is 'La Tosca.' In that I will take the title rôle. We may put on "Le Bal Masque," one of Verdi's old operas and if so I will take the part of Amelia. We are not sure of that, however. I am going to live quietly here during this month, except for a very few concerts with the Boston Symphony Orchestra."

WASHINGTON SOCIETY NOTES.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Dinners and receptions to ex-President and Mrs. Benjamin Harrison will be leading social events the coming week. Contrary to the prevailing impression, they will not attend the banquet to be given at the White House Thursday night. They had accepted the invitation of Senator and Mrs. Elkins, who have invited a large company to dine on that evening in honor of the former Chief Executive. Mr. and Mrs. John W. Foster will give a dinner in their honor Monday evening. Senator and Mrs. Fairbanks have secured the Harrisons for Tuesday evening, when the prominent Indiana people here will be invited to meet the eminent statesman from their State. They will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Walsh at their dinner and reception on Friday night, and later in their visit the guests of Justice and Mrs. Brown and of Justice and Mrs. Harlan.

Mrs. Francis B. Loving presented her eldest daughter, Miss Lydia Loving at a tea this afternoon at the family residence on K Street. Mrs. John Pory and Miss Routh did the honors of the tea-table, the Misses Ethel Anderson and Carola de Peyster assisting.

The Austrian Minister and Baroness Hengelmuller held their first informal at home this evening, when a company of some thirty intimate friends were present, bridge whist being the amusement of the evening.

A unique entertainment was given this afternoon by Alexander Zelenoy, the Second Secretary of the Russian Embassy, when he invited his friends to drink tea in his quarters, on N Street. Mrs. Gregoire de Wollat, wife of the First Secretary, was the hostess of the occasion, and society, official, diplomatic, and resident, was largely represented.

THE BEER-POISONING SCARE.

Cases Due to Arsenic in the Glucose in London as Well as the North of England.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The beer poisoning epidemic at Manchester, which has so worked up the North of England, has now spread to London. The County Council announces that it is taking active measures to protect the community. The workingman now empties his pewter pot with more or less fear and trembling, and analysts are busy day and night on samples of the glucose and saccharine used extensively by the brewers. Many samples have been found to contain arsenic. In the Manchester and Liverpool districts there are already over 1,000 patients, and there have been nearly seventy deaths due to a particularly bad lot of glucose supplied to favorite local brewers. As a result of the agitation the use of glucose will probably be restricted by legislation.

A public analyst suggests that the mystery in the Maybrick case might have been solved had the facts now made public in regard to arsenic in beer been known at the time of the trial.

HOLDS W. W. ASTOR'S WEALTH.

Special Chamber Constructed in London Safety Deposit Vaults.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—William Waldorf Astor, who is the owner of one of the most beautiful office buildings in London, has just constructed at a safety deposit company's vaults a special chamber at a cost of £5,000.

It is currently reported to be full of securities and documents representing a fabulous amount, which, it is added, "never ceases to cause the admiration of even the company's officials, who are accustomed to handle the wealth of British millionaires."

PROPOSED GIBRALTAR TUNNEL.

M. Berlier, the Engineer, Believes His Plan Perfectly Feasible.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The State Department has received a report, conveying further information as to the proposed tunnel from Europe to Africa under the Strait of Gibraltar, from George H. Murphy, Consular Clerk at Magdeburg, Germany

M. Berlier, the French engineer, who has submitted the proposal of this project to the Governments of Spain and Morocco, is said to have perfect confidence in the feasibility of the plan. On the other hand, Mr. Murphy states that the ventilation of a submarine tunnel and the removal of the constantly accumulating water are very formidable and expensive obstacles. Nevertheless M. Berlier believes that by a secret process of his own he can grapple with these difficulties. By working simultaneously from both ends of the tunnel, he believes the date of completion could be safely placed at 1907. The estimated cost of the tunnel is $23,000,000.

Peer Claims Corner on Nickel Market.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Dec. 1.—The Earl of Dunmore arrived here to-day after a year of travel through Australia and the South Sea Islands. He claims to have arranged a corner on the nickel market for the Western Coast und practically the whole of the United States. He largely controls several big nickel producing properties in Europe, and a few weeks ago concluded the purchase of the large mines of French New Caledonia. He invested over $300,000 cash in the properties, and says he will soon be able to control the markets of the United States from their output.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN.

When Mrs. Russell Sage made her appearance at the dinner of the Mayflower Society one evening last week it was a matter of comment. She is not a woman who gets away from her home after the evening shadows fall, as a rule. But she and "Uncle Russell" renewed their youth, and not only sat out the dinner, but through the long speech-making that followed. This is the one evening of dissipation that Mrs. Sage allows herself during a year. She enters into its enjoyment with all the zest of her younger associates in this organization of Puritan descendants, and makes the most of this red letter evening of her year. Mrs. Sage told a friend that she feared she was taking life altogether too easily now, and is really becoming lazy, because on some mornings she does not have her breakfast until 8 o'clock. Had a cheeky young man who claims to be a nephew or cousin of Russell Sage had his way, this aged but rather retiring and rarely dissipated couple might have been seen at the Horse Show on the fashionable Thursday evening. This brash young man sent to the managers of the show an application for an arena box for that night, presuming on his connection with a newspaper as an entering wedge. He naively announced, that he would like the accommodation so that her could bring his frugal relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sage, to the show. The former, he said, might thus be able to look over and criticise the horses, and see what they were really worth. As arena boxes for that evening were in such demand that speculators could not supply them at the $200 each that was freely offered, the request of the relative of the Sages found its way into the waste paper basket of the press agent.

Gulls are making a lot of trouble for the caretakers at Central Park these days. There is hardly an hour in the day when great flocks of them may not be seen resting on the waters of the upper reservoir, the flocks at times numbering hundreds. They seem to fairly revel in the chance to get a dip in the fresh waters of the big reservoir, and preen their feathers there until, after the visit of one of the large flocks, the surface of the water is dotted with the white and gray feathers that have been torn out during the cleaning process. Children take keen delight in watching the gulls come and go, and feel more kindly toward them than do the keepers. These latter have to follow a visit of the gulls with a trip about the reservoir in boats kept for the purpose. The men go carefully over the surface of the water, one rowing the boat while another sweeps the surface with a scoop net in which he picks up all the floating feathers he can gather together. It is no unusual thing for a bushel of the wetted feathers to be picked up in one of these trips. Fewer of the dead leaves that blow about the Park reach the surface of the water than one would imagine.

Time was, and it was not so many years ago, either, when green peas were a luxury that only the very rich could indulge in at the latter end of November. Now you may have your lamb and green peas until well into December, and the green peas are not the costly part of the combination. While not exactly as plentiful as they are in Summer, there is no market of any sort worth patronizing where green peas may not be had at a price but little in excess of that paid in the Spring, when alone, a generation ago, green peas were in season. That they are now to be had so plenteously and cheaply is due to the fact that truck farmers have learned a whole lot within the past decade about the value of things that are out of season. Rotation of crops, in the South particularly, has materially increased the income of the up-to-date farmer, and made the season line for his crops one that is hardly traceable. Some of the peas that were in the market during the early part of the month were late ones raised on the Long Island truck farms. Most of those now to be had come from North Carolina and Florida, the best being the late crop from the latter State.

Publishers and booksellers who carry stocks of foreign books are having a hard time just now and have been for several months. It seems as if about every man, woman and child in New York who can read a few words in French has been wild ever since the announcement that Bernhardt would play "L'Aiglon" here, to read the book of the play in the original. There was therefore a rush to the booksellers, and these unfortunates, unable to satisfy the demand, have grown weary. At one uptown shop the minute the mouth of the would-be-purchaser opens and the first half of the word "L'Aig" is formed, they lead the way to one side of the place where a placard has been tacked up. This is in French, and from the French publisher Charpentier, who is bringing out the book. A description of the edition is given: "Pour paraitre le 2 décembre irrevocablement." That is an "original document," says the man in charge with an aggrieved air. "We probably shan't have the book before the 15th of December." People who have called on "the divine Sarah" say she has a copy of this identical book on her table, not her prompt book, but one of the books of the regular edition. "Well I'd like to see it," says the bookman. "I'd give $10 for it. Bernhard would of course have a first copy. But I don't believe she has it." There is such a demand for the book that in some shops they say the supply for America has been practically all sold in advance.

It sounds a bit strange perhaps, but it is appropriate enough after all, that a downtown Mr. Wickes should be a dealer in lamps, while an up-town Mr. Lampe should be a dealer in lamp wicks.

"A new reason for keeping down the census figures of some of the towns in our State has just developed," said Col. A. F. Lampson of Connecticut. "Under our State excise law there is a low yearly figure for the liquor license if the population of a town is less than 3,000. If that number is exceeded the price of the license is increased by $200 a year. Within the past few days it has developed that in at least one small town the liquor dealers had influence enough in one way or another to prevent the residents of the town from being counted in the census taken last June. Quiet investigation has shown that in one quarter of the more thickly-populated portion of this little town, near Hartford, at least fifty persons were omitted from the list of residents forwarded to Washington for the enumerators. How many more were thus purposely left off the list is not known, but the village authorities are about making a thorough investigation. There are about half a dozen liquor dealers in the town who would have been forced to pay the larger license fee had the population exceeded 3,000. It just escaped that figure. That fact means an aggregate saving of $1,200 a year to the six liquor dealers for a period of ten years, and a loss of a like sum to the town. It is suspected that with the hope of saving this $12,000 in the ten-year period before another census, the liquor dealers got together and paid a handsome sum to some one to have the enumeration kept down to the limits that would mean the saving of a lot of money to them. Who the culprit is I don't know, but people in the town are shrewdly guessing, in Yankee fashion, that the enumerator in the factory district succeeded in 'feathering his nest.' A resident of the town tells me that the town authorities have already located enough residents of more than two years in the town whose names were omitted from the enumeration—purposely, perhaps—to carry the population over the 3,000 limit. They are going to carry the matter to Washington and see if they cannot find a way to circumvent the shrewd liquor dealers."

A resident of the upper west side, near one of the homes for the blind, became accustomed to seeing blind persons feeling their way about the streets in the vicinity with only their walking stick as a guide. But the people thus sorely afflicted are all men. Now, the home is for persons of both sexes, yet in two years of residence near the place this gentleman says he has yet to see the first blind woman on the street, either walking alone or led by a child or other companion. That was why the observant man had asked at the Fifth Avenue Hotel if any one of the loungers thereabouts had ever seen a blind woman on the streets of New York. The little group of men said, "Of course, I have," until the up-town man told his experience. Then they were very much less sure as to what they had seen, and before the talk ended had very generally recanted, and became voluble over the fact that a blind woman was a wholly unusual sight on the city streets It was decided by the group of men that the reason so few deaf-mutes among women are seen in public conveyances was probably due to the fact that mute women kept their fingers quiet while in public for two reasons: first, pride, and, secondly, kid gloves. The latter prevented them from using the sign language easily, the first from publicly admitting their unfortunate condition.

There is hardly an officer in the navy whose term for sea service is looming up in the not very remote future but longs for an assignment to one of the new vessels, particularly the Georgia, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey. These new vessels, as well as some of those more recently launched, are to be provided with a complete steam laundry outfit. Officers have always had considerable trouble in keeping their supply of white duck trousers, shirts, collars, and cuffs in the condition they like to have them ashore. But with the improved mangles, ironing machines, and all the rest there is a chance for them to appear on deck or in the wardroom just as spick and span as ashore.

SOME NOTES FOR WOMEN.

It is chocolate, not cocoa, but it comes powdered ready for use, and it is a great convenience. It is a little newer and a little less trouble than the chocolate paste, though either is less troublesome to prepare than the chocolate which comes in hard cakes.

***

Real comfort for room wear is to be found in the soft fur slippers, wool lined. They can't be called really beautiful, except for the beauty of the fur, but they have charms of their own. They are to be found in all kinds of the shorter napped furs, sealskin, otter, and in the tiger skin the slippers are more shapely. There is nothing like the fur slippers for warmth.

***

Some of the chinchilla collars have sable tails for ends. The combination is not to be commended for its beauty, but it has a certain style.

***

The number of furs worn at the Horse Show and through the mild weather of that week proves the popularity of these becoming adjuncts for this year. Many white fur boas, very long, were to be seen with light gowns, as well as the white feather and gray ostrich feather boas.

***

Gayly colored feather eyes are dotted all over different kinds of furs in boas, capes, and muffs, and make elaborate and showy furs.

***

The soap bowls and brushes come, of course, from England, the land of matutinal tubbings. The bowls are some of them as large as kneading bowls, big wooden affairs, and none of them are small. They are each filled with big pieces of soap molded into them, and which comes in any perfume and any color. The brush is as big as a paint brush, of a hairlike substance, with a twisted handle of the same. It is pure fun to take a bath with the big brush and soap tray. It takes the sedate grown-up back to mud-pie days.

***

The most distinguished-looking gowns at the Horse Show were of black velvet, and the corduroy gowns of various kinds were all of them "smart." Corduroy is popular this year. One pretty gown had a skirt of brown silk, a waist or short coat of brown velvet, and a touch of gold in the belt at the waist. Gold can be worn with brown when it would be garish with any other color.

***

It was noticeable that there was very little gold to be seen at the Show. There was hardly a well-dressed woman who wore it. Its fatal general popularity would be enough to keep the woman who does not spare expense in her gowns from wearing it to any extent.

***

There were a few women to be seen here and there with long ribbon or velvet ends dangling, each end finished with a long tapering point of gold or silver. They were noticeable. Many dangling ends always suggest savagery.

***

The mushroom is becoming so popular that it is getting into pincushions, and several varieties can be found in the shops. One of them, though it does not follow out the species in all its characteristics, is the fly agaric, the Amanita muscaria, one of the most poisonous varieties of the mushroom, known to the public at large as a toadstool. The pincushion variety of mushroom costs 25 cents apiece, making them a little more costly than the fresh varieties.

***

The trouble in China has sent Chinese novelties up above par, and John Chinaman is out in calendars and makes a very presentable appearance. Some of the calendars have photographs of Chinese children or women in the centre, are hung with coin on cords around the edges, and the calendar proper is in long strips of yellow red papers at one side, the numbers printed to have the appearance, as far as possible, of Chinese hieroglyphics. The small Chinese masks are used in some instances on painted bodies and with excellent effect.

***

These grotesque masks are on pyrographic bodies on leather, with holes in the tops of the heads to admit matches, while straps on other places on the leather background are for pipes, and the whole makes a pretty pipe rack. Rack is not exactly the name for it, for the leather is soft, with a slashed fringe at the ends. In fact, Indians are so popular on leather work of this kind that Chinese and Indian decorations are a little confused sometimes. The slashed leather has the atmosphere of the Western plains, as has the leather braiding which unites the seams in some of the leather work. The Indians appear largely on leather sofa pillows, and these are the most attractive of any of the pillows to be seen. On some of the pillows there are hunting scenes in pyrography.

***

They are trying to improve upon the old-time clay pipe with which the little Adams and Eves of the second generation of the world probably blew bubbles. It takes all the beauty out of the pretty sport to have a patent bubble blower, but it is probably convenient. There is a small curved tin tube, with a circular piece of tin at the end. In this circular piece is inserted a soap capsule, and then, with a little dish of water the bubble blower goes to work. There is none of the old trouble of making the soap suds before the fun begins. One capsule of soap can make a given number of bubbles, a hundred or more, and then another is put in to replenish it. The bubble blower, with a package of capsules, costs 10 cents, and additional capsules 5 cents a package.

***

There are some delightful twilled flannelettes to be found in the shops now at 15 cents a yard. They have been brought out in all the fine patterns of the imported French flannels, and they are exceedingly stylish. There are many of the Persian designs, showing the familiar palm leaf in different colors, and other designs in great variety.

***

Fur coats are fastened a little at the side with three large fancy buttons. For instance, an ermine coat, a half length box coat, has three big turquois blue buttons. A woman looking at this coat said: "I don't like it. I don't like ermine for an outside fur. I only like it for a trimming or a lining."

***

Big stylish flowers in colored designs are to be found printed on mummie cloths in the linen departments of the shops. The designs are excellent and so are the colors. There are combinations of pink and green, blue and heliotrope, and some designs are all in delft blue. The fleur de lis figures in these designs.

Peruvian Elections Pass Quietly.

LIMA, Peru, Dec. 1.—To-day's elections passed off without disturbance. The result is favorable to the electoral coalition in the list of whose candidates appear the names of some of the best and most respectable citizens of Lima.

Wheat Crop in Queensland.

BRISBANE, Queensland, Australia, Dec. 1.—The wheat crop of the Darling Downs district is expected to beat all records. In some instances it will yield fifty-two bushels to the acre.

To be sure of getting a copy, order in advance from your newsdealer.—Adv.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

William H. Van Nortwick.

William H. Van Nortwick, formerly a newspaper editor, died on Thursday at the residence of his son, Robert A. Van Nortwick, 53 Gardner Avenue, Jersey City. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at the house. Mr. Van Nortwick was born in New Brunswick, N. J., Dec 10, 1821. In early life he was employed on The Workman, a newspaper published in Philadelphia. He left that employment to serve as Assistant Superintendent of the Camden and Amboy Railroad. Later he was appointed Revenue Inspector for the district of New Jersey, and then returned to newspaper work as editor of The Bordentown Register. He was one of the owners and editors of The Trenton Evening Argus before its consolidation with The Sentinel. His next field of labor was as the editor of The Jersey City Standard, until it was sold to the late Michael Mullone, who changed its name to The Argus. Mr. Van-Nortwick's last work was as the managing editor of The Cleveland Leader. He retired eight years ago.

NAVY WON AT FOOTBALL

WAR OFFICIALS SEE THE GAME

Diplomatic Circles Represented and Many Society People on Hand—A Hard-Fought Struggle.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1. — Victory perched this afternoon, as it has done many a time before, on the pennants of the American Navy, when on Franklin Field the rival football teams of the Naval and Military Academies met for their annual game. History teaches that the American sailor afloat is a formidable person when engaged in controversy, and the embryo sailors from Annapolis proved to-day that Jack ashore is not always the lubber the song would make him out.

The military men from West Point were most decisively beaten. In fact, if it had not been for the do-or-die spirit and alert wit shared by both branches of the American service, a most appalling rout would have been chronicled to-day against the future defenders of the Nation's honor by land. As it was, the final score of the game, 11 to 7, by no means indicates the superiority of the Annapolis men. It will, however, remain a monument to the indomitable courage under heavy disadvantages which the military cadets displayed.

The Naval Academy's score was made up of one goal from the field and a touchdown, with its accompanying goal. West Point's unusual score of 7 points was due to one goal from the field and a safety which they forced the sailors to make late in the second half of the game. Throughout the game was one interminable exchange of punts, neither side being able to rush the ball down the field for any great distance. Annapolis, however, was clearly the stronger, both at kicking and at line bucking. It was only through persistent attempts at drop kicking goals from the field, a majority of which, through slowness in getting the ball away, were blocked, that Annapolis did not smother the soldiers under a heap of scores. Greater alertness and better generalship ought to be credited to the soldiers. West Point scored on her only opportunities. Annapolis lost chance after chance.

A REMARKABLE AUDIENCE.

The game was a notable one in many ways. The afternoon was steely clear, the air crisp and bracing, but not cold. Fully 25,000 persons witnessed the contest, and all of them, by reason of a Government edict which prohibits charging for admission to games in which the cadets participate, were virtually the guests of the University of Pennsylvania. The vast audience was a social gathering, in which the dun of commonplace civil life was brightened by the gilt trappings of the army and navy. The game brought together perhaps more distinguished officers of the united service than any other public event could hope to do. Lieut. Gen. Miles himself headed the list of military commanders present, with Secretary of War Root, Adjt. Gen. Corbin, Inspector Gen. Breckenridge, Surgeon Gen. Sternberg, Major Gen. Brooke were there and a host of other army officers, with their families and guests. With Secretary and Mrs. Root were Miss Root and Miss Tramnell of New York. Mrs. Brooke accompanied the General.

Among others seated on the West Point side were: The Misses Hitchcock, daughters of the Paymaster General; Gen. A. E. Bates, Mrs. Bates and their two daughters; Col. and Mrs. Edwards, Major W. A. Simpson and Miss Carroll Simpson, Capt. Russell, Gen. and Mrs. Sternberg, Gen. Carpenter, Gen. Patterson of Albany, N. Y.; Gen. and Mrs. Ludington of Washington, Lieut. and Mrs. Heiner, Lieut. and Mrs. Jamison, Lieut. D. G. Berry, Prof. C. P. Echols, Lieut. and Mrs. G. B. Davis, Lieut. and Mrs. Barnum, Lieut. Lassiter, Major and Mrs. Hall, Capt. Staden, Lieut. and Mrs. Lewis, Lieut. and Mrs. Smither, Lieut. and Mrs. McNeil, Prof. and Mrs. Fieberger, Major and Mrs. Bannister, Major and Mrs. G. F. Lander, Prof. and Mrs. Wood, Capt. and Mrs. Thompson, Lieut. and Mrs. Saxton, Lieut. Sarratt, Lieut. and Mrs. R. P. Davis, Dr. T. W. Jackson, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Hein, Capt. and Mrs. Treat, Capt. Wilcox, Dr. and Mrs. Kemp, Capt. and Mrs. Kuhn, Lieut. and Mrs. Jones, Lieut. and Mrs. Sylvers, Capt. and Mrs. Hobbs, Major and Mrs. Bellinger, Lieut. and Mrs. Chamberlaine, Prof. and Mrs. Edgerton, Lieut. and Mrs. Coe, Lieut. and Mrs. Hamilton, Capt. Landis, Mr. George Essigke, Capt. and Mrs. Sands, Mr. and Mrs. Kochler, Col. and Mrs. Tillman, Lieut. and Mrs. J. P. Jervey, Lieut and Mrs. Jenkins, Major and Mrs. Hall.

On the Navy's side of the field were Rear Admiral Melville, Capt. Clark, who commanded the battleship Oregon in her famous voyage during the Spanish war, Commander Colahan, and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Hackett. Others on the Navy's side of the field were Capt. and Mrs. J. Tiebus, Mr. Sands, Lieut. Miss Brumby, Lieut. Commander and Mrs. Parker, Prof. Henri Marion, Prof. P. J. Des Garennes, Lieut. and Mrs. T. F. Carter, Lieut and Mrs. Raby, Lieut. and Mrs. H. J. Ziegemer, Miss Knight, Mrs. Colahan and son, Lieut. and Mrs. Laning, Prof. and Mrs. Brown, Lieut. J. W. Orman, Ensign and Mrs. Cluverius, Lieut. and Mrs. Winfield, Lieut. Commander and Mrs. Warburton, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. and Miss Howard, Lieut. F. W. Bartlett, Lieut. J. L. Gow, Lieut. R. C. Johnston, Lieut. and Mrs. Magruder, Mr. J. A. Hoogerswerff, Prof. and Mrs N. N. Terry, Lieut. and Mrs. E. W. Eberle and son, Commander and Mrs. J. A. Norris, Ensign and Mrs. Kalbach, Surgeon and Mrs. Du Bose, two ladies, Lieut. Commander and Mrs. Eldridge, Prof. and Miss Willing, Lieut. and Mrs. Field, Lieut. and Mrs Coffman and son, Mr. C. V. Cusachs, and Lieut. Commander Grant.

Philadelphia society was represented as it has not been at any game this season, while from Washington, New York, and even Boston came hundreds of persons who had been fortunate enough to secure invitations.

The boxholders included Charles Custis Harrison, A. J. Cassatt, H. Laussat Geyelin, Alexander Van Rensselaer, Thomas Reath, Mitchell Harrison, George W. Childs Drexel, Jr., George L. Harrison, Jr., Clement A. Griscom, Effingham B. Morris, James W. Paul, Jr., Benjamin G. Wells, Craig Lippincott, Joseph G. Rosengarten, John C. Bell, C. S. W. Packard, George C. Thomas, Walter Lippincott, E. T. Stotesbury, Eugene Elliott, George H. McFadden, John C. Sims, J. Vaughan Merrick, John B. Parsons, Dr. J. William White, Barclay H. Warburton, James M. Beck, Randal Morgan, S. F. Houston, and Louis C. Madeira, Jr. Postmaster General Smith was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin G. Wells in their box.

It was, however, the gold and blue of official society that gave the tone to the immense audience. Between the army and navy the University of Pennsylvania hosts had divided the best seats equally. On each side of the field the tall tiers were capable of seating 9,000 persons. The entire south side was given over exclusively to the army, while the navy and its guests were the sole possessors of the north side of the field. The Pennsylvania students themselves, and the comparatively few outsiders invited personally by the students, were content with the stands at the ends of the field.

ARMY AND NAVY COLORS.

The display of color was of a brilliancy seldom seen even in the big college games. West Point's black, gold, and cadet gray banners seemed to rise above every head on the south side of the field—from the compact, square, gray mass of 250 West Pointers at the very centre of the stand to the outermost edges and corners of the long, dark stretch. Men as well as the hosts of pretty young women were anxious to show loyalty to the branch of the service whose guests they were. On the north side of the field there was not a whit less color nor enthusiasm, but it was the dark blue and gold of the naval cadets that waved in sharp, triangular pennants over the eager heads of two future naval officers and the 9,000 relatives and guests of the navy. In the neutral stands at the ends of the fields the colors were displayed impartially—but they were there. Fakirs outside the field had done a land office business in "Y'r fav'rite colors" that they will long remember.

The crowd began to arrived at the field before 1 o'clock and it oozed in solid streams through the various entrances, trickling slowly to its proper seats until shortly after 2, the hour set for the game. During the half hour before the arrival of the two teams the bands from the two academies made things merry by rival alternate performances of the lively popular airs dear to a holiday crowd.

With military promptness, the West Point squad, thirty strong, marched on to the field at just 2 o'clock. The south side of the field rose up with joy, and a roar broke out under the wild billowing of West Point colors. It was at this point that the compact square of cadet gray in the middle of the field sprang a surprise. With the precision known only to West Point, 280 brown megaphones rose to 280 mouths, and a sharp, quick cheer rang out that would have done credit to a mass of ten times the number of collegians.

Then it was the Navy's turn to cheer. At just one minute past 2 o'clock the Annapolis squad burst on the field. There were twenty-five of the gallant sailors, wrapped in unnautical blankets, which were hastily thrown aside, disclosing uniforms of blue-and-gold-striped jerseys and stockings. Thousands of blue-and-gold pennants whipped the air over the enthusiastic cheers of the Navy's partisans, but from the dark blue mass of cadets at the centre of the north stand there was no echo of the piercing chorus let forth by the young soldiers. The megaphone dealer from whom 280 of these noise-making instruments had been ordered failed to deliver, and the sailors had to depend upon their lusty but unaided lungs.

BANDS ENLIVEN THE OCCASION.

While the two teams on the field were warming up for the contest, the two academy bands ceased their warring and joined brasses in "The Army and Navy Forever," while soldiers and sailors sang across the field to each other in rather unsuccessful unison. Then West Point cheered Annapolis, Annapolis cheered West Point, and the game was begun.

The ball had been in play but a very few minutes when it became apparent that the game was to be one in which punting would be more frequent than in any game of the season. The sailors could rush the ball successfully for short distances, but a long series of advances down the field by straight-line bucking, or even by the end plays, at which Left Half Back Fowler and Right End Nichols were most clever, was out of the question. The naval offense was weak, but West Point's offensive play was still less effective.

There were sporadic moments when the soldiers were able to hold the ball for more than three downs. Bunker made several very substantial gains for West Point by plunges through the line on a tackle-back formation, but these advances were rare. Then there was fumbling, and an immense amount of it, shared almost equally by the soldiers and sailors during the first half. This added to the timidity of both teams when they got the ball in their possession, and kicking became more frequent as the game advanced.

In punting, Belknap for Annapolis, sent the ball both higher and further than did the West Point full back, Nichols. The Navy's ends were speedier in getting down the field, and this, added to the advantage which a kicking game gave, the sailors. Throughout the game Annapolis gained an average of nearly five yards on every exchange of punts, which in combination with their slightly superior offense ought to have made touch-downs for the sailors. But it didn't.

WEST POINT SCORED FIRST.

Although the play was not in the Navy's territory ten minutes during the first half, West Point scored a goal from the field, and Annapolis was left with a goose egg. Persistent attempts at goal from the field by the Navy, in the face of Long's slowness in getting the ball away and the inability of the sailors' line to hold long enough for him, were responsible for the greater part of the Navy's bad luck. Five times Long tried to drop kick goals, and three times Farnsworth, West Point's left tackle, broke through and blocked the ball. The remaining two attempts fell short, one being made from the 35-yard line. One of the blocked kicks led directly to the successful field goal, which Clark drop kicked for Annapolis from the 20-yard line at the end of twenty-five minutes of play.

Up to Clark's successful attempt at goal, the play had been decidedly in the navy's favor, except for Farnsworth's brilliant blocking of Long's attempts at field goals for the sailors. The West Point Cadets and their adherents had, nevertheless, kept up a steady din of cheering in the face of discouragement, and when their team scored—first in such clever style, pandemonium broke loose on the south side of the field. The whole south stand rose to its feet in a mad burst of joy, at which concerted effort was thrown to the winds. The military band at the angle of the field picked up its scarlet-lined coat-tails and danced. Up the side lines, amid the jumping-jack West Point substitutes, the soldiers' mascot—a gigantic white army mule—was led prancing. The beast was decked in gorgeous style. Cadet gray trousers incased his forelegs, and a huge blanket of black, gold, and gray hung over his back. To this was pinned where the saddle should have been white placards bearing the inscriptions:

"There are no ships on me—I'm something of a kicker myself."

Two excited cadets mounted the charger and raced up and down the side lines until the ball was again put in play. In the meantime a counter demonstration was organized on the Navy's side of the field, but it lacked heart. The sailors' mascot, a goat ornamented with blue and gold streamers, was led forth, but he balked at the noise, and bolted back to the corner of the field.

In the second half of the game, both teams played steadier ball. There was less fumbling, but punting was adhered to. The navy had profited by its experience, and resorted less to attempts at goals from field. Instead, greater faith was pinned to Belknap's long punts in the effort to get within striking distance of the army's goal. Long attempted to drop kick goals twice. His first effort was blocked, but the second was successful. It was not much later that Land was shoved eight yards through the army's line for a touch-down on a double pass, and the sending of fake interference toward right end. On both occasions the Naval Cadets and their partisans in the north stand went appropriately wild. Even the mascot goat allowed himself to be dragged out on the field.

Seldom has a great audience retained its seats so long after the end of a game as that at Franklin Field this afternoon. For fully ten minutes there was no apparent effort of any one to leave. Every one wanted to see the naval cadets' triumphal march around the field. And the young sailors, headed by their band, did march in noisy, delirious joy cheered generously by the West Point cadets as they passed the seats of the defeated. Then all broke up in confused exit, and the army, navy, and society went home.

THE GAME IN DETAIL.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1.—West Point was first on the field, but the middies soon followed the soldiers. Annapolis won the toss, and chose the west goal with the wind in her favor. Farnsworth kicked off to the Navy's 10-yard line, where Smith fumbled and Goodspeed fell on the ball. Casad skirted left end for three yards, but West Point lost the ball on downs. Belknap punted out of danger. Casad catching it at the Navy's 50-yard line. Phillips tried the centre for no gain, but Bunker went through for four yards. Two plays failed, and the ball went to the Navy on downs. Nicholls broke through right tackle for fifteen yards, but at the next attempt he made no gain, and Belknap punted over the Army's goal line.

The ball was brought over, and Farnsworth kicked from the 20-yard mark to the Navy's 20-yard line. Fowler made nine yards around left end, and Belknap kicked to the Army's 37-yard line; Bunker broke through left tackle for three yards, but a fumble gave the ball to the Navy. Williams and Fowler added five yards, and the former gathered three, but Nicholls fumbled, Lane fortunately falling on the ball. Casad went through right tackle for five, and Farnsworth added two. Then he punted to midfield; Belknap returned the kick to the Army's 25-yard line. Two plays failed, and on a poor pass Farnsworth fumbled, and the Navy got the ball on the Army's 20-yard line. Williams made the necessary distance, but Fowler and Lane failed, and Long dropped back for a goal from the field which failed, the ball going under the crossbar. Farnsworth made three around right end, Williams four, Nicholls two, and Williams three, but the Army was given the ball for holding. After Bunker had advanced three and Farnsworth two, the Navy recovered it on a forward pass on the Army's 33-yard mark, but lost it for holding. Phillips made five yards through tackle, and Casad two, and a mass play failing, Casad punted to the 50-yard line. Here the Navy was held for downs, and after they had made but short gains Long tried another field goal from the 40-yard line, but again the ball went under the bar.

CLARK KICKED A GOAL.

Bringing it out to the 20-yard line, Farnsworth punted to the Navy's 50-yard line. A false kick netted 2 yards, so Belknap punted to the Army's 20-yard line, Lahm running back 6. Bunker went through centre for 2, Casad tried left end for 2, but Phillips tumbled, and it was the Navy's ball at West Point's 20-yard line. After Fowler had been thrown for a loss, Long tried again for a goal from the field, but Farnsworth broke through and blocked it, the ball bounding back to midfield, where a Navy man fell on it. Clark skirted right end for 23 yards, and mass plays at centre and tackle added 6. Then, with the ball on the Navy's 20-yard line, Clark dropped back for a field goal, sending the ball squarely between the uprights. West Point, 5; Annapolis, 0.

Belknap kicked off to Goodspeed at the Army's 20-yard line, and the ball gravitated from one end of the gridiron to the other without material advantage to either team until shortly before the end of the half, when Long attempted another field goal, but, like the others, was unsuccessful, as Phillips blocked the kick. Time was up for the half, the Navy having the ball on her 45-yard line.

The second half was a punting contest between Farnsworth and Belknap. After about fifteen minutes of this kind of work, the middies secured the ball on Lahm's fumble on the Army's 11-yard line, but after Williams had failed, Long made another attempt at a field goal, this time from the 15-yard line, but again was his kick blocked, the Navy getting the ball. A mass play gained two yards, and Long tried another drop kick, sending the spheroid over the crossbar from the 25-yard mark. West Point, 5; Annapolis, 5.

From the time Farnsworth kicked off, the Naval Cadets played desperately, going through the Army line for from two to ten yards, until they had the ball in dangerous proximity to the Army goal, where they lost it on downs. Lahm fumbled, and Nicholls fell on it at the 10-yard line. Read was thrown for a loss, but on a delayed pass Land covered the necessary distance for a touch-down, from which Fowler kicked an easy goal. Annapolis 11; West Point, 5.

LONG SCORED A SAFETY.

Nicholls kicked off to Smith on the Navy's 17-yard line. Fowler made 5 on a fake kick; but Belknap punted. Phipps made 25 yards around right end. A mass play yielded nothing, and two yards were made by Hackett on a delayed pass. Nicholls kicked, the ball rolling over the line. Belknap punted out from the 20-yard line, and the Army got the ball for holding at her 50-yard line. Forced to kick, Nicholls punted to Belknap on the Navy's 10-yard line, and the latter attempted to return it, but he kicked into the line, and the ball bounded over the Navy's goal line, where Long fell on it for a safety. Annapolis, 11; West Point, 7.

Little time remained for play, as Belknap brought the ball out and punted from the 20-yard line to the Army's 50-yard mark. Two mass plays and Bunker's run around right end landed the ball on the Navy's 38-yard line. Phipps went through for 4 yards, and then Nicholls attempted a field goal, but the ball fell short, the Navy getting it on her 10-yard line. Fowler skirted right end for 4 yards. Lane dived into the line for two, and Farnsworth for 2. The whistle blew, and the game ended with the ball in the middies' possession on their 18-yard line. The line-up:

Annapolis Celebrates Victory.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 1.—The football victory of Annapolis over West Point was enthusiastically celebrated here. Reports from the game were received by the Annapolis partisans at the office of a local newspaper, and by the few cadets who remained at the Naval Academy, over a special wire to the officers' club. When the news of the first score was received and with it word that the navy was gaining ground at will, navy adherents grew jubilant. The whole town went wild as the navy's two scores came in. When the result of the game was announced the crowd broke loose again. The town to-night is filled with men, women, and children decorated with naval colors and blowing horns and singing songs. A number of the laid-away songs prepared for last year's expected victory have been resurrected.

Several members of the Columbia football team, headed by Coach George Foster Sanford, were interested spectators of the game between the Annapolis and West Point Cadets at Philadelphia yesterday afternoon. The Columbians left New York at 10 o'clock yesterday morning and returned immediately after the game. Among those in the party were Capt. Morley, "Jack" Wright, Murphy, Gard, Wolff, and Bayard Boyesen.

A Yale Football Team Defeated.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—The Yale Law School football eleven was defeated on Marshal Field this afternoon by an eleven composed of ex-stars of Western universities, the score being 12 to 0 for two fifteen-minute halves. The Chicago eleven, which included "Pat" O'Dea, Wisconsin's former full back, and Potter and Van Doozer of Minnapolis in the back field, outweighed the Yale men so much that the latter looked like pigmies beside them, and it was seldom that the Easterners could make their necessary gains. The proceeds of the game are to be divided among several charitable institutions and society was out in force to watch the struggle. The Yale men were banqueted at the University Club to-night.

Manhattan Eleven Won.

The Manhattan Association Football Club kept up its winning streak yesterday at Prospect Park and gained a victory over the rival team, the Staten Island Association Football Club by 5 goals to 1. The combination of the Manhattan forwards proved very effective in gaining goals, W. Austin and W. S. Patmore doing some particularly good dribbling, while J. Benyon proved a host in himself at full back. For Staten Island W. Sparks tried hard to save the defeat, while Gillespie saved several goals. The line-up:

Manhattan A. F. C.	Position.	Staten I. A. F.C.
Smith	Goal	Lichtenberg
Benyon	Back	Gillespie
Smedley	Back	Hedge
Reynolds	Half back	Ross
D. Austin	Half back	Ridgeway
Sylvester	Half back	Arnoit
Adam	Right wing	W. Sparks
E. W. Balmer	Right wing	Heinekin
J. Balmer	Centre	Whitelaw
W. Austin	Left wing	Catty

Referee—W. F. Butcher, Manhattan A. F. C. Linesmen—C. S. Moore, Manhattan; F. Barnes, Staten Island. Goals kicked—W. Austin, 2; W. Adam, 1; J. Balmer, 1; W. S. Patmore, 1, for Manhattan; W. Sparks, 1, for Staten Island.

Duquesne Defeated W. and J.

Football Game Postponed.

Ordered to Shoot Cuban Incendiaries.

HAVANA, Dec. 1.—On account of rumors being current of attempts to burn sugar estates, the Governors have been authorized to appoint special police to protect the plantations. These officers have been ordered to shoot any one caught in the act of setting fire to any estate. The sugar crop promises to be the largest since 1895. The fields are now dry and in such condition that were a fire once started it would be impossible to stop it.

New Public Bath in Santiago.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, Dec. 1.—The new public bath for women, built by the Sanitary Department, was opened to-day, and three hundred women and girls took advantage of the opportunities offered. Heretofore women of the lower class have been in the habit of bathing in a cove, without protection, and have been frequently interrupted by men who stole their clothing.

Progress on River and Harbor Bill.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The House Committee on Rivers and Harbors continued work on the River and Harbor bill to-day. The discussion of the various items is proceeding upon the theory that the bill is to appropriate in the neighborhood of $25,000,000. Only a few of the items have been definitely decided upon. Norfolk, Va., is to get $195,000 and Newport News $225,000. It is not probable that the bill will be completed for two weeks.

TRAVIS WON GOLF HONORS

TIE FOR THE OPEN HANDICAP

Brokaw and Converse Finished with 76 Each, and Will Play Off for First Place on Monday.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Dec. 1.—The tournament of the Lakewood Golf Club closed to-day, and Walter J. Travis carried off the honors by defeating Findlay S. Douglas by 3 up and 2 to play.

As usual, the last day's card was a double one, with match play semi-finals and finals for the three chief cup divisions, and an all-day handicap, in which there were seventy-four entries. Of the morning's semi-finals the most interesting match was between Findlay Douglas and H. M. Forrest, Philadelphia Country Club, the latter forcing the ex-champion to play his best all through the green to win. Their cards were:

Douglas—
Out .....5 5 5 4 5 5 4 7 5—45
In .....4 4 4 6 6 3 5 6 5—43—88
Forrest—
Out .....4 4 5 6 7 6 5 5 4—46
In .....4 5 4 4 6 5 5 4 5—42—88

The match went to Douglas by 1 up. The Travis-Hamilton match was disappointing to friends of the popular ex-champion, who was badly away from his game, taking seven for the first hole and losing ground all through the round. Travis won by 5 up and 3 to play on the following card:

Travis—
Out .....5 3 5 6 6 5 4 5 4—43
In .....4 4 0 4 4 5 5 4 5—41—84

In the consolation semi-finals M. M. McCawley, Philadelphia Country Club, beat Harold Curtiss, Lakewood, 6 up and 5 to play, and C. H. Seeley, Westchester, beat Harry Suydam, Dyker Meadow, 5 up and 4 to play. For the third division N. Mallouf, Garden City, beat Walter D. Stockly 6 up and 5 to play, and E. S. Sedfield, Westchester, beat Archie Dell, Lakewood, 1 up over twenty holes. The afternoon struggle between Travis and Douglas drew a large crowd. The first half of the match was in Douglas's favor. Both were away off in their putting, while neither could claim a brilliant long game. But comparisons of style were at all times interesting, and the end was a victory for Travis by 3 up and 2 to play. The stroke records:

HOCKEY FOR CHAMPIONSHIP.

The hockey championship series of games will begin on Dec. 20 in New York, when the teams representing the New York Athletic Club and the Hockey Club of New York will line up on the ice in the St. Nicholas Ring for the initial contest. After this first game there will be a period of rest extending over the Christmas holidays until Jan. 3. Then come in quick succession the remaining games in the rinks of New York, Philadelphia, and Brooklyn. In all there will be thirty games, fifteen in New York, ten in Brooklyn, and five in Philadelphia. Each team will play ten matches, and the one winning the greatest number will be the accredited champion.

The only innovation in the league this year apparent at present is the admission of the Quaker City Hockey Club of Philadelphia. The fact that this team will journey to New York to play, and that the local sevens will go to the Quaker City for some of their games, serves to insure a broader interest and a greater popularity for this Winter's sports. The Schedule Committee, composed of Howard Drakeley, Crescent Athletic Club; J. A. Fenwick, New York Athletic Club; J. W. Callender, St. Nicholas Skating Club; B. V. Curnen, Hockey Club of New York; G. W. Orton, Quaker City Hockey Club, and T. W. Post, Crescent Athletic Club, yesterday announced the schedule as follows:

DE LA SALLE'S PROTEST.

Schoolboy Politicians Propose to Make Things Interesting at Tuesday's Meeting.

When schoolboys from the various New York schools convene in the monthly meeting of the Interscholastic League on Tuesday De La Salle proposes to make a brave fight to seat her delegates at the assemblage. De La Salle maintains that her recent suspension was illegal and due not to justice, but to jealousy of her strong football team. She contends that the schoolboys in themselves have absolutely no right to suspend her, and consequently she expects to be represented at the meeting as usual. The delegates, however, say their actions were perfectly well authorized by the provisions of the constitution, and hence they do not propose to allow De La Salle's representatives to be present at their assemblage.

De La Salle says that at the meeting in which she was suspended the delegates were apparently making an earnest endeavor to see that the provisions of their constitutions were fulfilled, and yet they themselves, so De La Salle maintains, refused to live up to its regulations. One of the rules prescribes that all protests as to the eligibility of players shall be decided by an arbitration committee of three Head Masters. This, however, De La Salle continues, was not pleasing to the delegates, who consequently abrogated their constitution of June, 1900, and in its stead adopted the constitution in vogue in 1899. This latter constitution said that the Arbitration Committee should consist of members of the University Athletic Club. As this organization is defunct the students formed themselves into a Committee of the Whole to judge the case. De La Salle does not object to the boys putting into operation an old constitution. Her contention is that it became a law for the I. S. A. A. only on its new adoption. She maintains that the rule was not retroactive, and could not be brought to bear upon an alleged violation of its rules before these rules were themselves in force.

Carruthers National Tournament.

A meeting to organize the Carruthers National bowling tournament for the present season will be held at the Elephant Club alleys, Brooklyn, to-morrow evening. The tournament is limited to 21 clubs, and 16 of the 17 clubs from last season which are eligible this year have already applied for admission again, while there are twelve applications for the five vacancies remaining.

Maine Moose Season Closes.

BANGOR, Me., Dec. 1.—The moose hunting season of 1900 in Maine closed at midnight Friday, and the returns show that in the great hunting region north of Bangor the number of moose killed has been about the same as in 1899. Up to date there have been shipped through Bangor 133 moose. Last year the total number shipped was 188.

BARGAINS AT HORSE SALE.

The attendance and the prices at the Fasig-Tipton Company's "Old Glory" auction sale of light harness horses in Madison Square Garden fell off together yesterday. In the forenoon only a few buyers were present, and the lack of competition resulted in the dealers present securing many bargains. Only about half the offering of horses from C. J. and Harry Hamlin's Village Farm, East Aurora, N. Y., had been sold Friday afternoon and night, and those remaining, when sold yesterday morning, went at figures that greatly reduced the good average obtained the day before. An instance of prices obtained by other sellers was furnished in the reselling of the pair Prince and Genoa, record as a team 2:19, bought by E. S. Woodward of Camden, N. J., for $1,200 a day or two before. The horses brought just half the cost price when put up again, Barney Demarest of Morristown, N. J., buying them.

Straight through the morning and afternoon conditions that ruled in the earlier part of the week were reversed, and the top prices were paid for pacers. The highest figure reached was for Dan Q., a seven-year-old pacer, with a record of 2:07¼, who went to George Peek of Westfield, N. J., for $1,500. The next best day prices were $750 for the four-year-old mare Maud M., with a pacing record of 2:16, and $610 for the nine-year-old pacing gelding Alhambra, record 2:08¾. Some excitement was caused late in the afternoon by the attempt of a yearling by G. W. Archer trying to bolt while being shown on the track. He got into the main entrance to the hall, but there was stopped and returned to his proper place. George C. Clausen, President of the Park Board, was one of the purchasers in the afternoon, and secured a good road horse in Northland Puss, a three-year-old by Potential, for $250.

In the evening the crowd in attendance was even smaller than that during the day, and the figures reached for good horses were entirely inadequate. For the one night at least it was a buyers' sale, and the dealers present did not miss the chance.

The sale will continue this week in Madison Square Garden every day and evening until all the horses catalogued are disposed of. As from eighty to a hundred are sold each day, the selling will last four or five days longer, and many opportunities for high-class horses for race track or road purposes will be offered. A number of excellent road teams and young stallions and highly bred mares still are to be offered. The sale so far has been the most successful on record in point of attendance and the average of prices, but the offering has justified the results attained, for never before were so many fast and well-bred horses put up at auction in one sale. The notable features of the week were the sales of The Abbot for $26,500, Axtell for $14,600, and Contralto for $6,200. On his purchase of The Abbot Fire Commissioner John J. Scannell has been offered an advance of $1,500, but he declined to listen to propositions to sell, saying he was satisfied to keep the horse.

The Abbot to-night will be put on a special car with his attendants, including a man who has been with him ever since he was foaled, and will be sent back to the Village Farm, East Aurora, near Buffalo, for the Winter. The horse will serve for exhibition racing purposes next year, and is expected to earn at least $10,000 in this way. Commissioner Scannell said of him yesterday:

"I fancied him, so I bought him. I am sorry not to have been able to show him on the Speedway."

The horses that brought the best prices yesterday, the buyers, and the prices paid were as follows:

Grand Pianos.

First, because of their great size.

Second, the price, which usually means about $1,000. We fully believe we have overcome both objections, as we offer our smallest baby grand, which occupies but little more room than an upright, at a price astonishingly low.

The Kentucky Will Be Used to Emphasize a Demand for Payment of Indemnity.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The State Department to-day sent instructions to United States Consul Gummere, at Tangiers, Morocco, to proceed to the capital of that country, as far as possible, on a United States man-of-war, to again present the claim of the United States for indemnity on account of the murder of Marcus Ezagui, a naturalized American citizen, who was killed in June, 1900.

The warship, which probably will be the Kentucky, recalled from Smyrna for that purpose, will convey the Consul from Tangiers to Mazagan, which is the nearest port to Fez, the capital of Morocco.

The indemnity demanded in behalf of the widow of Ezagui amounts to $5,000, and was based on the failure of the Moorish Government to punish the murderers. The Moorish Government declined the first demand on the ground that Ezagui by long residence in Morocco had become a Moorish citizen, under the terms of the Madrid convention. The State Department, however, holds now that the returned naturalized citizen has a right to elect whether he shall become a Moor or leave the country, and Ezagui was prevented from exercising that choice by his murderer.

In view of this fact, and the further fact that the last discussion on this subject between Consul Gummere and the Moorish authorities was without result, the State Department has thought the present to be a fitting occasion to let Mr. Gummere pay a visit to the Sultan's Court, where no representative of the United States Government has been for years, with full powers to close the case of the murdered man and the other claims that have been pending against the Government of Morocco.

The disposition of the United States Government is entirely friendly, but it feels that it has not been given proper consideration, and the Navy Department has been asked to supply a man-of-war to convey the Consul to Mazagan and to await his future movements.

MANY FILIPINOS IN EUROPE.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—There is a noticeable incursion of Filipinos into London and Paris. The report, subsequently denied, that Agoncillo, Aguinaldo's agent in Europe, was contemplating going to Hongkong to reorganize there the Filipino transport and re-supply the Filipinos with munitions of war has given rise to the belief that the Filipinos in Europe are contemplating a new campaign. One of the most prominent members of the European Junta, who has just returned from Paris and Madrid, said in an interview:

"We are planning no new campaign. There is no reason why Agoncillo should go to Hongkong to give the Filipinos a further supply of munitions of war. The fact that Agoncillo has just leased a home in Paris shows he intends to remain there and watch events. The reports of our committees at Kobe, Yokohama, Macao, Batavia, Hongkong, and Bangkok show they are all working well. This is also evidenced by the fact that 10,000 rifles were smuggled into Manila last month.

"The war is no nearer an end than ever. The Filipino resources are still great, as can be judged by the fact that Aguinaldo is continuing to keep and feed 3,000 Spanish prisoners. We are deeply disappointed at the re-election of Mr. McKinley. Although our agents in the United States never led us to believe that Mr. Bryan would actively help us, yet we relied on the strength of the anti-imperialists in the United States. We are still anxious to come to an understanding, and there are indications that Mr. McKinley favors a compromise. It is clear that Judge Taft goes beyond his instructions, and that Mr. McKinley is prepared to give greater concessions than Judge Taft.

"It is true that a large number of Filipinos are flocking to European countries. At least sixty are now in London, but not with the idea of renewed propaganda. The junta is content to wait till the Americans are tired of losing officers and men by deaths from sickness. We hope and believe better times are in store."

THE RECENT STORM AT GUAM.

Rear Admiral Remey Reports that People Are Destitute.

MANILA, Dec. 1.—Rear Admiral Remey, in his official reports of the recent typhoon which visited the Island of Guam, reports that the storm was the severest in forty years. The palace at Agana and the Government buildings were unroofed and wrecked. The sea reached the Plaza. Many of the homeless sought refuge in the school and jail.

No one is reported to have been killed at Agana, but the mortality caused by the recent epidemic of the grip has been much increased by exposure, most of the dwellings having been destroyed.

The town of Marajan was leveled and twenty-eight persons were killed. Several persons were killed in various small villages, and several small coasters are missing. No reports have been received from some localities. Cocoanut trees and all crops are destroyed, and food is being distributed to the sufferers.

Admiral Remey has ordered the Arethusa from Cavite with food supplies. Flour, corn, and meats are needed, and it is suggested that contributions be sent from the United States. The Brutus, from Cavite, and the Solace, from San Francisco, due at Guam recently, will relieve immediate needs.

The pounding of the Yosemite upon the reef broke and twisted her propeller and she was abandoned and sank Nov. 16. The flagship Newark has gone to investigate the disaster.

The Philippine Civil Service Board.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—President McKinley has issued an executive order directing the United States Civil Service Commission to render such assistance as may be practicable to the Civil Service Board created by the Philippine Commission, to establish and maintain "an honest and efficient civil service" in the Philippines. The commission is instructed to conduct civil service examinations there on the request of the board under regulations hereafter to be agreed on between the two bodies.

LIEUT. CRIMMINS DEPARTS.

Lieut. Martin L. Crimmins, Sixth Infantry, United States Army, left the city Saturday morning for the Philippines to rejoin his regiment, his leave of absence expiring. The Lieutenant arrived at San Francisco from the Philippines in August last, on sick leave. His health is now fully restored. He lately visited Washington and was the guest of Gen. Coppinger, on whose staff he was an aide de camp in Florida and Alabama.

While in the capital he made visits to the President, Gen. Miles, and Gen. Corbin, and last week was the guest of Gov. Roosevelt. On Tuesday evening last, his father, John D. Crimmins, and his sister, Miss Crimmins, gave him a farewell reception at their residence, 40 East Sixty-eighth Street, which was largely attended by personal friends.

Senator Stewart in Republican Ranks.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Senator Stewart of Nevada has had his name placed on the Republican caucus list. He has been a Silver Party man for the last eight years.

THE SHIPPING SUBSIDY BILL.

Senator Frye Will Try to Make the Measure Unfinished Business.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The general committee of men prominently identified with the shipping interests of the country which was appointed by Senator Frye three years ago to promote legislation in that interest held a meeting at the Arlington Hotel to-day for the purpose of considering ways and means for securing action upon the Shipping Subsidy bill at the approaching session of Congress. C. A. Griscom, President of the American Line, presided, and about twenty of the twenty-five members of the committee were present. Senators Hanna and Frye and Representative Grosvenor also were in attendance.

The committee considered at length the objections which have been urged against the bill as it stands, and decided to recommend a few unimportant amendments. The committee also decided to urge the utmost dispatch in getting the bill before Congress for consideration.

Senator Frye, who has charge of the Shipping Subsidy bill, announced to-day that he would call up that bill in the Senate next Tuesday and move to have it made the unfinished business, displacing the Spooner Philippine bill. Senator Frye will make a speech explaining the bill, and will then resume the chair, leaving the management of the bill to some Senator on the floor. He also said that he expected to secure the indorsement of this programme by the Committee on Order of Business, which will meet Monday afternoon.

The Belgia Temporarily Disabled.

QUEENSTOWN, Dec. 1.—The Cunard liner Umbria, Capt. Dutton, from New York Nov. 24 for Liverpool, which arrived here this morning, reports having passed on Nov. 29, in latitude 51 north and longitude 20 west, the Hamburg-American liner Belgia, Capt. Schroeder, which left Hamburg Nov. 24, bound for Baltimore. The Belgia had stopped for the purpose of repairing her rudder, which had become disabled, but it was expected that she would proceed on the following day.

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS

Suit Against the Baltimore and Ohio Company.

Its Purpose to Determine Status of Common and Preferred Stockholders as Regards Dividends.

Suit in equity was brought yesterday in the United States Circuit Court against the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company by John D. Crimmins, who, on behalf of himself and other holders of the preferred stock, asks for a temporary injunction restraining the Directors of the road from paying to the holders of the common stock the 2 per cent. dividend declared payable on March 1, 1901, out of the net earnings for the year ended June 30, 1900.

The purpose of the suit, though the latter is not a friendly one, in the commonly accepted sense, is to establish the status of the preferred and the common stockholders as regards a distribution in dividends of the company's profits. It seems that the terms of the reorgsnization agreement are sufficiently vague regarding dividends to permit of a number of interpretations, of which, however, but one can be right. The company, it is alleged, has adopted the interpretation upheld by the common stockholders, because most favorable to them, and according to which the preferred stock is entitled to only a 4 per cent. dividend, and that after the payment of this dividend the remaining profits should be distributed among the common stockholders.

The position taken by the preferred stockholders is that the preferred stock is entitled either to a dividend of 4 per cent. and an additional pro rata share in common with the common stock of the remaining profits to be distributed, or at least to a pro rata share with the common stock in any profits to be distributed after payment of a 4 per cent. dividend to both classes of stock.

Interested financial circles have been divided for some time on the interpretation of this question, and the discussion was renewed recently when the first 4 per cent. dividend was declared on the common stock, 2 per cent. of which has been paid. In view of the large prospective earnings of the company, the preferred stockholders thought it desirable to have the question judicially determined, and therefore Mr. Crimmins, who owns 1,000 shares of preferred stock, brought this suit. His attorneys are John G. Johnson and Thomas Thacher.

The total amount of stock issued by the company amounts to 600,000 shares preferred and 450,000 shares of common stock of the par value of $100 per share. The preferred and common stock of the company is in the control of a voting trust composed of five Trustees, who are to hold it for five years, certificates of beneficial interest having in the meantime been issued to the registered holders of the stock.

DELAYS ON NEW YORK CENTRAL

Suggestions by Officials for Relieving the Congestion of Traffic.

The complaints against the New York Central caused by the many delays on its line between Mott Haven and Forty-second Street have resulted in bringing out a great many suggestions and plans for improvements, and some of these were, in the absence of President Callaway, yesterday brought to the attention of officials of the line who are directly interested in the operation of the road, and they were asked to give their view of what would be the best solution of the trouble. They all agreed that something must be done to alleviate the present crowded condition of the yards, to which most of the delays are due, but they disagreed as to the best way out of the difficulty.

"I have suggested a half dozen plans to Mr. Callaway," said Mr. Franklin, General Manager of the Harlem line, who is directly responsible for the operation of the tracks and yards up to Mott Haven. The underground loop was proposed by me. This would be feasible, as there is a rise in grade between Fifty-ninth and Forty-ninth Streets of 33 feet, while there is a drop from Forty-ninth Street to the station proper of only 10 feet. For the same reason an elevation of the tracks from Forty-ninth Street into the station would also be possible. Neither of these plans would require necessarily a new motor, so long as the loops were used only for suburban trains.

"But what will probably have to be done will be to acquire sufficient property on the east side of our tracks to permit the extension of the yards. This would mean the purchase of every house on Park Avenue from Fifty-first Street down, and of at least half the houses on Lexington Avenue from Forty-sixth Street down. The square piece of land we own between Vanderbilt and Madison Avenues would not be enough to store forty cars. Still, the delays which have occurred will not occur again, excepting through some accident, as soon as the new switching system is completely installed, which will be in about two weeks."

Another official, who did not wish to be quoted, said:

"The best solution, to my mind, is to throw out the New Haven road and let us have the station to ourselves. I believe that this sentiment would be indorsed by every employe in the yard. All the other plans suggested have some objectionable feature. With a loop, either elevated or underground, the engines and trains would have to go right on again, without giving them a rest, which is undesirable. No motor has as yet been found that will move the heavy trains we use, and, as to a third rail system, that would be entirely inadequate. Yes, it is used by the Baltimore and Ohio, but their traffic is only 25 per cent. of that which moves in and out of our station. If they would throw out the New Haven road we would have all the room we wanted."

The official admitted, however, that in view of the fact that the New York Central receives a large and profitable rental from the New Haven road there was little chance of a removal of the New Haven from the station.

That the solution of the motive power problem is not an easy one is also demonstrated by the statement of another official, who said that almost every motor and electric company in the country had been asked to submit a feasible plan for the use of some other power than steam, without any satisfactory suggestion having, so far, been offered.

GREAT NORTHERN'S NEW DEAL.

QUEBEC, Dec. 1.—The Great Northern Railway has completed a contract with the Leyland line, whereby it charters five boats of that line for five years to carry grain between this port and Great Britain. This will enable the Great Northern to run a weekly service between Quebec and England. The Great Northern now announces that some of the largest steamers now running to Boston will be brought to Quebec next season for their export trade.

Proposed Railroad in Alaska.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 1.—A Tacoma (Washington) special says: "Surveys which have been going on for some months are construed to mean that a railroad will be built from Port Valdez, Alaska, to Eagle City, thus making an all-American line from the ocean to the Yukon River. Such is the purport of news brought from the North. Two years ago Capt. Abercrombie and a party of surveyors understood to be in the employ of the Burlington Railroad, made a thorough exploration of the route, and another party of surveyors was in the field this year."

Northern Pacific Invades Territory.

LEWISTON, Idaho, Dec. 1.—The steamer J. M. Hannaford, owned by the Northern Pacific Railroad, has been leased by F. W. Kettenbach, manager of a local grain company, and will be put in service here early next week to ply between Lewiston and Snake River points. There is a traffic arrangement with the Northern Pacific. The movement is interpreted as a big inroad in the Oregon Railroad and Navigation territory by the Northern Pacific.

Railway's Request Denied.

ALBANY, Dec. 1.—The application of the Elmira and Corning Railway Company for authority to construct an electric railway eighteen miles long from Elmira to Corning was denied to-day by the State Board of Railroad Commissioners on the ground that the railroads now existing in that territory served the public convenience, and there was no necessity for building the applicants' road.

Ordered Not to Sell Railroad.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Dec. 1.—Federal Judge Swayne to-day issued an injunction against State Controller Reynolds and the Sheriff of Leon County, restraining them from selling at auction next Monday, the Florida Central and Peninsular Railroad for back taxes alleged to amount to nearly $100,000. The road is a branch of the Seaboard Air Line.

BRIEF RAILROAD ITEMS.

Vermilye & Co. have accepted the financial agency of the Chicago Great Western Railway Company.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has decided to abandon the long names of its proprietary companies on passenger coaches, and all these cars will be relettered with the designation, "Pennsylvania Lines."

The Missouri Pacific has issued $2,983,560 additional capital stock to purchase the Kansas City Northwestern Railroad, control of which has been owned for some years by friendly interests. The total outstanding stock of the road is now $50,432,100. The stock of the Kansas City Northwestern, which is to be purchased, will be kept alive and its bonds will not be disturbed.

Two new passenger stations are shortly to be erected on the Montauk Division of the Long Island Railroad. One of them will be built at Sayville and the other at Rock Centre. The buildings are to be of red brick, and will cost $10,000 each. The grounds around the stations are to be laid out with floral plots. The present buildings have done service for nearly thirty years. The modernizing of other stations along the lines of the Long Island will follow, some new stations will be built, while others will be reconstructed. In order to make the station grounds attractive landscape gardening is also to be introduced.

ARMY REORGANIZATION BILL.

Democrats Will Oppose New Measure and Urge Extension of Present Law.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The House Military Affairs Committee expects to have the bill for the reorganization of the army perfected on Monday, and it probably will be presented to the House Tuesday. Most of the staff features of Secretary Root's bill, it is understood, will be rejected by the committee. The Ordnance Staff, it is stated, will remain permanent with Surgeon Generals, Judge Advocate Generals, and Paymaster Generals' staffs, and the only concession to the Secretary's desire for staff details from the line will be in the cavalry and infantry branches of the service in those below the grade of Major. Details from the line for staff duty in these branches will be made up to and including the rank of Captain. As soon as the latter grade is passed the officers will become permanent additions to the staff. The provision in the Secretary's bill which authorizes the President to appoint the heads of bureaus it is said also will be eliminated.

The Democratic leaders have been consulting about the position to be assumed by them toward the proposed permanent reorganization of the army, and a caucus has been called for Monday afternoon. The consensus of opinion seems to favor an extension of the present provisional army as a substitute for a permanent increase, and at the meeting on Monday Representative Hay of Virginia, one of the prominent Democratic members of the Military Committee and the Chairman of the Democratic caucus, will offer a bill extending the provisions of the present law for three years as a substitute for the reorganization bill.

TO RETURN CAPTURED FLAG.

New Hampshire Woman Will Make Visit of Sentiment to Texas.

MILFORD, N. H., Dec. 1.—Mrs. Mary A. Lull, widow of Col. Lull of this town, left for Corsicana, Texas, to-day on her errand to deliver to the United Daughters of the Confederacy a flag, the distinguishing mark only of which is a lone star, captured in the charge of the Eighth New Hampshire Volunteers on Fort Hudson, La., May 27, 1863. This is the regiment that Lieut. Col. Lull commanded, and he sent the flag home as a souvenir of that great fight. He later was killed.

Recently Mrs. Lull wrote to the Texas Division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, and offered to turn over to them the flag for identification. The offer was accepted and the invitation to attend a reunion of the Daughters at Corsicana, Dec. 6, was extended and accepted. Mrs. Lull also goes as a representative of Oliver W. Lull Post, No. 11, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of New Hampshire.

The Bethlehem Company's contract was exactly similar to that of Carnegie, viz., 18,592 tons of armor for $8,188,370.50.

Commissionership Offered to Manley.

German Draft Attached.

Deputy Sheriff Prendergast has received an attachment for $1,200 against Simon Loewengard of Cologne, Germany, in favor of Josef Siepman, as administrator in bankruptcy for Mr. Loewengard. The latter is in Ludlow Street Jail, having been arrested on the 22d inst., on his arrival here from Europe, and is held awaiting extradition proceedings. It was stated that he had failed in Cologne, and that his debts exceed his assets by 200,000 marks. The attachment was served on a banking firm here to attach a draft.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Week of Increased Activity in Nearly Every Class of Property.

TWO SALES ON FIFTH AVENUE

For those who have predicted, or at least hoped for, a period of livelier dealing in real estate the business of the last few days, even with its holiday interruption, has contained much that is encouraging. The sale of one Fifth Avenue corner and the practical closing of negotiations for the sale of another, a renewed activity in vacant property, and several purchases of apartment houses for investment have furnished for the week a diversity in the character of its dealings that is perhaps its best feature.

The names of the two buyers of the Fifth Avenue corners sold by the Barney-Sheldon syndicate are still withheld, but the sellers seem to regard it as a certainty that they have disposed of the properties, and with the formal signing of contracts within a day or two, identity of those who will undertake the improvement of these corners—at Thirty-fourth and Fifty-second Streets—will probably be made known. That the Knickerbocker Trust Company, of which Mr. Barney is President, will become the owner of the Thirty-fourth Street corner seems to be generally accepted, and an apartment structure, with banking rooms in its lower portion, is looked upon as the plan for its improvement. The sale of the Fifty-second Street corner as a site for a dwelling or dwellings has long been regarded as only a remote possibility, and that it will be the site of an apartment hotel has been regarded as the only logical alternative. Indeed, with the Langham just across the street, the projected building for the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Fifty-second Street can hardly be characterized as a radical departure from the neighborhood.

It has been in vacant property, however, that the dealings of the week have shown the most marked improvement. As the result of transactions of this class, new apartment houses have been planned for the southwest corner of Broadway and Sixty-seventh Street, the southeast corner of Broadway and Ninety-fourth Street, the southwest corner of Central Park West and One Hundred and Seventh Street, and on the north side of Ninety-eighth Street, just west of West End Avenue. Significant also in this connection is the purchase by Peter Herter of the large plot formerly owned by the estate of Wallace C. Andrews and having frontages on Fifty-eighth and Fifty-ninth Streets and Park Avenue. Alexander McDowell bought from the Mannin estate the southwest corner of Eighth Avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-first Street—one of the few plots remaining unimproved on that thoroughfare north of One Hundred and Tenth Street. Of less immediate importance, perhaps, but none the less interesting, was J. M. Horton's purchase of the large tract included by Amsterdam Avenue, High Bridge Park, One Hundred and Eighty-sixth, and One Hundred and Eighty-eighth Streets.

Transactions affecting apartment house and dwelling property have kept pace with the market's improved tone in other directions. The Tecumtha property, at 219 and 221 West Thirty-fourth Street, passed into the hands of an investor, as also the new apartment structure at 8 West Ninety-second Street and the New Windsor, at 294 Central Park West. F. W. Vanderbilt's purchase of 40 East Fiftieth Street as a wedding gift for his niece, Miss Daisy Post, headed a creditable list of sales of residential property, which also included 41 West Seventy-second Street, 3 West Seventy-fifth Street, 11 East Eighty-third Street, and 33 East Thirty-eighth Street.

The Auction Room.

The list of auction offerings for this week, both in point of length and in variety, is the best of the Fall season so far. Almost every class of property and many different sections of the city are represented in the schedule. Wednesday promises to be an unusually interesting day at 111 Broadway, and, indeed, it is seldom that such high-class properties as those belonging to the Farley estate at the southeast corner of Columbus Avenue and Seventy-second Street and Columbus Avenue and Seventy-seventh Street find their way into the auction room.

But entirely aside from these, there are numerous other partition and voluntary offerings of the sort that usually bring out the liveliest competition. On Tuesday Auctioneer Ryan will sell the three apartment houses at the northeast corner of Madison Avenue and One Hundred and Seventeenth Street, while another announcement of interest to east side operators has to do with 29 to 35 East Broadway and properties on Henry and Market Streets. A partition sale to be conducted on the same day by James L. Wells involves several small parcels on Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth Streets, near Third Avenue, 515 First Avenue, and 1,271 and 1,273 Third Avenue, northwest corner of Seventy-third Street.

There were recorded last week 200 mortgages, for $2,607,139; of which 72, for $693,714, were at 5 per cent.; 83, for $1,023,325, were at 6 per cent., and 45, for $920,000, were at less. In the corresponding week last year there were recorded 303 mortgages, for $3,894,490; of which 115, for $1,285,960, were at 5 per cent.; 121, for $1,127,510, were at 6 per cent., and 72, for $1,472,020, were at less.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

In the following list "mtg." stands for mortgage and "R S" for revenue stamps. The war revenue law provides that stamps shall be placed on all conveyances at the rate of 50 cents for each $500 of consideration. This "consideration" has been held to mean only the equity above the mortgage, except in the rare cases where the purchaser assumes payment of the mortgage. The amount of the mortgage plus 1,000 times the value of the revenue stamps on the conveyances should therefore show the true consideration:

BOY'S STORY OF KIDNAPPING.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Dec. 1.—Albert Thaband, the fourteen-year-old son of Dr. W. H. Thaband, formerly a dentist of this place, claims to have been kidnapped yesterday and taken to Manhattan by two men, who subsequently released him and gave him his fare to return home. The boy is a clerk in a real estate office here.

His story is that he was sent out yesterday about noon to put up some "To Let" notices on houses. On the street he was stopped by two men whom he had never seen before and who got into conversation with him. He says that one of the men kept looking at him in a peculiar manner, and after a time he felt as if he was under the influence of a hypnotist. The boy's condition when he returned home indicated that a drug had been administered to him, but he does not remember to have taken anything of the kind.

He says that the men took him on a trolley car as far as One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street, where they alighted and took him to a house, the locality of which he does not know. There they took him into a room and began to question him about his father, asking him if he knew his present whereabouts, Dr. Thaband, the father, was sued for divorce some time ago by his wife. The doctor brought a counter-suit, and the two cases were settled by the doctor getting the custody of the boy, while Mrs. Thaband was granted alimony. Since the settlement of the suit Dr. Thaband has left Mount Vernon. His brother, also a dentist, practices here.

According to the boy's story, he was kept locked up in the room from 3 o'clock in the afternoon till 10 o'clock at night. As he could not give the two men the desired information, they finally let him go, and gave him 5 cents to pay his fare on a trolley car to this city. The boy says that when he was left alone in the room and locked in he became hungry and thirsty and that he pounded vigorously on the door and shouted for assistance, but nobody came to help him.

Some of the friends of Dr. Thaband are of the opinion that Mrs. Thaband may know something about the alleged kidnapping of the boy. She does not now live in Mount Vernon.

MONEY ORDER BLANKS STOLEN.

BOSTON, Dec. 1.—Six hundred money-order blanks are missing from Sub-Station No. 9, Boston Post Office, and every Post Office in the country has been notified to be on the lookout for money orders stamped "Sub-Station, No. 9, Boston, Mass.," numbered from 2,201 to 2,800, inclusive.

At first it was thought the loss showed serious possibilities, as the blanks could have been drawn for amounts aggregating $60,000. The notice, however, makes it unlikely that a great amount will be realized by the thieves. The blanks were probably mislaid by somebody who didn't appreciate their value.

THE OLEOMARGARINE CASES.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 1.—Frank H. Platt of New York, representing P. D. Armour and the Armour Packing Company of Chicago, to-day moved before Justice Frank H. Hiscock to dismiss the actions brought by the State of New York to collect $2,000,000 penalties for the alleged illegal sale of oleomargarine in this State. The State was represented by Attorney General John C. Davies and Frederick C. Schraub, former Commissioner of Agriculture. The motion was upon the ground that nothing had been done in the prosecution of the action for three years, and that there was no intention to proceed.

Messrs. Davies and Schraub detailed to the court at length the history of the litigation and its difficulties. One of the principal difficulties in the way of continuance of the action is in the fact that the railroads claim to have destroyed books and vouchers upon which the State depends.

Mr. Platt called attention to the fact that during the progress of the litigation five lawyers and one Judge who figured in it died, and paraphrased the remark which he attributed to "the late Mr. Bryan," "The life of one American is worth all the oleomargarine in Chicago." The court took the papers.

League of Republican College Clubs.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1.—The convention of the League of Republican College Clubs ended to-day. These officers were elected: President—Harry Kirtland, Harvard; Vice Presidents—A. H. Maxwell, University of Nebraska; R. P. Cross, Leland Stanford University, California, and Madison Bell, Emory College, Oxford, Ga.; Secretary—Gaylord R. Hawkins, Princeton, and Treasurer E. B. Hamilton of the Illinois College. A letter of greeting was received from President McKinley. Resolutions indorsing the McKinley Administration were adopted.

Found Dead on a Haystack.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Dec. 1.—Some boys while hunting near Tuckahoe to-day came across the body of a young man lying on a haystack. Coroner Banning was notified and took charge of the body. Death was due to natural causes. To-night Mrs. Gertrude Biele of 14 South Fifteenth Avenue identified the body as that of her son, Robert, twenty-seven years old. Young Biele had just returned from the West, where he was employed building bridges. He was a Sergeant in the Two Hundred and Second Regiment during the Spanish-American war.

Dog Poisoner in a Village.

HICKSVILLE, L. I., Dec. 1.—Owners of dogs in this village are looking out just now for the person who has been poisoning dogs here for the last two weeks. A dozen or more animals have been killed by poisoned meat during the period. Some of the dogs poisoned were valuable animals. In some cases poisoned meat was thrown to the victims while they were chained in their kennels.

Alabama's New Governor in Office.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 1.—At noon to-day Gov. Joseph F. Johnston retired from the executive office. Owing to illness the new Governor, W. J. Samford, was unable to come to Montgomery for his inauguration. He took the oath of office two days ago in Opelika and to-day Mr. Johnston turned over the office to T. D. Samford, a son of the Governor and his private secretary.

Railroad Organizations to Unite.

NEWARK, Ohio, Dec. 1.—The purpose of the large meeting of railroad men to be held here to-morrow is said to be "for the good of the orders," meaning the Order of Railway Conductors, the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, Order of Railway Telegraphers, and the Order of Locomotive Engineers. It is said to be the purpose of the meeting to federate these organizations on the Baltimore and Ohio system.

A Tax Collectorship Still Vacant.

AMITYVILLE, L. I., Dec. 1.—At a special meeting of the Babylon Town Board, held here yesterday, an unsuccessful effort was made to elect a successor to Joshua H. Smalling, late Tax Collector. The board will meet again on Friday next and make another attempt to fill the office.

Sues Her Old Husband for Divorce.

George W. Pond, who is seventy-four years old and a resident of the Greenpoint section of Brooklyn, is defendant in a suit for divorce brought by his wife, Mary J. Pond, who sues on statutory grounds. Yesterday counsel for the plaintiff applied for alimony and counsel fee to Justice Smith in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn. Justice Smith reserved his decision. The defendant denied all the allegations of the plaintiff.

Mounted Policeman Thrown and Hurt.

Mounted Policeman Charles W. Stokum of the Parkville Station, Brooklyn, was painfully injured about the head yesterday afternoon while trying to stop a runaway horse attached to a wagon, on Ocean Parkway, near Avenue M. Stokum's horse stumbled and the rider was thrown. His left ear and eye were injured, and he also received a scalp wound. He went home, after being attended by an ambulance surgeon.

CHANGING MILES OF THE CITY'S SEWERS

LABOR UNDER ROOFS OF PIPES

The necessary sewer changes incident to the construction of the Rapid Transit Railroad are being prosecuted with quite as much activity at present as the work on the tunnel. Freezing weather will cause a necessary stoppage on certain parts of the tunnel work until next Spring, when, quoting the words of one of the division engineers, "the campaign will begin all along the line and will be wide open thenceforth." But regarding the sewer changes many of these must be done before tunnel building can begin, and therefore the work on this division of the subway will go on with all haste.

Calvin W. Hendrick, a well-known engineer, has charge of the sewer division of the rapid transit railway, and his work takes him over the entire line. He has a staff of thirty-five engineers and inspectors under him. Mr. Hendrick was asked yesterday to give the general features of the progress already made.

"The tunnel," said he, "splits New York for a distance of thirteen miles, necessitating changes of twelve and a half miles of sewers. The sewers are about the meanest things to fool with for the reason that if one is changed you may disturb another ten or twelve blocks away, and the closest engineering calculations are necessary not to throw the system out of gear. It might be likened to building a house of cards, where the greatest care is necessary in handling one not to bring the whole structure down.

"In the beginning of this work, a plan was evolved for Broadway, but the Supreme Court upset calculations on the original line on account of the debt limit, and then the Elm Street route was taken up and worked out. Our object first is to make the changes in the main, or trunk line sewers, and these we are working on now. We will take up the minor changes later, and reconstruction will go on for several years, but the whole system ought to be completed before the road is ready for traffic, and doubtless will be.

"The principal changes going on now are these; at One Hundred and Fifty-seventh Street, a four-foot circular sewer; at One Hundred and Forty-second Street, one of the same dimensions; at One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Street, a 3 by 2 foot sewer; at One Hundred and Tenth Street, a 6½-foot circular sewer; at One Hundred and Eighth Street, a 4-foot circular sewer; at Eighty-first Street, a 6-foot circular sewer; at Sixty-fifth Street, a 4 by 2.8 foot sewer; at Fifty-fourth Street and Broadway, one of the same dimensions.

"There are about starting changes in the system at the Circle and Broadway, and next week we will begin building sewers parallel to the tunnel along Broadway. The parallel sewers are taken down to the nearest available cross sewer, and there diverted, the object being to get the water away from the tunnel as quickly as possible.

"We have completed the lowering of sewers at Ninth, Tenth, Bleecker, and Mulberry Streets, and are at work on the large Canal Street sewer. This sewer runs for about a mile through Centre, Leonard, across and under Mulberry Park, Mulberry Street, Worth Street, under Chatham Square, Oliver Street, and out under old Pier 34, East River, with an end terminating in two wooden barrels built under the pier, a form of construction giving the best results where a sewer is run in that way into the river.

DIFFICULTIES IN CANAL STREET.

"The Canal Street sewer is one of the most difficult ones in the country to handle because of our having to build such a long conduit, it being over six feet below the ocean tide at Canal and Elm Streets. The old Canal Street sewer was built practically in horse-shoe shape. It had side walls six feet apart, with an arch thrown across. It was built over an old creek or canal and emptied into the North River. We of course could not follow the present route, as we could not get the sewerage under the railway. This, as you see, necessitated diverting the sewerage from the North to the East River along the route mentioned on Centre Street. It is worth noting that in building the new sewer we were so near the surface that we had a perfect roof of pipes above us, with electric tracks on one side and vaults on the other, all of which had to be satisfactorily arranged with regard to our sewers and satisfactorily also to the various companies concerned.

"When we reached Chatham Square, carrying the sewer on the correct grade, we were a little less than thirty-one feet below the surface. At this depth there is a fine running sand, very hard to handle. In this case an open trench was considered dangerous, as we had the elevated road columns and a number of difficult obstructions to take care of. We lowered a shaft in the centre of Chatham Square and started a tunnel from the two directions to both eight feet square. In this way we pass under old sewers, pipes, railways, elevated columns, and all obstructions without difficulty.

"On reaching Oliver Street the ground surface dropped so that we had to change the section from a six-and-one-half-foot circular brick to a sewer with side walls, roofed over with beams and what engineers call 'jack' arches, resembling a miniature of our tunnel. On this roof are replaced the ties for the girder rails of the Metropolitan Street Railway, and the pavement is laid between them. On reaching old Pier 34 the side of this sewer was so large that we divided it into two wooden barrel sewers, four and a half feet in diameter, supported on piles and extending to the extreme end of the pier.

"The Canal Street sewer drains 180 acres of the most densely populated district in the world, with an estimated population of 1,300 to the acre. This exceeds the most densely populated district in any section of any city in the world by about 500 persons to the acre.

"The One Hundred and Tenth Street sewer, along the northern boundary of Central Park, is another large one, draining 124 acres. It starts at One Hundred and Sixteenth Street, runs south under the sidewalk along Lenox Avenue, passing under the tunnel at One Hundred and Tenth Street at a depth of 22 feet; then it runs east along One Hundred and Tenth Street under the sidewalk to Fifth Avenue, at which point it strikes a large eight by twelve-foot sewer, two feet below mean high water. The intersection of this six-and-a-half-foot circular and the eight by twelve necessitated the construction of a bell-mouth arch thrown across both. It starts in the size of the old sewer, gradually spreading out until the arch extends over both of the new sewers at the far end. The span, a little over twenty feet in width, is reinforced with concrete and is built to stay.

"On the Bleecker Street sewer we found that building across Broadway in an open trench would interfere greatly with traffic, so we tunneled under the street, doing the work there entirely under ground. In the Twenty-second Street sewer we also found it necessary to tunnel under Second and Third Avenues. A difficulty also presented itself at West One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street and the railroad, where we found it necessary to cut in two a six-and-one-half-foot circular sewer, and then siphon it with two four-foot iron pipes, turning the flow into the Harlem River. Down at Pearl and Duane Streets we pass under the Rapid Transit Railway by two twenty-four-inch iron pipes imbedded in concrete, a construction that will endure indefinitely.

"Of course," Mr. Hendrick continued, "in a work of this kind some curious features here and there are noticed. Along Oliver Street, for instance, we found the skull of a man six feet below the tide level. Few New Yorkers know, I guess, that the tide rises back in here past Chatham Square and even to Worth Street."

AN ANCIENT WATER MAIN.

Mr. Hendrick exhibited a part of one of the water mains of the old Manhattan Water Company, with which Aaron Burr was connected, and which he has in his office as a souvenir. This was dug up in Centre Street, and is similar to other pipes thrown up along there during the past two or three months. The section is more complete than the others, having one end bound with an iron band and a spigot, sharpened at one end, and driven into the pipe. Several curious stones were also taken from the down-town excavations, one being like a rabbit's ear petrified.

Some of the old sewer construction goes to show how the work was done under contract. In some places rock which should have been excavated the full width of the trench was allowed to lap over the pipes. In one or two six-foot sewers it has been found that the circular brick, instead of comprising two rings of brick contained but one ring, and this resting on rock. The specifications required one foot of hard sand in rock excavations, upon which the sewer bottom rests; or, in other words, a one-foot clearance for sand or gravel. It was cheaper for the contractor to rest his foundation on rock. The Eighty-first Street sewer line, when uncovered, showed a perfect S, when it should have been a tangent. In other places the workman's shovel disclosed the fact that the invert of the sewer contained no mortar between the bricks, being "laid dry," as contractors say—a custom occasionally followed when the city Inspectors are not looking.

The uncovering of house connections with sewers has revealed a more deplorable than curious state of affairs in many instances, going to show that the wily plumber did slipshod work frequently, and charged for a first-class job. He simply made the connections by breaking into the sewer and sticking the house pipes through, allowing them to project into the flow, in some cases the pipes pointing up stream, when they should have pointed the other way. Pipes in all connections are supposed to be cut off flush. Where they project a back flow is caused, interfering with the stream, and frequently causing obstructions to lodge against the offending pipe. The result is trouble and added expenditure for the householder or the city, and a new job for the plumber or contractor.

Among the devices in the Sewer Division office for guarding against possible future litigation or engineering disputes are the system of photography and the profile maps. As the work progresses each step is shown. In the profile maps, according to Mr. Hendrick, everything is shown that is found under the street or that is put in, and in its exact location.

NEW PIPE GALLERY PLANS.

Proposed Amendment to Rapid Transit Act to Provide for Their Construction Throughout the Line.

The resolution passed last week by the Rapid Transit Commissioners abandoning the pipe galleries in Elm Street and apparently giving up the whole project was but preliminary to taking up the more comprehensive plan of building galleries for the whole line of railroad. In view of the opposition by the city authorities and the prospect of a controversy with the contractor, John B. McDonald, and the Rapid Transit Subway Construction Company over the interest charges, the Commissioners took that means to clear away the existing difficulties. All are as much in favor now of building the galleries as they ever were, and at the next meeting of the board the subject will be brought up afresh, with a view to having a bill introduced into the Legislature, probably next month, amending the Rapid Transit act and providing for gallery construction throughout the line.

Controller Coler said last night that he would agitate the preparation of a bill, and he believed that it would be introduced soon after the Legislature assembles. Considering that Edward M. Shepard has said that it is within the jurisdiction of the Board of Public Improvements to take steps for continuing the galleries, Mr. Coler may also present the question to that body at its next meeting, on Wednesday. He believes also that it may be arranged so that the city shall relieve the contractor of the interest charges on construction.

At the Rapid Transit Commission meeting on Thursday, Chief Engineer Parsons will in all probability be instructed to prepare an estimate for installing the galleries along the system. It has been said that the cost would not be over $1,500,000, but this estimate is purely tentative. The galleries will not cost less than that sum, and will likely require a much greater outlay. Mr. Parsons has not as yet named even a speculative figure, and it will be several weeks before the engineer's figures will be ready.

Ever since Mr. McDonald voiced his objections in a letter to the commission, it has been considered an odd circumstance in many quarters that both he and the construction company of which August Belmont is the President should have overlooked the prospect of having to pay interest charges on the galleries in Elm Street for the period of the present contract. The question has been frequently asked why this was not considered before the extra work was taken up and the Degnon-McLean Company allowed to expend over $50,000.

Controller Coler does not think that the objections raised were meant to precede the springing of a private enterprise for the building and maintenance of galleries upon the community.

"It would be a shame to abandon the project now," he said, "and I am sure that every member is as anxious to see the galleries built as he ever was. I am going to do my best to have a bill for amendment passed, and I believe there is no doubt but that it will go through. The great value of galleries has been demonstrated, and it seems scarcely credible that the enterprise will be dropped."

SAID TO BE MR. BRYAN'S CANE.

Report that One Exhibited in a Saloon Was Presented to Him by a Church.

The Rev. Gustave Sommer, pastor of St. Matthew's German Lutheran Church, in North Fifth Street, Brooklyn, is going to visit a saloon in Manhattan this week to find out if a cane presented by the church to William J. Bryan is on exhibition there. If it is found that Mr. Bryan gave the cane to "Len" H. Wager, now the proprietor of a saloon on Broadway, who is Sergeant at Arms of the Democratic State Committee, a meeting of the Brooklyn congregation will be held to denounce Mr. Bryan.

During the past week an expensive gold-headed walking stick, purporting to be the one in question, has been on exhibition in Wager's place. He proudly said that Mr. Bryan had made him a present of it. Yesterday, however, it was said that the cane was not the one presented to Mr. Bryan, but a clever imitation.

The presentation of the cane to Mr. Bryan took place in the Hoffman House, amid much pomp. A delegation of members of the Brooklyn church told Mr. Bryan how popular he was in Brooklyn, and that at a church fair more votes had been cast for him for President than for any other candidate. Mr. Bryan replied that if he worked as hard for the next three years as he had during the past four years, he would need all the canes presented to him by friends.

It is said that soon after Mr. Bryan received the cane from the Brooklyn church he presented it to Sergeant at Arms Wager as a keepsake. A week after Mr. Wager became the proprietor of a saloon, and the cane was placed on exhibition.

Union Church to be Dedicated.

The new Union Methodist Episcopal Church at Leonard and Conselyea Streets, Brooklyn, will be dedicated to-day. Services will be held morning, afternoon, and evening, and will continue through the week. At the dedicatory services Presiding Elder Montgomery will officiate, and the Rev. J. M. Buckley will deliver the sermon. In the afternoon there will be a layman's meeting, and in the evening the sermon will be preached by Elder Montgomery. The Union Methodist Episcopal Church Society is composed of the former members of the Powers Street Methodist Episcopal Church and the Leonard Street Methodist Episcopal Church.

Portraits of Jurists Unveiled.

Portraits of the late Chancellor Alexander T. McGill and the late Supreme Court Justice Job H. Lippincott were unveiled yesterday in the Hudson County Supreme Court room, at Jersey City. Supreme Court Justice Gilbert Collins presided. The portraits were the gift of the Hudson County Bar Association, and were formally presented by ex-Judge William T. Hoffman, who made a speech eulogizing the dead jurists. The other speakers were ex-Judge Otto Crouse and William Dougherty.

Hungarian Peasant Ball.

The preliminary arrangements for the Hungarian peasant ball at Madison Square Garden on Jan. 4 are almost completed. There will be scores of "Csikos" (Hungarian cowboys) and hussars on horseback and pretty girls in national Hungarian costumes. The national dances, such as csardas, magyar-kor, Palotas, friss, and lassu, will be danced.

MERITS OF THE POLICE

Women Listen to His Reply to Critics of the Department—Favors Single Commission.

Bernard J. York, President of the Police Board, told the League for Political Education something about the Police Department yesterday morning. The women of the league have been hearing about the various city departments in a series of lectures under the general title of "Civic Interests of New York," and Mr. York's address was one of the series.

Mr. York said that it was a new departure for him to address an assemblage of women at 11 o'clock in the morning, and that afternoon teas were also not in his line, as he was a very busy man. Then he made the following statement:

"There are certain reported abuses in the Police Department which I imagine some of you would like to have me talk about, but I am not going to even touch on them. I shall confine my remarks solely to the work done by the force."

There was a chorus of suppressed "Ohs" when Mr. York made this announcement that told of his hearers' disappointment. One woman in the rear of the hall promptly fell asleep, only waking in time to ask a few questions of the speaker when he had concluded his address.

Mr. York told of the formation of the department, and defined the responsibilities resting on the various officers and the heads of divisions. "The Chief of Police," he said, "has a power as great, if not greater, than that vested in any member of the board.

"Whatever the public may say," he continued, "the police force of New York is the finest in the world. Their acts of heroism are greater than any one has an idea of. There has never yet been substantiated one charge of cowardice against any member of the force. I know of the interest in this department, but instead of being interested to the extent of rendering homage to the men and thanking them for the work they are continually doing, there is rather a spirit of criticism and blame for what it is claimed they do not do."

Mr. York instanced, as showing the mobility of the force, the manner in which the department was handled during the Brooklyn and New York street car strikes. He also instanced the Windsor Hotel fire and other disasters as bringing to the surface the courage which inspires some of the men.

"The charge is made that the men are brutal," said Mr. York, "but I am inclined to believe that the critics are too humane, and that it is not the policeman who is at fault. You put a policeman on the street to preserve order, and you must allow him some discretion, and also take into consideration the conditions under which he is working. Clubs are in their hands to be used, and guns are in their pockets, also to be used in cases of necessity. I am sure that neither are used except in cases where the necessity for their employment arises.

"When complaints are made against the members of the force the other side should be considered. The complaining persons should remember the many charities and good deeds of the men, and even of the poor Commissioners, usually held up as horrible examples. Even they have their good side.

"There has been at times some talk of invoking the military arm of the Government to quell disorder in the city. I want to say to you as positively as I can that the police force of this city never needs the military authorities to aid it. It can handle, and handle well, any emergency that may arise within the limits of its authority."

Then a fire of questions began, all of which Mr. York answered. In reply to one he said that if the civil service people had their way and were allowed to go on as they desired the detective force of the department might as well be abolished. In answer to a question as to whether he favored a single-headed commission, he said:

"Emphatically I do. I do not believe in placing the responsibility on a man unless he is given at the same time entire control of that for which he is responsible."

Miss Adele M. Field, who presided at the meeting, proposed a vote of thanks to Commissioner York, which was given with much enthusiasm.

AGED TWINS PARALYZED.

Sisters Had Worked to Support One Another as Long as They Were Able.

Mary and Johanna O'Leary, twins, seventy years old, were admitted to Bellevue Hospital last evening suffering from paralysis. They were taken from a small room on the top floor of 252 Avenue A, where they had made their home for seven years. They were so weakened by illness and lack of nourishment that they could scarcely speak.

The twins, with a younger sister, Lizzie, came to this country from Ireland twenty years ago. They had some money, and worked at making women's hats. They lived comfortably for fifteen years. Then their money gave out, and they became too old to work. On Thanksgiving Day two years ago the twins were stricken with paralysis within an hour of each other. They were placed side by side in a bed. Lizzie worked to get money to buy them food. She died six months ago, and Johanna recovered the partial use of her limbs, so that she was able by making hats to support her bed-ridden sister. She again became helpless on Wednesday. Dr. Barclay, who took them to the hospital, tried to have them sent to the same ward, but this was impracticable. The twins wept when they found that they were to be separated for the first time.

CARPENTERS DEMAND $4 A DAY.

Contractor Gallagher, It Is Said, Did Not Pay the Prevailing Rate.

The prevailing rate of wages law is being tested in proceedings brought before the Board of Education on behalf of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners against P. J. Gallagher, the contractor of Public School No. 119, Eighth Avenue, between One Hundred and Thirty-third and One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Streets. It is alleged that the contractor has been paying the carpenters $3.50 a day, and that the prevailing rate, or union rate, is $4 a day.

The Board of Education appointed a committee of five to hear evidence. Twenty-five witnesses were examined. The carpenters produced evidence to show that $4 had been the prevailing rate since the law was passed.

The Secretary of the Master Carpenters' Association thought $4 a day was higher than the prevailing rate, but admitted that he paid his carpenters that sum and probably nine-tenths of the 200 members of the association paid the same rate. If the decision is favorable to the union, the carpenters will demand back pay for all of the time they have been at work on the building.

Garment Workers' Initiation Fee.

The United Garment Workers of America have decided by a popular vote to have no initiation fee higher than $5, which will permit competent workers who have been barred out by the previous high rate to join the union. The Cloakmakers' Union has called a mass meeting for this week to arrange for organizing on a new basis. There are 16,000 cloakmakers on Manhattan Island, less than half of whom are organized.

Feeney Again Seeks Appointment.

Edward Feeney, who was a member of the State Board of Arbitration and Mediation between 1893 and 1896, is again in the field as a candidate for Arbitration Commissioner in place of Francis B. Delehanty, who has been elected City Court Judge. Mr. Feeney has sent a petition to all the labor organizations, asking for their support.

Cercle de l'Harmonie Ball.

Arrangements for the thirty-sixth annual ball of the Cercle Française de l'Harmonie at Madison Square Garden Tuesday evening, Jan. 8, are progressing smoothly. The ballet of 300 will be gorgeous and impressive. The grand march will represent the gods and goddesses of ancient mythology and modern mirth. Two bands of 150 musicians under the direction of Max Schwab and Fanciulli will furnish the music.

THE WILL OF R. G. DUN

According to the will of R. G. Dun, the petition for the probate of which was filed yesterday, the business of the Dun Mercantile Agency will be continued by Trustees during the life of the testator's widow, Mary B. Dun. Those who are to derive the benefits of the business for this time are Mrs. Dun, the children of Mr. Dun's deceased sister, Elizabeth Douglass; his living sister, Mrs. James, and, after her death, her children.

In charge of the same Trustees, for the same time and purpose, is left the Dun Building, at 290 Broadway. The Trustees are Mrs. Mary B. Dun, Robert Dun Douglass, Francis L. Minton, and Walter D. Buchanan.

The testator's residences at Narragansett Pier and at 261 Madison Avenue, with their contents, are left to Mrs. Dun, to whom is also bequeathed the income of a trust fund of $500,000. Other bequests are as follows: To the testator's sister, Mrs. Lugsdin, $100,000; to the Presbyterian Hospital, St. Luke's Hospital, Mount Sinai Hospital, and the New York Institution for the Instruction of the Deaf and Dumb, $5,000 each; to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, subject to a life interest vested in the widow, twenty-five paintings.

The total estimated value of the estate is $2,000,000. Mrs. James, her children, and the children of Mrs. Douglass are residuary legatees both of the estate now to be distributed and of the estate to be distributed at the termination of the trusts.

Among the twenty-five paintings left to the Metropolitan Museum of Art are some very valuable ones. The most beautiful of them all is "The Marsh," by Daubigny, which is approximately worth $40,000. It was painted about 1858 and is noted among artists for its rich green colors. A prominent art dealer of Fifth Avenue said yesterday that this work was as fine as anything ever done by Daubigny.

Another of the pictures is "The Admiration of Cupid," by Bouguereau. This was in the Paris Salon of 1899. The artist sold it to Mr. Dun, reserving the right to exhibit it at the Paris Exposition, where it received much favorable comment from the critics. In the collection is also Rousseau's "Pasture Bordered by Trees," a charming picture. The work of Bouguereau is valued at $15,000, that of Rousseau at $25,000.

There are two paintings by Rosa Bonheur in the list. One of them is "The Cow and Bull," which was in the Salon of 1849. The other is "Calf and Cow," a picture of the Scotch Highlands, dated 1876. Mr. Dun bought this picture from the collection of Mrs. Mary J. Morgan on March 3, 1886, for $12,200.

Besides those already named, the best-known pictures in the collection are a landscape by Cazin, a portrait of himself by Benjamin Constant, "Shepherd and Sheep" by Troyon, "Stick Dance" by Gérôme, "The Hermitage" by Paul Potter, a portrait by Sir Joshua Reynolds, "Scene in Normandy," by Auguste Bonheur, a landscape by Daubigny, and another by Corot.

The remainder of the collection contains the following: "The Surprise" by Meyer von Bremen, "The Wedding Party" by Firmin Gerard, "Maternal Affection" by Gabriel Max, "Cats" by Lambert, "Cattle" by Brascassat, "Clover Fields" by Monchablon, "The Ferry" by Veyrasset, "Rustic Merrymaking" by David Col, "A Battle Scene" by Sirgreate, "The Cavalier" by Lesrel, and "Cattle" by Van Marcke.

The officials of the museum had not heard of the bequest until yesterday afternoon. Gen. Louis P. Di Cesnola, Secretary of the museum, and George H. Story, curator of the department in which paintings are exhibited, read over the list and expressed themselves as delighted with the prospect of having the collection. They said that they were not familiar with the particular pictures, but that the names of the artists showed all of them to be of great value.

LEGAL NOTES.

CONSTRUCTION OF WILL.—The Court of Appeals a few days ago decided against the determination of the Appellate Division, that Robert E. Dunham was entitled to an annuity of $300 from the estate of his father-in-law, John F. J. De Raismes. Justice Russell, about a year ago, in Dunham's suit against John A. De Raismes and others, to enforce payment of the annuity, gave judgment in his favor. Mr. J. F. J. De Raismes, who left a large fortune in realty and personalty, bequeathed to his wife, besides household furniture, an annuity of $4,800 during her life, out of the rents and profits of his improved real estate in this city, and also left her his farm and appurtenances during her life, for a home for herself and infant children. The remainder of the property was given to his children and grandchildren. To Mr. Dunham, the plaintiff, was given an annuity of $300 during his life. When the testator's son, Francis J. J. De Raismes, became of age, the residuary estate was directed by the testator to be divided between his children and grandchildren. Mr. Dunham was named as one of the executors of the will, but was removed before the time arrived for division of the property. The payment of the annuity to him was resisted by the defendants, on the ground that the property of which the testator died seized, consisted of real estate devised subject to the payment of the annuity to his wife, children, and grandchildren, and that the annuity to plaintiff was not made a charge upon the real estate subsequent to the time the son, Francis J. J. De Raismes, arrived at the age of twenty-one years. Justice Russell said the personalty, the rents and profits, and the realty were so blended in the will, construed as a whole, that it was apparent that the testator did not intend the residuary legatees and devisees to receive the shares going to them except as distributions remaining after the specific purposes of the will were accomplished. The Appellate Division in this city, in an opinion by Justice Rumsey, reversed the judgment of the Special Term, holding it was improper, so far as it compelled payment of the annuity out of the personal estate, and that in any event the annuity was only to be paid out of the rents and profits of the real estate until the youngest son should become of age. The Court of Appeals has now reversed the Appellate Division, and affirmed, with slight modification, the judgment of the Special Term.

RESPONSIBILITY OF WAREHOUSEMEN.—Julius and Bernard Lichtenstein recovered a judgment, which has now been sustained by the Court of Appeals, in their suit against Robert M. Jarvis and another to recover the value of nine bales of tobacco which they had stored at the bonded warehouse of the defendants. The main defense was that any merchandise deposited or stored in the warehouse by the plaintiffs was at their sole risk and expense. It appeared that plaintiffs had stored in 1893 several hundred bales of leaf tobacco in the warehouse, and that in January, 1894, it was discovered that nine bales were missing. The warehouse was in the custody and control of the Government as well as of the defendants. Each door was secured by two locks, the key of one lock being retained by the Government and the key of the other by the warehousemen. The Court held that the disappearance of the tobacco was not so explained as to excuse the bailees for their failure to deliver the property by evidence that shortly before the loss of the bales was ascertained it was discovered that the Government lock was missing from the door of the cellar where the bales had been placed, and that the warehousemen's lock on such door, although in position, was bruised and battered and could not be unlocked with its key, where there was no further evidence to show that the cellar had been forcibly entered, or that a robbery had been committed, none of the other bales stored there having disappeared. The Court of Appeals, in unanimously directing an affirmance, adopted the opinion of the Appellate Division, given by Presiding Justice Van Brunt.

CREDIT INSURANCE.—Hugo Jaeckel recovered judgment on the trial, before a referee, of his action upon a policy of credit insurance, to the extent of $15,000, issued by the American Credit Indemnity Company of New York. By the terms of the policy, the first losses, up to $3,750, were to be borne by the party indemnified before any claim could be made against the company; and "proof of loss must be made within twenty days after knowledge of the insolvency of any debtor shall have been received by the indemnified, otherwise such claim shall be barred." Judgment rendered on the decision of the referee, for $1,904, in favor of the plaintiff, was reduced by the Appellate Division, (31 App. Div. 565,) in an opinion by Justice O'Brien, nearly one-half. The Court held that the company was entitled to notice of a loss, although such loss be included in the sum which must be borne by the party indemnified, and if such notice be not given, a claim therefor could not be considered in the settlement of the company's liability. The policy contained a provision that "final proof of loss shall be forwarded to the central office of this company, * * * and the amount due by this company, under final proof of loss shall be adjusted and paid within sixty days after the receipt by the company of such final proof of loss." Under this provision the company, it was held, was not entitled to deduct from the amount to be paid by different payments made by the debtors within the sixty days on account of indebtedness included in such final proof of loss, especially where the policy contained the condition that "no loss can be proved after the expiration of this bond." The Court of Appeals has unanimously affirmed the judgment of the Appellate Division.

AFRICAN EXPLORER RETURNS.

Dr. A. Donaldson Smith Describes His Travels Among Cannibals—Newly Discovered Mammalia.

Dr. A. Donaldson Smith of Philadelphia, the African explorer, was among the arrivals on the American liner St. Louis last night. He returns from his second tour of exploration in the interior of Africa. Referring to his tour and the results achieved Dr. Smith said:

"In 1894 and 1895 I explored the Lake Rudolf region. This time I took a different course, exploring the country between the lake and the Nile, a hitherto unexplored region. The party or caravan consisted of fifty natives and one Scotch taxidermist. The tribes we encountered were not hostile, as in the case of the former expedition. Among the results this time was the discovery of four new species of mammalia, all of the antelope order. They were peculiar in regard to their markings and horns.

"The tribes we met with along the Nile were cannibals. A striking peculiarity of the different tribes is their absolute independence of each other. Two or three tribes often live in the same neighborhood, yet are unable to understand each other's dialect. The dialects were all strange to me, and I had no conversations with them."

Dr. Smith contracted the African fever, and on his return to Europe spent two months in Switzerland recuperating. Two weeks ago he lectured on his travels before the Royal Geographical Society in London. He will lecture before the Geographical Society in Philadelphia on the 2d of January.

Off to Buy Polar Equipment.

Evelyn Baldwin, Commandant of the Baldwin-Zeigler polar expedition, sailed for Europe on the Cunard liner Campania yesterday. His object in going abroad is to purchase the equipment for the polar expedition that is to be undertaken next year. He will return to this country early in January.

THE BOERS' FLIGHT FROM KOMATI POORT

Up to the Last Moment a Desperate Battle Was Expected There.

But When the British Arrived the Town Was Deserted—The Fine Bridge Not Destroyed.

LORENZO MARQUES, Nov. 10.—During what are now regarded as the final stages of the war the excitement in Lorenzo Marques, though it is at least nominally a neutral port, has been intense. The arrival of President Krüger here, the flight of the heads of the Transvaal Executive into Portuguese territory, and of the Boer forces from Machadodorp, Nelspruit, and other centres, (which it had been thought they would be able to occupy for some months yet,) burning or destroying everything in the shape of provisions, railway material, ammunition, &c., that they were unable to carry with them, gave rise to so many and conflicting rumors that, to be able to obtain information in any way reliable a journey to the scene of operations became absolutely necessary.

The general belief at the Portuguese port was that one of the most hotly contested fights of the whole campaign had taken place at Komati Poort, the British ultimately coming into possession of nothing more than a heap of smoldering ruins, and that the Boers were making a last desperate stand on the Portuguese side of the river. The railway station at Lorenzo Marques presented an appearance that gave some color to this belief. A military train was drawn up at the passenger platform, and, amid much bustle and altogether unmilitary confusion, the Portuguese troops were entraining with unwonted activity. The departure of the special train was delayed somewhat by the drivers having to wait (owing to the single line) the arrival of an ambulance train which, filled with wounded, presently drew up alongside. Before inquiries could be made the special train was off.

That at least Komati Poort had been destroyed seemed highly probable when, after proceeding a few miles, the special passed a train of extreme length, containing, apparently, some hundreds of refugees, with their household goods on board. Pots, pans, chairs, and children, tables and chickens, carpets and men, bird cages and women, all seemed mixed up in inextricable confusion. A second but somewhat smaller train, loaded in like manner, was passed later, but in neither case was there any opportunity of eliciting any information, the special going full speed ahead.

The border town of Resano Garcia was reached in the record time of one hour and fifty minutes after leaving Delagoa Bay. It was then found that the many rumors afloat at the port were for the most part without foundation. There was and had been no fighting in the Portuguese territory. The trains of refugees were Netherlands Railway officials and their families, who had been gathering at Komati Poort as station after station fell into British hands, and who for several days past had been living in the train at Resano Garcia, and, following the example of the leading officials of the South African Republic, making themselves as comfortable in these peripatetic apartments as circumstances would permit.

But over the usually sleepy little Portuguese border town of Resano Garcia had come a great change. The railway platform was in charge of an infantry guard, and the entrance to the station was guarded by two little vicious-looking machine guns. Mounted dragoons patrolled in every direction. Bugles sounded almost every instant. Guards were mounted and changed at half a dozen points at once. Street watch was kept where the railway line crossed the border.

PREPARATIONS FOR DEFENSE.

At Komati Poort it was discovered that the British were not yet in sight, but the Boers were actively engaged and threatened them with a warm reception on their arrival. Between Resano Garcia and Komati Poort all trains had been stopped, and throughout the day trollies were being pushed to and fro by Kafirs and piled as high as safety would permit. People were clearing out as fast as they could possibly remove their belongings, being in hourly dread of hearing the British guns trained on the town. Preparations were all complete for blowing up the splendid bridge as soon as the British were in sight. Two Long Toms were in position on the hill just below the junction of the Komati and Crocodile Rivers, and there was another large gun on a rise about a mile southwest from the junction of the rivers, the distance between the two positions being a little over two miles.

It was evident that Resano Garcia would be almost in the direct line of the British fire, and that should the British miscalculate the distance, a few stray shots must inevitably wander that way. The French distillery company people at Resano Garcia had mounted their national flag on the building, but neither this nor the Portuguese flag on the guardhouse could be seen from the spot where the British attack was likely to be made.

Many of the Boers were quietly leaving the lines and going off by the special trains, two or three of which left Resano Garcia every day for Lorenzo Marques. Two Boers, instead of boldly crossing the border by way of the bridge, made their way down the left bank of the river and started to cross by the ford below the town. One was seized by a crocodile, and his awful screams roused the whole population. Before assistance could reach him his companion was similarly captured, and when a number of people arrived on the scene all trace of crocodiles and men had disappeared.

BOERS EXPECTED INTERVENTION.

From the top of a high hill on the extreme boundary of the Transvaal a position was obtained that commanded a view of the whole country from the frontier to the hills around Knapmulden. A party of Boers encountered here explained that they were searching for a position for their guns, but were unable to find any place with sufficient cover. They were entirely in the dark as to passing events, and asked eagerly for news of the outside world. One was naturally curious to know whether they saw that their cause was now hopeless and to ascertain their opinion of their present position. It was evident that they expected intervention, and when it was pointed out that there was no chance of this, one who spoke English well replied that he knew what was behind and that he trusted in God to see the right prevail at last.

From the frontier hill Komati Poort appeared absolutely deserted; the only signs of life were about the railway station. Steam was being got up on several of the locomotives, probably with the intention of removing all stores to the east side of the river, and, according to Boer reports, as soon as this was accomplished the splendid bridge was to be blown up, an act of vandalism which is said to have been proposed by the Irish-Americans and a Natal renegade.

The destruction of the bridge at Komati Poort would have meant the practical stoppage of all business at Lorenzo Marques for some months to come, and the Governor General of Delagoa is alleged to have made strenuous endeavors to induce the Boers not to sacrifice this valuable property, and succeeded in extracting a promise from the Boer leaders that they would make an effort to save the bridge. This, however, only transpired later. As a result, this fine structure still spans the Komati River.

Several days were wasted in the district of Komati Poort awaiting events. At last a party of Boers was seen to come along as fast as their horses could carry them from the direction of Orsproong. On reaching Komati Poort some of them got on an engine and came full speed across the bridge, apparently for the purpose of holding a council of war at a house close by which seemed to be used as their headquarters. The result was evidently an order to retreat, for very shortly afterward a train of open trucks came along, into which were loaded some machine guns that were in position along the line, a large quantity of stores, and several hundred men. The train then returned to Komati Poort, and from it the loading of six or eight wagons was completed. These wagons, with their escort, trekked off to the north by the road along the Selati Railway line. At the same time the pickets from the outlying ridges on the west side of the Crocodile River were withdrawn, which plainly meant that the beginning of the end had arrived, and that that portion of the Boer army was in full retreat.

The following day faint reverberations were heard from the north, and by noon the booming of heavy guns was quite distinguishable, from which it was evident that an action was taking place in the direction the wagons had taken the previous afternoon. Apparently the Boers who were attempting to get away to the north had been met by an opposing force. Late the same afternoon a skirmish took place between a British scouting party and a Boer outpost on the Komati River, about two miles above the town. This had the effect of clearing out the last inhabitants from Komati Poort, who all came to the southeast side of the river in a long train which for several days past had been waiting to receive them.

FALSE ALARM OF A BATTLE.

The next (Sunday) morning opened calm and bright. Far across the plain not a sign could be seen of either of the opposing parties. But suddenly right beneath the onlookers' feet there was a roar and a scream, and the first shell had left Long Tom to commence the battle of Komati Poort. The shell appeared to fall close to the engine sheds above the station, and set a small building on fire. The first thought of the onlookers was that they were almost directly in the line of fire, should the shot be returned, although the Boer battery was some 500 feet below them. But after waiting and watching for a considerable time it was somewhat of a relief, but at the same time disappointing, to find that no reply was forthcoming. Nevertheless, it seemed that the action was about to commence, as the ambulance train came slowly out from the Boer camp, crossed the bridge, and entered the station at Komati Poort, apparently for the purpose of bringing back the wounded. Presently, however, several men got out from the ambulance and commenced setting fire to the station buildings and the wagons. In this work of destruction they were engaged for about two hours. They then re-entered the train, and leisurely returned to the Boer camp.

As soon as they recrossed the bridge a sharp rifle fire commenced, and now it was thought surely the long-expected fight had begun. The immense clouds of smoke prevented anything from being seen, but, judging from the sound, several thousand men must have been engaged, and just then the second Long Tom went off with a mighty sound that actually shook the hill. Still not a soul could be seen. Then it began to be realized that instead of a big battle being forward it was the Boers destroying their ammunition and stores.

A very pathetic scene waa witnessed at the frontier on the Sunday morning. This was the laying down of their arms by the Boer Generals and their men. In many cases the veterans appeared with tears in their eyes, and it was impossible not to feel what a terribly hard fate was theirs. They had fought a hard fight, believing in the justice of their cause, and they were now compelled to leave their country by the back door, with the thought in their hearts that they would have no country to return to. The younger men, or at any rate most of them, seemed quite callous; on their faces of many was an expression of positive relief. Probably a thousand rifles were collected by the Portuguese Frontier Guard, together with many wagon loads of bandoliers, saddles, and accoutrements.

THE BRITISH ARRIVE.

On the following morning the only things to be seen in Komati Poort were a small boy and a dog. This was at sunrise. But an hour or so later a man in khaki suddenly appeared from behind one of the houses. A minute after another was seen, then two more, and a man riding a horse and leading others across the open space by the railway station. These were men of the Yorkshire Mounted Infantry, who for some hours held the town by themselves, visiting house by house and disarming the few Boers found lurking within. Then a small cloud of dust could be seen rising in the distance beyond Oorspron. Gradually out of the cloud the main body of the division was evolved. It was a magnificent sight to watch the deploying of the column, company after company, battalion after battalion, taking position on each side of the town, filling the town itself, and then lining the river. At 10 o'clock the first big gun passed the railway station, and a few minutes afterward a machine gun was placed in position to command the bridge. Then six men took their lives in their hands and crossed the bridge, not knowing from one moment to another but that they would be blown to atoms by the expected explosion, for it was well known that the bridge had been mined by the Boers, and it was thought that they would take the opportunity of blowing it up while the troops were upon it. But to the relief of all witnesses the little party got safely over and others soon followed.

A journey along the railway line gave evidence of the hasty departure of the Boers. Dozens of tents had been left standing, still furnished with chairs, tables, bedsteads, and in some cases, even the clocks were still hanging to the tent poles, and food was on the tables. By their hasty departure the Boers had left behind a repast which the British "Tommies" left to guard the line thoroughly enjoyed. But sterner evidences of war were soon met with. Thousands of Martini-Henry cartridges, with the murderous soft-nosed bullet; Mauser cartridges, cases for pom-pom shells, and a great number of Long Tom shells filled and ready to do their deadly work were to be seen. For nearly half a mile the line was strewn on both sides with coffee, sugar, and flour. Valuable telegraphic instruments, saddles, bridles, and a general miscellaneous assortment were scattered about in great quantities and confusion.

In the afternoon the British flag was hoisted in Komati Poort. W. S.

NO NEW SMALLPOX CASES.

Dr. Blauvelt Says People Have Learned the Importance of Vaccination.

Dr. Alonzo Blauvelt, Chief Inspector of the Board of Health, who has the fight against smallpox in charge, said last night that no new cases had been discovered.

"I do not look upon it as any more serious than previous outbreaks of this sort, which we have every once in a while," he said. "There may be a few cases of a secondary nature, as a result of persons having been exposed. But we do not look for any great trouble.

"Every precaution is being used, and many persons have been vaccinated. That, after all, is one of the advantages of these periodical scares. It awakens people to the importance of vaccination."

FUNERAL OF SENATOR DAVIS.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 1.—With the simplest of ceremonies the body of Cushman Kellogg Davis was placed in a receiving vault today in Oakland Cemetery. Owing to the advanced age of the dead statesman's parents, the services, conducted by the Rev. C. D Andrews and the Rev. T. W. Sedgwick, were held at the family residence in Farrington Avenue. Here were gathered prominent men from all parts of the country; nearly every member of the Minnesota Legislature; all State and city officials; committees from the United States Senate and House of Representatives, and hundreds of citizens of the Twin Cities.

At the conclusion of the services, the procession formed and followed the hearse over the snow-covered ground to Oakland Cemetery, where, after the reading of the committal service by Dr. Andrews, the casket was lowered into a receiving vault in the little chapel designed for temporary burial. The body will be interred later.

Magnificent tributes of flowers filled the parlors of the Davis home. President and Mrs. McKinley sent a beautiful wreath. An immense wreath of chrysanthemums overlaid with white roses and orchids was the token from the United States Senate, while quantities of American Beauty roses came from members of the House of Representatives, the State Assembly, and the Bar Association of Minnesota.

Ferryboat Capsizes, Four Men Drowned.

SPOKANE, Washington, Dec. 1.—Four lives were lost here last night by the capsizing of a ferryboat in the Spokane River. The ferry is about two miles down the river. All the passengers were thrown into the water. Five swam to shore and the others climbed on the capsized boat. The waves ran high and washed four of them off to their deaths.

CHICAGO'S REFORM WAVE

Indictments Found in Police Civil Service Frauds.

DEMOCRATS MAY BE DEFEATED

Many Believe This Is Harrison's Last Term—Attempt to Make a "Greater Chicago" Renewed.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—The first step in the punishment of the police civil service frauds has been reached in the indictment of three men by the Grand Jury. These are the two members of the "Chicago Credit Company" and an attorney. It was expected that the jury might also include in its indictment some city officials, but such was not the case, although it is thought that the next jury may do so. At any rate, the Merit Board has been successful in proving its case, and it has shown that the grossest irregularities have existed in the police examinations for some time and that in all probability scores, if not hundreds, of men have been put on the force with high marks who succeeded in getting advance copies of the questions and even attending a special school of instruction in order to coach up on the subjects.

It was also proved that there was a direct connection between a firm of loan "sharks" and the Police Department, some high officials of which are suspected of deriving profits from the suspension and reinstatement of policemen who were guilty of not paying their just debts. Some months ago an order was issued that all such men should be discharged until they had paid the claims. Nearly all of these men were indebted to a firm which had been advancing money on city employes' salaries at a big discount. After the order was in force no one was reinstated until he could produce a letter from the firm attesting that the debt had been settled. Letters from the firm to the Chief of Police and other officials have been reproduced, showing the connection which existed in this matter. It is certain that at least three officials of the department were directly interested in the settlement of these claims.

The exposure of the fraudulent issue of certificates in the merit examinations was likewise proved in spite of the obstacles thrown in the way of the investigators. The firm which sold the questions at $150 per set to Sergeants taking examination for Lieutenant's positions, even defied the Court which ordered it to produce its books. The matter as developed in the daily reports of the investigation has not been at all to the credit of the department, and the impression has gained ground that some of the principals have not yet been exposed.

Chief Kipley and Mayor Harrison have sought to make light of the scandal, but the proof has been so convincing that it is not unlikely, unless the examination is carried out thoroughly and the guilty ones punished, it will react upon the administration at the Spring election.

The Spring election, by the way, will prove whether or not the Harrison crowd has a "cinch" on the City and County Government. Many believe that this is Harrison's last term as Mayor, and that his successor will be the first of a series of Republicans in that office. No one ever entered upon the office with brighter prospects than Harrison did, but even some of his most enthusiastic supporters at that time now fear that he has wrecked his party forever in Chicago. In building up his party machine there has been a revengeful and grasping spirit shown without the public being benefited by adequate improvements. The city's finances have been badly managed and public works have been allowed to deteriorate in the most shameful way. Harrison has certainly alienated a great many of the independent voters who supported him during his two terms by his false pretenses of civil service reform and his winking at avoidance of the requirements of the Merit Board.

On the other hand, the Republicans have been strengthening their forces all along the line, and, although they did not entirely succeed in breaking the Democratic phalanx in November, they have made wonderful progress. They have several good candidates for Mayor at present, almost any one of whom would give Harrison a hard run. It appears, too, that the city Democratic crowd does not intend to allow Mr. Hopkins to become Chairman of the State Committee without a fight. They are naturally jealous of the phoenixlike rise of the ex-Mayor, and they fear that he will not be content with the control of State affairs, but will seek to resume his power in the City Government. If they oppose him on any score the Republicans will sweep the city from Austin to the Indiana State line, and Democratic power will be at end in Cook County for a long while.

The renewed attempt to make a "Greater Chicago," whose increased territorial limits would require the absorption of some or all of the Cook County towns now outside of the city, is meeting with considerable opposition. At a conference on the subject this last week a new county, or two new counties, or an amalgamation of the towns with Will, Du Page, or Lake Counties were the alternatives proposed by the opponents to the measure. The plan to consolidate township, county, and city government in Chicago by the union of taxing bodies met with general favor, but with the proviso that the towns now outside of Chicago be allowed to remain outside of the proposed consolidated County and City of Chicago. In fact, it was adopted as the sense of the meeting. The outside towns generally oppose the idea of becoming a part of Chicago. They see no particular advantage in it. On the contrary, they fear a closer contact with the disagreeable features of city life.

"The Levee," that picturesque but forbidding part of the city, is being crowded further and further to the south by the encroachments of business. Time was, and not so very long ago, either, when its northern confines abutted upon the Board of Trade Building. Now it is far from there, and will have to go still further. The printing interests were the first to push the tough district further east and south. Dearborn Street, which was a short time ago very disreputable, is now lined south to Polk with sky-scrapers devoted to the art preservative of all arts. And now Rand, McNally & Co., one of the largest firms in the country, proposes to lease from the School Board a large block of territory and erect thereon a huge establishment. If this is done, it will remove some of the worst resorts in that part of the city, and also settle the removal of the old Armory Police Station and court, which has been contemplated for a long while.

The Armory is the oldest and most characteristic building of the department, and about it cluster a thousand memories of the annals of crime and criminals. The "Levee" with which the Armory court is chiefly concerned has now been pushed as far south as Thirty-eighth and Dearborn Streets, and nearly as far south on State. It has none of the attractive features of New York's "Tenderloin" district, for it is for the most part squalid in its vice. It is not entirely without its picturesqueness, however. But business has cut into it from every side, and it is not continuous in its character along its whole length. It is hoped that these encroachments of business will root out the district altogether.

COPPER MINE TIED UP.

Union Pacific Claims Mineral Rights of the Copper King Mine.

CHEYENNE, Wyoming, Dec. 1.—An injunction has been granted the Union Pacific Railroad restraining the operators of the Copper King Mine, near Tie Siding, from removing ore or further interfering with the property. The question at issue involves the right of the Union Pacific Railroad Company to mineral deposits within the bounds of area granted to it by the Government.

The defendants base their claim to the property upon the reservation by the Government of all mineral lands granted to the Union Pacific or other railroad companies. The question involved is an important one, and will be watched with great interest by mining men.

STOCK TICKERS REMOVED

Stock Exchange Acts Against Several Brokerage Firms.

All Are Consolidated Exchange Concerns—No Explanation Offered, Protesting Brokers Say.

Acting under orders from the Governors of the Stock Exchange, Manager Drew of the Gold and Stock Telegraph Company on Friday evening, after the close of the day's business, removed the Stock Exchange tickers from the offices of a number of Consolidated Exchange houses. Among the firms from whose offices the tickers were removed are J. L. McLean & Co., 60 Broadway; Lewis A. May & Co., 31 Broadway, and C. W. Morgan & Co., 71 Broadway.

All information on the subject and the names of the firms involved were refused both at the Stock Exchange and the Gold and Stock Company's offices, the statement being made that the matter was purely a private affair. It is understood, however, that the reason given to the Gold Company, by the Stock Exchange Governors—who can order the tickers out whensoever they desire—was that the methods of the firms in question were regarded "as being detrimental to the best interests of Wall Street." Ordinarily this signifies that "bucketing" is done by the firms—that, in other words, no real selling or buying is done.

At the offices of the several concerns it was said in each case that no explanation had been offered for the removal of the tickers, and that it was done without justification.

Mr. May, the head of the firm of Lewis A. May & Co., said: "The action was a great surprise to us, and we cannot account for it. We have already made application to have the ticker replaced and we believe it will be, for our business is conducted in a legitimate way in every sense of the word."

At the office of C. W. Morgan & Co. a member of the firm said: "In my opinion it is simply an effort to down the Consolidated Exchange, because our Exchange is getting so much business. It looks like a renewal of the old fight, begun some five years ago, when so many tickers were taken out. The removal of our ticker was without notice or warrant, and we hope to have it back again in short order."

In the absence of Mr. McLean of J. L. McLean & Co. no official statement was forthcoming, but it was intimated that the head of the firm would appear before the Board of Governors of the Stock Exchange to protest against the action taken.

Discussing the matter, President Wagar of the Consolidated Exchange said: "I know only of what I have heard indirectly, and have had no official communication on the subject. I can say, however, that no complaints have been received against any of the firms mentioned and that no action has been taken against them by this Exchange."

It is common gossip in the Street that other tickers will be ordered out next week.

DENIES A HAZING STORY.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1.—Col. A. L. Mills, Superintendent of the West Point Military Academy, to-day denied that Oscar L. Boose of Bristol, Penn., a former West Point cadet, was harshly treated by the students at the academy. Boose is said to be at the point of death, and his family assert that his condition is the result of hazing, the claim being made that the other cadets poured tabasco sauce down his throat. Col. Mills said:

"The story that has been given out regarding Oscar Boose is a malicious libel and a most unjust attack upon the academy, its management, and the manly body of cadets who are there.

"A little while ago I had occasion to look up Boose's record, in response to a letter received from Doylestown, and found that he entered the academy June 20, 1898, and left again Oct. 21 of the same year. During that time he was on the sick list but once, and then he was excused from duty on account of an attack of stomach trouble. His excuse for leaving the academy was that his eyesight troubled him. Had he suffered with his throat while there, or had he gone through any sort of hazing that would have made him sick, the doctors at the academy would have known it, because the cadets are under the closest scrutiny."

Thief Secures $8,337 in Boston.

BOSTON, Dec. 1.—The residence of Mrs. Margaret A. Beck, on West Concord Street, was robbed of $8,337 last night, and Morris Arenburg, eighteen years of age, who had been employed at the house, is under arrest as one of the priciples in the robbery. The other man and the money have not yet been found. Arenburg told the police that his confederate was Joseph Bermann, twenty-five years old. Bermann is well known to the police of New York. Mrs. Beck drew the money from the bank for the purpose of making payments on real estate.

USE OF A PROCESS SERVER

MRS. WEIL'S SUIT FOR DIVORCE

Process servers are finding excitement in connection with the divorce case of May Evangeline Weil against Henry Goodman Weil, but they have served the papers upon the principal witnesses, who will appear when the case comes up for trial before Justice McAdam and a jury in the Supreme Court, on Wednesday. One of the witnesses is Mrs. Clarisse A. Reid, wife of President Daniel B. Reid of the American Tin Plate Company, who lives at the Hotel Netherland. Process Server McDonald, at the instance of Lawyer John Reilly of 205 Broadway, counsel for Mrs. Weil, went after her Thanksgiving Eve. He sent the card of a personal friend of the husband to their apartment, he said, with an urgent request for an interview downstairs. When he saw Mr. Reid leave the elevator he hurried up to the rooms. He told the woman who answered his knock on the door that he had a letter, which must be delivered immediately. He gave her a sealed envelope addressed to Mrs. Reid.

"This must be for you, Clarisse," said the woman, handing it to a companion, who proved to be Mrs. Reid. The envelope contained nothing but a blank sheet.

"What does this mean?" said Mrs. Reid, approaching McDonald. With a smile he said, "It means that I have these papers for you," and with a low bow he presented the subpœna. Mrs. Reid became greatly excited, and her husband, leaving the elevator, heard her outcry. He ran into the room as Mr. McDonald hurriedly left. Mr. Reid went down stairs after him, but by that time McDonald had reached the street.

The same man has been hunting for Mr. Weil, who lives at 439 Fifth Avenue, having as his roommate M. Warley Platzek, who is one of the Tammany Committee of Five on Municipal Purification. McDonald did not find him there, but served a paper upon him at the Waldorf-Astoria Friday night, after a long pursuit. The subpœna was of the "duces tecum" class, which required Mr. Weil to bring to court his check and bank books and personal accounts from which Mrs. Weil expects to gain evidence in support of her case.

The Weils were secretly married Jan. 22, 1898. Mrs. Weil was May E. Wood of Richmond, Va., an actress in one of Charles Frohman's companies. Mr. Weil, however, continued his bachelor life, and the marriage became public only when Mrs. Weil, wearying of her peculiar position, caused a marriage notice to be printed, the ancient date of which attracted the attention of the newspapers.

Mrs. Weil said that at the time of the ceremony her husband had promised to settle upon her a fund of $50,000, the interest of which only was to come to her, the principal to revert to her husband at her death. It is alleged that he only deposited $30,000 of this with the Colonial Trust Company, as trustee, and a suit in equity is now in progress to compel him to make good the balance.

She began proceedings against Mr. Weil for a separation, but he denied the allegations of abandonment and failure to support and she dropped it. In June, 1899, she commenced the present proceedings for an absolute divorce. Mr. Reilly said yesterday that the case had not been tried up to the present time because the defendant had thrown every possible obstacle in the way.

Mrs. Weil in her complaint names six women, more or less intimately connected with the theatrical calling, upon whom she bases her accusations of misconduct. They are Edna Benn, Gerome Edwardy, May Griswold, Helen Tuessart, Lottie Smyley, and Alice Levy. Emelie Goebel, whose house in West Forty-eighth Street figured prominently in the story of the doings of the Dean gang of swindlers, is mentioned as a witness.

Mrs. Weil, who lives at 312 Manhattan Avenue, and who has been drawing alimony at the rate of $200 a month pending the trial, said yesterday: "I will insist on having this case go before a jury. I have received several offers of settlement, one in the presence of my counsel. This one was that I should receive $40,000 for myself and a ten-thousand-dollar fee for my counsel. I would not settle for $1,000,000."

Mrs. Weil's case will be presented to the Court by Assistant District Attorney James W. Osborne and Mr. Weil's interests will be represented by Francis L. Wellman, Mr. Platzek, and four other attorneys. His answer is a general denial and a counter charge in which Frank H. Doane, an actor, is named.

RICHES OF MINDANAO.

Special to The New York Times.

TACOMA, Washington, Dec. 1.—The mineral and timber riches of the almost unknown Island of Mindanao, in the Philippines, are outlined here by T. H. Russell, who is one of the first white men to get even a few miles into the interior. Russell went to the islands in June, 1898, with the First Colorado Regiment, and remained with that organization until it was ordered home. He obtained a discharge at Manila for the purpose of prospecting, and for the past year has been in the Island of Mindanao, arriving here this week. He brings home with him samples of gold, including some small nuggets which he picked up on the island and along the banks of the streams. Besides these he has a large number of valuable relics. He will Winter in Minnesota with relatives, returning to Mindanao in the Spring. Regarding his exploration of the island Mr. Russell says:

"It is impossible for any one to penetrate the island from coast to coast not only on account of the hostile tribes that are to be found, but for the reason that in a greater portion of the whole island there is a heavy growth of grass, most of which is ten feet high and over, and so entangled that a road will have to be cut through it. When these roads are cut through they will have to be kept open. That is, they will have to be cut every week, for the growth of this grass is so rapid that within that time there will be no trace of the road that was cut the week before. In many sections of the island the grass will grow as much as four inches in twenty-four hours.

"I have been told that the natives in Mindanao sometimes walk on the top of the vines that spread out their leaves to the sun. These vines climb up the trees for a distance of about 150 feet, and there the leaves and vines, it is said, form a network so dense and thick that they will bear up the weight of a man. On the top of these they travel much quicker than on the ground, where the tall grass absolutely obstructs progress. There are said to be places where for miles there is not a break in this soringy walk. Occasionally a traveler will slip through, but so thick are the branches and strong the network of vines that there is no danger of falling very far.

"There are miles of gutta percha in the mountains of the island, and the hardwoods are immense. So far as I have heard, no one has ever penetrated into the interior more than ten miles. At Mount Apo I found traces of a party of Americans in the form of an empty whisky bottle that contained the names of the members. The date on the slip of paper was 1884. I turned this over to the army officers. There are many wild tribes in the mountains that the friendly Morros have never seen, and even when the island has been pacified it will take years to find them out for the reasons I have named.

"I am certain there is plenty of gold in Mindanao. Along the banks of the streams a short distance from the coast I picked up the nuggets brought out. This gold must come from the mountains in the interior, and the fact that it is so plentiful where I got this leads me to think that when the interior can be penetrated some valuable mines will be discovered. It is my intention to return in the Spring, when it is the opinion of all those now in the islands, there will be peace and explorations can be conducted with safety."

AMERICAN FORGERS' HAUL.

Foreign Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—A gang of expert forgers, whom the Scotland Yard police believe to be Americans, have been making some big hauls among the London banks, though, as the institutions that have suffered refuse, quite naturally, to make the amount of their losses known, the sum total of the plunder can only be guessed at. The police, however, estimate that the thieves have secured at least $100,000 during the last month.

The scheme they have operated is so simple that the only wonder is that it is not worked all the time, or rather that it had not been worked so frequently years ago as to have forced the banks to change their system of paying checks. In order that the reader who is not familiar with English methods may understand the operation it is necessary to give a brief description of this system. Any bank in England, in ordinary circumstances, will pay to an entire stranger without identification the amounts of "open" checks, as they are called, up to any reasonable sum, say £2,000 or £3,000, the teller depending entirely on his acquaintance with the signature of the drawer for a safeguard.

In contradistinction to the "open" check is the "crossed" check—that is, a check with a couple of lines drawn across the face, or two or three words written across it. The crossed check will not be paid at the desk of a bank, even to the drawer, no matter how well known he may be to the teller and all the officials, but must first go through the Clearing House from another bank. A partial safeguard from general forgery is found in the fact that the English banks issue blank checks only to depositors, and that it is a penal offense to steal or otherwise appropriate a book of checks, or even a single check.

As solicitors are more in the habit of drawing open checks for large amounts by reason of the nature of their business than almost any other class of men who keep big bank accounts, the American gang has been working through leading firms of lawyers—who, by the way, are not bragging about their innocent connection with these swindlers, either. The method is as follows: One of the gang calls upon the firm of solicitors that has been selected and instructs him to collect a sum of money, generally only a few pounds, from a person whose address he gives, who is also a member of the gang. The solicitors apply for the money; it is promptly paid, and they send a check, less the cost of collection, to Conspirator No. 1. The check is all the gang needs from the solicitors. From that slip of paper they learn what bank the firm deals with, and they forge from it both the clerk's handwriting and the signature of the firm.

Meanwhile one of the conspirators opens an account at the same bank, and so obtains a check book. The forged check is drawn for a large amount, and, as solicitors often draw out considerable sums in notes for the completion of purchases of properties or to accommodate out-of-town clients, this does not excite suspicion. Of course each member of the gang leaves the place he gave as his address, generally a shop where letters may be left for a small fee, never to return, before any attempt is made to cash the check.

The method of cashing the check is equally crafty. The gang hires a furnished office in a business street, pays a month's rent down, and advertises for a clerk. To the applicant selected is then given the forged check, and he is told to take it to the bank and get it cashed, usually in hundred-pound notes. One of the conspirators follows him, and if the check is paid, as it generally is, waits to see whether the clerk is watched or followed on leaving the bank, in which event a prearranged alarm would be given. If the course is clear, the gang meet in the office and divide the booty, leaving the new clerk soon afterward to wait in vain for their return. The next step is to change the money at any exchange bureau into French notes, in order that they may not be traced by the numbers, and then to change it back into English notes, when the game is begun over again.

Now that complaints have been made to the police and the banks notified, the scheme will be more difficult to operate, and doubtless will be given up, but the gang have already cleared a neat little sum, and there is not the slightest clue as yet to their identity.

THE DURYEA WILL CASE.

Judge Decides It Shall Be Reopened—No Temporary Administrator.

MINEOLA, L. I., Dec. 1.—Judge Seabury announced to-day that he had decided to reopen the Duryea will case, and that the first hearing would be given at his court, here, on Dec. 11.

Counsel for the contestants of the will, the three daughters of the late Edgar E. Duryea, wanted the will admitted to probate at once. If this had been done they purposed taking an appeal to the Supreme Court and have the case tried before a Judge and jury.

Judge Seabury has denied the application asked for by J. Campbell Thompson of counsel for the contestants for the appointment of a temporary administrator for the estate. The application was opposed by counsel for Walter Duryea, the son of the late millionaire and the defendant in the case, on the ground that it would involve a useless expenditure of money.

REAR ADMIRAL McNAIR BURIED.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The funeral of Rear Admiral Frederick V. McNair, ranking Rear Admiral of the navy, was held at St. John's Episcopal Church here to-day. The services were attended by all of Admiral McNair's old associates now in Washington, including Secretary Long, Admiral Dewey, Rear Admirals Hichborn, O'Neil, Crowninshield, Rodgers, and Higginson.

The service was conducted by the Rev. Alexander McKay-Smith, rector of St. John's, assisted by the Rev. Walden Meyer of Christ Church, Navy Yard. The full Marine Band was in attendance, heading a battalion of the Marine Corps, under command of Col. Russell, United States Marine Corps.

At the conclusion of the ceremony at the church the procession formed for the march to Arlington, where the committal service was read by the Rev. Mr. Meyer.

Live Stock Exhibition in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—The International Live Stock Exposition opened to-day in the Drexel Pavilion at the Union Stock Yards. The formal opening, however, will not take place until Monday evening. The show will continue during next week. Ten thousand animals, including hogs, sheep, cattle, and horses, are on exhibition, and the show promises to be one of the most notable of the kind ever held in this country. Six hundred exhibitors, representing thirty-five States of the Union, and including forty-five exhibitors from Canada and four from England and Scotland, are here with their choice stock.

Ex-Gov. Moses Not Under Arrest.

BOSTON, Dec. 1.—In connection with a New York story, printed to-day, to the effect that Dr. William A. Ferguson of Galveston, Texas, had been held by a United States Commissioner for further examination on charges of obtaining money under false pretenses, which intimated that the man might be ex-Gov. Moses of South Carolina, it appears that the man is not the ex-Governor. Mr. Moses lives in Winthrop, Mass. Mr. Howard, Town Auditor of Winthrop, stated to-day that he talked with the ex-Governor in Boston yesterday.

THE HEAVENS FOR DECEMBER

Sun Will Reach the Extreme Point in His Apparent Southern Journey.

Planetary Conjunctions of the Month Are Fairly Close—Jupiter Becomes a Morning Star on the 14th.

The sun is the most conspicuous figure in the events of most importance in December. Early on the twenty-second day of the month he reaches the extreme southerly point in his apparent journey to the South, in which trip he has been busy ever since the Summer solstice that occurred away back in June last. Now he has one equally far to the northward to accomplish, and it will require six months to make it. Even the most casual observer has probably noticed that he has lately been setting further and further, to the left each successive month, and also that he is not as high overhead as he was in Summer. The length of his daily journey across the firmament, as seen by us, has, as a consequence, been shortening, and the duration of his stay above the horizon has been steadily lessening.

To the people living in Central Australia, in the northern part of Chile and of the Argentine Republic and Southern Brazil and Africa the 22d of December will possibly be marked with a red figure in their calendars. On that day the sun, when at its zenith, touches the tropic of Capricorn, and it marks the middle of the six-months day down there at the south pole, as it also marks the middle of the six-months night at the north pole. In the south temperate zone that day, as the astronomers mark off the seasons, is the first day of Summer, as it is the first day of Winter in the temperate zone here on our side of the equator.

The sun and the planets also take a more than usual interest in each other in December. There are three planets in conjunction with the sun during the month and one in opposition. This naturally somewhat denudes the month of our bright friends, but then when they smile upon us again they will seem very bright and will be as interesting to us.

The sun, which controls the mighty planets of our system, does not disdain to guide, with equal care, the tiny globes which form the minor planets. Each revolves in an elliptic orbit, and at certain times some of them approach near enough to the earth to have their distances measured. The observations can be made with very great precision, they can be multiplied to any extent that can be desired. Some of these little bodies have consequently a great astronomical future, inasmuch as they seem destined to determine more accurately than Venus or than Mars the true distance from the earth to the sun.

The small planet Eros is at present the most important of all these minor planets, and its movements are the most absorbing interest to lovers of astronomy. Although it is so very small, its importance is extremely great, greater, in fact, than any object that has engaged the attention of astronomers for some time and for the very reason above mentioned, finding the distance between earth and sun. The reason why Eros is of so much importance in determining this distance is that it is much nearer to the earth than other heavenly bodies come, with the exception of the moon and an occasional minor planet. Eros continues approaching us, and its nearest point will not be reached until the latter part of the month, when it will be some fifteen millions of miles away.

The December moon falls on the 6th, has last quartering on the 13th, while the new moon comes in on the 21st, and these phases close on the 28th by the moon being at the stage of its first quartering on that date. The century that is just coming to a close has enabled us to find out much more about the moon, through the instrumentality of photography, than we ever before have known. A satisfactory picture of the full moon can be made in less than a second of time, which will show more than is contained in the best lunar maps that required a lifetime to construct by older methods. The closest conjunction between moon and planet takes place on the 20th, when Mercury is occulted. There also is a close meeting with Neptune on the 7th, and one with Uranus on the 20th. In fact, with the exception of the meeting with Mars on the 12th, the planetary conjunctions for the month are fairly close.

Since midsummer the heavens have put on a somewhat changed appearance, showing that the heavenly scene shifter has been right busy and that he has evidently made up his mind that the setting of the Winter's tableaus shall be as brilliant as it possibly can be made. A bunch of light, to be seen above the eastern horizon soon after dark, assures us that the Pleiades are about to develop themselves, and that navigation can once more be attempted with safety—at least that was what the ancient Greeks said whenever this group came in sight. Magnificent Orion follows soon after, and lends dignity and beauty to the skies throughout the night. Still higher is Aldebaran in the constellation of Taurus. There are also the two Dog Stars, the Twins, Capella, Altai, Vega, the Northern Cross, and others of the first magnitude, which we shall probably know far better as the coming year advances, and the clear, crisp, Winter atmosphere affords us a chance to study them in their full glory. Spectroscopic analysis has enabled us to determine the velocity with which stars are approaching or receding from the earth. As they move away from or toward us, the pitch of their spectral lines is altered by their velocity precisely as the pitch of the bell of a passing steam fire engine is altered as it turns the corner of a street and approaches or recedes from us. The motion of the sun and of the whole solar system among the stars in space can be determined in this fashion. We are approaching some stars or are receding from others. The line of the motion of our whole solar system can thus be drawn in the universe, and this problem is now being worked out in all its details.

Uranus leads in the planetary programme for the month by being in conjunction with the sun on the 5th. After that date the planet joins the morning stars and remains a member of that aggregation the rest of the year. Uranus and the moon are at their closest on the 20th, the two being at that time in the constellation of the Scorpion. On the 22d Uranus and Mercury come within half a degree of one another. This meeting would be one of absorbing interest could we but see the two heavenly bodies slowly moving with ever decreasing interval until they all but touch, and then watch them separating as one passes along on his stately way from the sun, while his smaller brother keeps his course in the diametrically opposite direction.

On the 7th, the day after the full of the moon, Neptune is occulted by our satellite. Those favored few who have powerful telescopes are the only ones who will be able to see this intercsting phenomenon. To us more ordinary mortals, however, the spectacle, even were we permitted to view it, would be shorn of much of its beauty, as the round bright disk of the moon dims the light of the stars and planets in its immediate neighborhood. Like the other great planets, Neptune is also enveloped with copious clouds; in fact, it only weighs one-fifth part as much as it would do if it were made of materials so substantial as are those of the earth.

Mars is now in the constellation of the Lion close to the brightest star of that group, popularly known as Regulus, being to the northward and westward of that star. It was from this general locality, known as the sickle of Leo, that the brilliant meteoric showers of November took their departure. In viewing the warlike planet astronomers can hardly expect to see more than its broadest features. An object 300 times the length and breadth of THE TIMES Building can barely be distinguished. Were we looking at our earth from a similar distance, and with equally good telescopes, the continents and oceans and the larger seas and islands would all be large enough to be conspicuous. It fortunately happens that the surface of Mars is only obscured by clouds to a very trifling extent, and we are thus able to see a panorama of our neighbor laid before us.

Venus now rises three and a half hours before the sun, which interval at the month's close is reduced almost half an hour. This shows us that the queen of the planets is swinging away from her far western point and moving in toward the sun. From this latter position she will emerge after the new century has been with us for a while and take up her position as the most brilliant object in the evening sky. Her role for a while is not one of great importance, but when she deserts the evening stars she is sure to be missed far more than many of the other members of the brotherhood. Venus is one of the few globes which might conceivably be the abode of beings not very widely different from ourselves. Our muscles would not be unnecessarily strong, as they would be on the moon, nor should we find them too weak, as they would certainly prove to be were we placed on one of the very heavy bodies of our system. However, the wise ones hardly seem to think that Venus is inhabited by any men, women, or children resembling those on this earth.

Mercury, having started on the 20th of November to move away from the sun to the westward, will complete this portion of its swing on the 7th, when it will be almost twenty-one degrees distant. The planet will remain as a morning star until after the advent of the new year. When the year closes 95 per cent. of the disk of Mercury will be illuminated. The moon on the 20th almost completely hides this planet from the observers; as it is, however, the day of the new moon we cannot see her face. We can quite as well imagine it is the planet that is doing the work of concealment.

Jupiter passes from his realm of dictator of the evening on the 14th, to challenge his old rival Venus for the supremacy of the morning. In consequence of his disappearance we shall not see the bright disk that has of late been so friendly an object in the west soon after the setting of the sun until he emerges on the other side of the sun. The early risers in Winter mornings after the coming in of the new year will for a while have a splendid chance to see these two beautiful brilliants shining fairly close to one another.

Saturn follows fairly close after his larger brother, as he, too, is in conjunction with the sun this month, on the 29th, and becomes after that a morning star. On the 22d the planet is in conjunction with the narrow disk of the growing moon. These two events are the only ones for the month that are important enough to be mentioned. Unfortunately we are denied the chance of seeing either, the all-powerful light of the sun absorbing everything that is venturous enough to go within its influence.

MARRIED SEVENTY YEARS AGO.

Anniversary of Wedding of Mr. and Mrs. David Post of Orange County to be Celebrated To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

GOSHEN, N. Y., Dec. 1.—At the old homestead of the Post family, near Pine Island, Orange County, to-morrow Mr. and Mrs. David Post will celebrate the seventieth anniversary of their wedding day.

Seventy-odd years ago David Post taught a school in the backwoods, and fell in love with one of his pupils, Mary Ann Wood. They were married at the bride's home, near Warwick, on Dec. 2, 1830, when Mr. Post was in his twenty-first year and his bride was sixteen years old. The husband then gave up school teaching and settled down as a farmer on the ancestral lands of his father's people. He is there yet, hale and hearty, at ninety years, tilling the soil, harvesting the crops, and performing much of the general work on the place.

Neither Mr. Post nor his wife has known serious illness in the years of married life. Four children were born to them, two of whom have died. Their descendants number sixteen and represent four generations—two children, four grandchildren, nine great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild.

The five generations will be present at the celebration to-morrow, together with hundreds of people from all over the rural countryside; but there are none living of those who attended the wedding so long ago, and but very few of those who knew the couple when their journey in life together began. Mr. and Mrs. Post are said to be the oldest-wedded couple in this State, and they are very proud of this.

Mrs. Post is a kindly old lady, who, before the wrinkles of time had seamed her face, was renowned for her beauty. Her husband is a long, lean specimen of sturdy manhood, with a smoothly shaven face. For seventy years he has thought faintly of some time growing a beard, but on Mrs. Post's account he has never done so. She frequently remarks that she would "never have married David if he had grown a mustache."

MEXICAN MONEY STRINGENCY.

Foreign Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

CITY OF MEXICO, Nov. 23.—The Government of Mexico has decided upon strong measures to check the growing and, to some extent, risky, scarcity of ready money at its command. Immense exportations of silver dollars have taken place during the past few months, and these are the more worthy of note as the production of the white metal diminished during the fiscal year ended June 30 last.

In face of this situation, which, if it grew worse, might give rise to grave economic disturbances, the Government, through the Secretario de Hacienda, (Secretary of the Exchequer,) has just initiated three measures to remedy the state of affairs. The Diario Oficial, which is the official organ in the republic, has published the three measures determined upon.

The first is in the nature of an initiatory presented to the Chamber of Deputies, now in session, which was approved to-day in the following terms:

"The Executive is authorized from this date until the next meeting of the Chamber to modify, if deemed advisable, the imports and duties which burden silver and gold, the minerals in their natural state, and all substances referred to in Article 4 of the Law of March 27, 1897.

"The Executive will render an account to Congress of the use it makes of this authority."

The two other resolutions, or orders, refer to the lessening of duties paid to the mints, and the reduction of alloy allowed in the bar silver brought to the mints.

The object of these measures can be easily seen. The diminishing of duties paid to the mints tends to avoid the immoderate exportation of bar silver, destined for foreign coining. In fact, this decision is made possible on account of coining duties being more moderate in other countries. The lessening of the duty tends to nullify this advantage and cause the retention of silver in the Mexicans' own market, it being exported simply to realise the benefit of the lower rates elsewhere.

An analogous object is seen in the change of alloy in the bars presented for coining. Until now the amount of pure metal necessary was .900, which has prevented the bars of lowest alloy being converted into money. The reduction by the new order to .850 will facilitate the coining of many qualities of silver which have hitherto gone to foreign countries.

To Protest Against Polygamy.

Under the auspices of the Interdenominational Council of Women for Christian and Patriotic Service, a meeting will be held in the hall of the United Charities Building, Fourth Avenue and Twenty-second Street, at 3 o'clock next Wednesday afternoon. The meeting will be in the interest of an anti-polygamy amendment to the Constitution. The speakers will be Dr. S. J. Elliott of Utah, Gen. John Eaton of Washington, the Rev. D. J. Burrell, and the Rev. Josiah Strong. Darwin R. James will preside.

FIRE DEPARTMENT FIGHT

Former Capt. Clifford Makes Charges of Oppression.

Benevolent Association, He Declares, Will Succeed Against Official Persecution.

About 200 members of the Firemen's Mutual Benevolent Association of Greater New York were present yesterday afternoon at a special meeting of the association at Arlington Hall, Brooklyn, and applauded warmly when President Capt. James D. Clifford declared that the fight in the Fire Department would be waged until the men obtained redress for their grievances.

Capt. Clifford said he was a victim of oppression. When he was dismissed from the Fire Department on a charge of insubordination, the heads of the department, he declared, hoped that the backbone of the resistance to their methods would be broken. But the rank and file saw in his punishment only persecution for having dared to criticise the system of handling the insurance fund.

The Fire Department, he continued, had now formed a new organization to bring about, as officially announced, "harmony in the department." Its real purpose was to divide the men among themselves, and pressure was being brought on the firemen to join this official organization. He knew of cases where intimidation had been used to make men leave the Benevolent Association and join the new organization. He urged his listeners to stand firm and victory would be theirs. The heads of the department feared the Benevolent Association because it insisted that the rank and file had rights as American citizens.

It was not true, he said, that theirs was a political organization. Its sole object was protection from unjust oppression. If honesty and fair play reigned in the Fire Department, the association would have no reason to exist. Some day he promised to make public the cases of persecution and instances of corruption that had come to his personal knowledge. All the men wanted was to be treated fairly.

The public, he went on, sympathised with the fireman who saves human life and protects property, and they relied on public opinion to gain their rights in the end. This Winter a determined effort would be made to secure relief through the Legislature, and a representative would be sent to Albany to look after the measure amending the present charter of Greater New York so as to provide for a two-platoon system. Mass meetings of firemen would also be held to arouse public opinion in their behalf.

It was announced that the association's band would be discontinued, and the members were invited to meet next Saturday to dispose of the instruments. The band, said President Clifford, had been found impracticable. When any big man in the Fire Department died orders were issued for a pompous display, but if one of the rank and file, who contributed to keep up the band, died, the relatives would have had difficulty in getting it.

CANADA'S VAST COAL FIELDS.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.—Those who claim to know say that only a beginning has been made in the exploitation of the mineral wealth of British Columbia, and especially the southern portion of it, known as the Kootenay region.

W. A. Carlyle, formerly Professor of Mining at McGill University, then for a number of years Provincial Mineralogist of British Columbia, and now manager of the Rio Tinto mines, in Spain, said in one of his reports that if ever a low-grade ore could be worked with profit, almost the whole of the Kootenay country could be mined.

It is claimed that this is just what the Crows' Nest Pass Railway and the development of the coal fields in the pass render possible. In fact, the Boston and Montreal Company claims to have made a contract for the treatment of the output of their mines at $3.50 per ton during the coming Summer. New York, Boston, and Montreal capitalists are interested in this venture.

The coal deposits of the Crow's Nest Pass are very extensive, and mines at Fernie are now practically worked by the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company, Limited, of Toronto. This company has all or more than it can do to supply the demand for coke in the mining regions. It controls a small kingdom of coal lands, no less than 200,000 acres in extent, almost all of which contain coal. The granting of this immense area is attributed to political motives, as the holders are all friends of the Government, and the question has been made an issue in politics.

G. McBride of McGill University, who spent the past Summer in this country, in an article on the mineral wealth of the Crow's Nest Pass region, says:

"All around the town of Fernie, which is the chief centre of the coal business of this region, the country for many miles is full of coal beds, some twenty seams varying in thickness from a mere sheet to a solid mass of coal thirty feet high. These seams, if laid one on top of the other, would aggregate a thickness of 150 feet. These great beds extend over an area of many thousand acres, and the Geological Survey of Canada estimates that if 50 per cent. of this be allowed as unworkable there would still be an accessible body of coal containing about 10,000,000,000 tons. We get a faint idea of the magnitude of these figures when we consider, that, taking 300,000,000 tons to be the amount of coal now consumed in the world each year, there is enough fuel in the Crow's Nest country to supply the entire world for over 330 years, at its present rate of consumption. In the mines alone this would afford employment to every able-bodied man in Canada from this time until the year 2,000, to say nothing of the thousands who would find work in its transportation and sale.

"As the coal is easily reached from the surface and is present in such abundance, it can be mined with comparatively small expense. The plant now in operation is a very convenient one, and is so arranged that from the time the coal is first shoveled into the small cars in the mines until it is ready to be shipped it has never to be touched with a shovel."

It will thus be seen that the gold and silver mines of the Kootenay, for which this immense output is being coked, need not want for fuel for their smelters. The output of coal, even at present, is over 800,000 tons per year, and is rapidly increasing.

FURS.

Fashions and Prices.

BY C. C. SHAYNE.

Furs are fashionably worn this season as an article of dress as well as for the mere purpose of warmth.

RUSSIAN SABLE. Heads the list and is the favorite fur of the crowned heads of Europe and the elite of America. The darkest and best Imperial Crown are found on Lena River, between the Arctic Circle and the Arctic Sea. The choicest three, perfectly matched, cost $1,250. From this maximum figure they range down to $250, $200, $150, $100, $60 and $40 each.

HUDSON BAY SABLE. Ranks next in value to Russian. The handsomest (Northern British Columbia) cost $75 per skin. Others, $50, $40, $30, $25, $15 and $10. It takes three skins to make an average sized muff of Russian or Hudson Bay Sable and two for a fashionable neck scarf. Extra large muffs and long boas in proportion. Hudson Bay Sable muffs, $35, $50, $60, $75, $100, $125, $150 to $250. Neck pieces, Collarettes, Capes, &c., prices in proportion.

The New Van Ronk Muff, Just Out.

NOTE.—I do not sell articles made from blended Sable skins. Ladies who have purchased them elsewhere complain that they have a mottled, shabby appearance after being worn a few months.

ALASKA SEALSKINS. Sealskins caught on the Pribylov Islands, in Behring Sea, are the best in the world. The pelt is strong and the fur dense, handsome and durable. I am making over to this season's style garments of these skins (London dyed) which I sold twelve years ago. I can recommend them with confidence.
Up-to-date Jackets, $200, $250 and $300.
The Standard Coat, a few inches longer, $50 extra.
Long Coats, Capes, &c., in proportion.
The standard muff, $20, $25 and $30. Extra large size, $35 and $40.

NOTE—Jackets and coats made from China, Lobos Island, Cape Horn and Northwest Coast seal can be sold for $100, $125, $150 to $200, and muffs for $8, $12, and $15, but they do not give satisfaction. They turn red and have a shabby appearance after being worn a short time. I do not sell them, and I wish to impress upon the public that no house can sell Alaska sealskin garments at lower prices than I quote.

PERSIAN LAMB. I handle the German dyed skins exclusively, which retain their pristine beauty for years. Persian Lamb Jackets, $125 to $175. Coats, $150 to $250.

BROADTAIL AND BABY LAMB. Broadtail (Baby Lamb) Jackets, $200 to $400. Coats $350 to $500.
Automobile Coats, $750 up.

MINK. A reliable and beautiful fur. Muffs $15 to $65. Scarfs, Collars, and Boas, $15, $25, $40, $65 to $100. Collarettes and Capes, $65, $85, $100, $125 to $250.

FOX, LYNX AND ALL THE FLUFFY FURS, SILVER-POINTED, ETC., CHINCHILLA AND ERMINE, COLLARETTES, CAPES, BOAS AND MUFFS.

OTTER, BEAVER, STONE MARTEN, ALASKA SABLE (skunk), latest styles in medium sized muffs, extra large muffs, the new long boas, new shape collars, etc.

NOTE.—All furs sold by me are properly cured and dressed. They are less liable to moths than improperly dressed skins. My exhibit at the World's Fair was awarded highest prizes for garments of Russian Sable, Mink, Sealskin, Otter, Persian Lamb, and for pelts dressed ready for use, all kinds. America surpasses all other nations in curing and dressing natural furs. I import Russian Sables and other European natural furs, duty free. They are dressed here and made up in my own workshop, and I can afford to sell at as low prices as any other reliable house in the world. The only advantage England has is in the character of the dye of seal, and Germany in dyeing Persian Lamb, Lynx, Fox, etc. I only handle the furs dressed and dyed best by the nations which excel in their specialties.
AWARDED HIGHEST PRIZES.

MEN'S FUR-LINED OVERCOATS. All sizes, lined and trimmed with genuine furs, from $75 to handsome sable lined and trimmed for $1,000. The best $150, $200 and $250 overcoats in the world.

SLEIGH AND CARRIAGE ROBES, COACHMEN'S OUTFITS, SEALSKIN CAPS AND GLOVES, BEAR, TIGER AND LEOPARD RUGS AND MATS. Large assortment at lowest prices.

NOTE.—Buying Furs in large quantities, I have every advantage which long experience and capital afford; manufacture on my own premises, give my personal attention to customers, and sell at lowest prices for reliable goods.

IF the wheat shreds of all the rolls in the machines of the Shredded Wheat Company's factory for one day's run were joined together end to end the length would be 116,297 miles, a light, porous shred that would reach about five times around the globe at the equator, and the wonder is who eats these millions upon millions of Shredded Whole Wheat Biscuit? The answer is that thousands of families eat no other bread, and while the Biscuits are used to a great extent as a breakfast cereal and as a basis in the preparation of innumerable other dishes, they are also split in halves, slightly toasted and served cold with butter in place of sliced loaf bread.

No yeast germs, no baking powder gases, no greasy shortening, yet a light, short bread, already baked.

HARVARD VETERINARY SCHOOL.

Efforts Being Made to Continue Its Work—Lack of Funds the Trouble—Its Great Clinic.

BOSTON, Dec. 1.—The announcement that no new students would be received in the Veterinary School of Harvard University has led to much discussion, and an effort is being made to raise sufficient money to continue the work.

Although recognized by veterinarians everywhere as the leading school of the science in the country, and the one to which the present development of veterinary medicine in the United States is largely due, the Harvard school has never been peculiarly on anything like an equality with many others that can be mentioned. Abroad the great veterinary schools are largely maintained in connection with the military service or the Government departments of meat inspection in the civil service, and accordingly receive large Government grants. In this country the New York school has received $175,000 in endowments, and has $25,000 a year from the State; while, besides public grants, the department of veterinary medicine of the University of Pennsylvania has received nearly $100,000.

An important point with the Harvard school is the extent of its clinic. It maintains two hospitals, a free clinic, and the regular hospital in Village Street, in this city. Last year there were 5,697 cases treated in the two, a larger number than anywhere else in the country, and nearly, if not quite, equaling the number in such great clinics in Europe as that of London. When it is remembered that the excellence of veterinary instruction depends largely upon the number of cases which the students are able to examine under the guidance of their instructors, the importance of the Harvard school will be at once apparent.

The university is not without hope that the necessary money for carrying on a school which is capable not only of furnishing high scientific results, but of developing a body of trained professional men whose economic services to the country could hardly be overestimated, will be procured from the friends of the science and of the college. The vote of the corporation was that notice be given "that no new students in veterinary medicine will be received by the university until further orders of the President and fellows; that the instruction to the students now in the school shall be completed so far as any of

ATTACK OF OTTO KEMPNER

Resigns from the Democratic Committee of Kings County.

Willoughby Street He Calls "a Cancerous Growth" on the Cuticle of Brooklyn's Democracy.

Otto Kempner, who at the Democratic State Convention at Saratoga defied the Kings County leaders and made a vigorous stand for the nomination of Controller Coler for Governor, last night announced that he had tendered his resignation as a member of the Democratic General Committee of Kings County from the Twentieth Assembly District.

In his letter of resignation to Chairman James Moffett, which will be read at a meeting of the General Committee to-morrow night, Mr. Kempner denounces the Willoughby Street organization in the severest terms, characterizing it as "a cancerous growth upon the cuticle of the Brooklyn Democracy." Mr. Kempner refers to the "auction room coterie" as an "appendage of the Tiger," and declares that its "unholy alliance" with Tammany has brought wreck and ruin to the Democratic Party in city, State, and Nation. He is glad to resign, he says, as a Democratic organization exists in name but not in fact in Brooklyn, and he predicts that the organization will be smashed. Mr. Kempner's letter is in part as follows:

"Ever since the consolidation of Greater New York the Brooklyn organization gave up its character as a separate entity, resolved itself into an annex to Tammany Hall, and maintained an unholy alliance with it for the sake of spoils. The debasing conditions in New York City, against which the people are now rising up in arms, owe their origin to the abject consent of 'Willoughby Street' in 1897 to the nomination of any puppet that Boss Croker might name for Mayor or Greater New York in the State Convention of 1900 to elect delegates to Kansas City the joint organizations sent two Ice Trust tainted delegates at large to the Democratic National Convention to assist in formulating an anti-trust platform.

"At Kansas City the Tiger and its Brooklyn appendage were largely instrumental in defeating the heroic efforts of ex-Senator David B. Hill to keep the 16 to 1 silver heresy out of the Democratic platform. Thus did the unholy alliance between Tammany Hall and 'Willoughby Street' bear logical fruit in the wreck and ruin of the Democratic Party in city, State, and Nation.

"In local politics, no less than in State and National, the rule of 'Willoughby Street' has proved as odious to the people as it was disastrous to the party. A small coterie of unprincipled politicians, masquerading in the livery of Democracy, have been exploiting the party organization in Brooklyn for personal profit. As direct results, we have an incompetent borough administration; our county is exposed to the horrors of a water famine; vice is rampant and safeguarded by our police, our streets are dirty and primitively paved, yet the burden of taxation is steadily increasing.

"To oppose the degrading rule of the 'Willoughby Street' combination in any respect is treason in the highest degree. The State Senator who in 1899 objected to the nomination of an unworthy candidate for county office was illegally expelled from your committee, and has since been hounded out of public life, together with all his friends and supporters, despite the fact that the people of Brooklyn signally rebuked the nomination of that candidate at the polls.

"In tendering, as I hereby do, my resignation as a delegate to your committee from the Twentieth Assembly District, I am consoled by the thought that it is not from the Democratic Party that I am severing my allegiance, but from a cancerous growth upon its Brooklyn cuticle. I beg to state, furthermore, that I entertain the highest regard for the Democratic rank and file of this county, whom I know to be chafing under the oppressive yoke of the 'Willoughby Street' clique, and eagerly awaiting an opportunity to smash their machine. Brooklyn needs, and with the help of thousands of good Democrats will soon obtain, a regenerated organization, which shall be conducted according to the time-honored principle of majority rule, wherein deliberation shall not be regarded as a crime."

GERMAN-AMERICAN LEAGUE.

A Permanent Organization—United Action Against Tammany Urged.

The organization which grew out of the German-American McKinley-Roosevelt League was permanently established Friday under the name of the German-American League at the headquarters, 102 East Fourteenth Street. The following officers were elected: President—Ludwig F. Thoma; Vice Presidents—Jastrow Alexander, Felix Fritsche, Charles Lupprian; Treasurer—Max T. Rosen; Corresponding Secretary—Frederick Snyder; Recording Secretary—E. C. Eger.

President Thoma made the following remarks:

"In this year's National campaign there was only one issue—National honor. There is also but one issue in next year's municipal campaign—a clean and honest City Government against corruption. We all know that Tammany Hall is the hotbed of corruption. It must be deprived of its power before the citizens of our great and beautiful city can hope to find any relief from exorbitant taxes and shameful oppression. In order to be successful we must be united. Let us put aside all petty jealousies and let us take a united stand against the common enemy."

PHILADELPHIA GRAIN EXPORTS.

Little Doubt Now that This Will Be Record-Breaking Year.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1.—Seven steamers cleared at the Custom House yesterday for different European ports with either full or part cargoes of grain. The combined amount they carry is about 689,820 bushels, bringing the total for the year thus far to 41,156,366 bushels, which is only 216,396 bushels less than last year's total and 1,442,396 bushels less than the total shipment in 1898, the banner year for Philadelphia in the export of cereals. With still another month of this year to run, during which many vessels are scheduled to leave with grain, little doubt is felt in shipping circles that the present year will break the record.

Of the amount of grain carried by the seven steamers, there were 573,820 bushels of corn, 96,000 bushels of wheat, and 20,000 bushels of oats.

CANAL SEASON CLOSED.

This Year's Tonnage on State Waterways Less than Last.

ALBANY, Dec. 1.—At noon to-day the canal season of 1900 closed officially, but it will be several days before the State waterways will be clear of boats. The canal season has not been as good in point of tonnage as that of the year 1899, when 3,686,551 tons of freight, with a value of $92,786,712, were carried.

While it will be several weeks before the State Superintendent of Public Works will be in possession of the figures necessary for the compilation of complete statistics, yet it is believed that the total tonnage this year will be about 10 per cent. less than last year. That loss would reduce it to about 3,300,000 tons, which would be the lowest, with the exception of 1898, when it was 3,360,065, since 1851, when it was 2,582,733.

The loss in the tonnage is due, it is believed, to the large number of breaks and leaks which took place during the first few weeks of navigation. The most serious of these were at the Aqueduct, near Schenectady, on the Erie Canal, and at Wilbur's Basin, on the Champlain Canal. These and less serious breaks were caused by severe storms.

Bishop Hale's Condition.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 1.—Bishop Seymour returned to the city to-day from Cairo, where he has been in attendance on the Right Rev. Charles R. Hale, Bishop of Cairo, who is dangerously ill. Bishop Hale is in a very feeble condition, owing to valvular trouble of the heart. There are also dropsical developments in the limbs. There is no hope for his recovery.

Recent developments in Book Making.

Revolutionary, indeed, have been the developments in book making during the past 10 years. Previous to this the possession of a library of well printed and richly bound books was attainable only by those of liberal means. To-day it is easily within the reach of people of even moderate circumstances. A well-selected library has become an essential feature in every home where any aspirations exist toward culture and refinement.

Even more notable have been the developments in the direction of artistic quality and beauty. Book making has ceased to be merely a problem of mechanical skill. It has become a fine art. The modern book is a picture for the eye as well as a feast for the mind. How delightful the typography. What taste and care in the perfect proportion of margin. What richness in decorative and illustrative work, and how unique and beautiful the bindings.

The finest attainments of all publishers are exhibited in our Book Store. A visit of inspection will prove of rare interest and material instruction to every lover of good books.

Book buyers are peculiarly alert in discerning and taking advantage of valuable price opportunities. Can they recall when leading publications were offered at such prices as these?

Ex-Secretary William C. Whitney will open his new Fifth Avenue palace on Friday evening, Jan. 4, 1901, with a ball, which will be one of the largest and handsomest given for years in New York. This ball will be in honor of his niece, Miss Helen Barney, the débutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Barney. Mrs. Barney, it will be remembered, was Miss Lilly Whitney. The announcement of this ball will arouse lively anticipations, not only among the younger and dancing element, but among all those who are going out at all this year. The Whitney palace—for it is nothing less—has not yet been seen by many of those in society, and this ball will be, as it were, a housewarming. The ball will also mark Mrs. Whitney's re-entrance into social life, after his period of mourning for the late Mrs. Whitney.

***

Mrs. Ogden Mills, it is announced, will give her annual ball on Friday evening, Jan. 11, at her residence, 1 East Sixty-ninth Street. Mrs. Mills's ball will not be to introduce her twin daughters, the Misses Gladys and Beatrice Mills, but will be the usual function that she gives each Winter.

***

Mrs. Astor will give her annual ball on Monday evening, Jan. 7, and Mrs. John Jacob Astor will give a ball at her residence, adjoining that of Mrs. Astor, Sr., on the following Monday evening, Jan. 14.

***

Although there have been several receptions during the week past, and the initial meetings of the less important dancing classes, the real opening of the Winter season is still delayed. The continued and comparatively mild weather, which made the Thanksgiving holidays, in the absence of anything exciting in town, days of country enjoyment, prevented much social movement in the city, but the curtain will be raised earlier this year than last, and it will not need the opera, still over a fortnight in the future, to start the ball rolling.

***

The first notable event of the Winter season, with the exception of the débutante receptions, will be the first Assembly Ball at the Astoria on Thursday evening, Dec. 13. The unusual number of débutantes in prominent families, now computed at sixty, will make this ball of especial interest this year, and as for some years past, all sorts of schemes are being tried on the part of people who have daughters to bring out, and who have not been fortunate enough to secure invitations to the assemblies for them, to obtain these coveted cards. The husbands, brothers, and fathers of ambitious young matrons anxious to appear at this ball, as well as the parents and relatives of many of the débutantes, are at present besieged by requests to use their business and club acquaintance to secure the desired invitations.

***

The new subscribers to this year's assemblies are Mrs. Edward H. Harriman, Mrs. John Hone, Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, Mrs. Hamilton Fish Kean, Mrs. Ogden Goelet, and Mrs. William D. Sloane. Those who will receive at the first Assembly Ball are Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Charles A. Post, and Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin. The Reception Committee is a well-chosen one, all its members being representative women. Mrs. Goelet returns as a subscriber after an absence of some years, due to travel abroad and to mourning. Her daughter, Miss May Goelet, will be one of the prominent débutantes at the ball. Mrs. E. H. Harriman (Miss Mary W. Averell) is to introduce her daughter, Miss Mary Harriman. Mrs. John Hone (Miss Maria Cadwalader) has also a débutante daughter, Miss Hester Gouverneur Hone. Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin (Miss Hope Goddard of Providence) is a charming addition to the list of assembly subscribers. The absence of Mrs. John C. Wilmerding's name from the list is noticeable and regrettable. Mrs. Wilmerding resumed her place last year after some years of absence, and now again retires, as she is in mourning for her sister-in-law, the late Mrs. John G. Heckscher. The other subscribers retiring this year are Mmes. Richard C. Mortimer, Levi P. Morton, W. Watts Sherman, Egerton Winthrop, Jr., Frederic Bronson, James A. Burden, Richard Derby, W. Butler Duncan, William A. Duer, David King, and John Minturn.

***

The Assembly Ball is now the sole relic of the departed days of New York society—the one and only general ball where the various leading sets meet on the same floor and in the same social atmosphere. The question of abandoning them was seriously discussed two years ago, but so many were the protests received that it was determined to continue them, and last season's balls were so successful that they have taken on a new lease of life and may now be continued indefinitely. New York, with its changing social conditions and its multiplicity of sets, finds it more difficult to maintain and keep alive a series of subscription balls than do smaller communities. The oldest and really most aristocratic subscription balls of the country are those of the St. Cecilia Society of Charleston, S. C. Second only to the St. Cecilia in age and prestige are the famous Assembly Balls of Philadelphia.

***

The first of the annual series of Monday morning musicales arranged by A. M. Bagby, and which have become such features of the recurring Winter seasons in New York, will take place in the Astoria ballroom to-morrow. It is announced that Mme. Bernhardt will appear at one of the mornings during December. The week will also bring the first meetings of the more important dancing organizations. The First Junior Cotillion will be danced at Sherry's on Tuesday evening. The first Fortnightly dance also comes on Tuesday evening at the Astoria, and the first of the Wednesday or Southern cotillions will also take place at Delmonico's this week. The cotillion will be led by Thomas C. Kinney of Richmond, Va., dancing with Miss Mary N. Laurence. On Friday "The Strollers" will give their first performance of "The Cruise of the Summer Girl," which is to run on all the evenings and on two afternoons of the following week, at the Astoria.

***

The week which opens to-day will be crowded with coming out receptions. Mrs. Dallas Bache Pratt will give the first of two Monday afternoon receptions to-morrow to introduce her daughter, Miss Katherine G. Pratt; Mrs. Spotswood D. Schenck will introduce her daughter, Miss Nathalie, also at an afternoon reception to-morrow. Tuesday will bring coming out receptions to be given by Mrs. Charles Russell Leaycraft, at the Hotel Buckingham, to introduce her daughter, Miss Agnes Ethel Leaycraft, by Mrs. Charles de Saulles, at the Lenox, 2 West Twenty-sixth Street, to introduce her daughter, Miss Caroline Belmont de Saulles, and by Mrs. Woodbury G. Langdon, at her residence, 719 Fifth Avenue, who will give the first of two receptions to introduce her daughter, Miss Sophie G. Langdon. On Wednesday Mrs. H. H. Hollister of 19 West Forty-ninth Street will introduce her daughter, Miss Louise Hollister. Mrs. Alfred Ely of 175 Second Avenue will give the first of three afternoons, at which her daughter, Miss Helen Rutherfurd Ely, is to make her bow. Thursday will bring the first of four receptions to be given by Mrs. William H. Davidge to introduce her daughter, Miss Frances Davidge, and a reception by Mrs. Dwight Arven Jones, to introduce Miss Ruth Arven Jones, at her residence, 34 West Fifty-first Street. On Friday Mrs. John H. Cole of 6 East Tenth Street will introduce Miss Lucy Cole; Mrs. Francis M. Scott of 42 Park Avenue, her daughter, Miss Eleanor M. Scott; Mrs. Langdon Schroeder of 50 West Eleventh Street, her sister, Miss Marie de Neufville; Mrs. William H. Barr of 30 West Fifty-sixth Street, her daughter, Miss Honor Ellsworth Barr, and Mrs. Park Benjamin of 270 West Seventy-third Street, her daughter, Miss Gladys Benjamin. Saturday will bring an additional host of coming out receptions, the most notable of which will be those to be given by Mrs. John R. Harris of 14 East Fortieth Street, for Miss Cornelia Brady Harris; by Mrs. James Betts Metcalf of 24 East Sixtieth Street, for her niece, Miss Hildegarde Beste; by Mrs. Henry Lewis Morris of 12 West Fifty-third Street, for her daughter, Miss Eleanor Russell Morris; by Mrs. Cyrus W. Field of 45 Fifth Avenue, for her daughter, Miss Mary Stone Field, in the state apartments of the Astoria, and by William Greenough of 32 West Ninth Street, for his daughter, Miss Marian Greenough.

***

Other receptions and entertainments of the week will be a dinner to be given by Mrs. Spotswood D. Schenck, on Tuesday evening at her residence; a dance to be given at the annex of the Metropolitan Clubhouse by Mrs. Dallas Bache Pratt on Monday evening for her daughter; Miss Katherine G. Pratt; a reception to be given by Miss Laura Jay Edwards for Miss Bertha Wurts on Wednesday afternoon, and a dinner to be given by Mrs. Charles R. Henderson on Thursday evening, from which the young guests will go to the dance to be given for Miss May Gallatin by her mother, Mrs. Frederic Gallatin, at the Metropolitan Club Annex. Mrs. Gallatin will also give a dinner on the same evening, as will also Mrs. Pierrepont Edwards and Mrs. Dallas Bache Pratt, from which the guests, all of the younger set, will go to the Gallatin dance.

***

The first Junior Cotillion, which, as said above, will be danced on Tuesday evening at Sherry's, promises to be largely attended. The Junior Cotillions have come to be among the representative dances of the younger element in New York society. To the patronesses are each year added a number of those matrons who have débutante daughters. The women who will receive at the first Junior will be Mrs. Beverly Robinson, Mrs. Charles R. Henderson, Mrs. B. Aymar Sands, Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, and Mrs. Stokes. The cotillion will be led by Alexander M. Hadden, dancing with Miss Helen Barney, daughter of Charles T. Barney. The new patronesses added this year are Mrs. Grenville Kane, Mrs. E. D. Trowbridge, Mrs. Beverly Robinson, Mrs. William Cowles, Mrs. E. H. Harriman, Mrs. H. H. Hollister, Mrs. Charles T. Barney, Mrs. John Hone, Mrs. Sterry Wells, Mrs. Dallas Bache Pratt, Mrs. Lewis Quentin Jones, Mrs. Henry Lewis Morris, Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, Mrs. Charles Moran, Mrs. J. Pierrepont Edwards, Mrs. William Street, Mrs. Spotswood Schenck, Mrs. Charles Carroll Lee, Mrs. Julien T. Davies, and Mrs. Arthur de Saulles. A complete list of patronesses, including the older ones, appeared in THE TIMES of Nov. 28.

***

The first of the Fortnightly dances will be danced in the Astor Gallery, at the Astoria, on Tuesday evening. The cotillion is to be led by Russell Landale, and Mrs. Lewis Livingston Delafield, assisted by several of the other patronesses, will receive. The cotillion is scheduled to begin at 9:30, and will end at 12:30 A. M. The list of patronesses for this season comprises Mrs. Lewis Livingston Delafield, Mrs. Dallas Bache Pratt, Mrs. Alexander D. Shaw, Mrs. John C. Jay, Mrs. Charles E. Sands, Mrs. L. Jacquelin Smith, Mrs. Edward R. Biddle, Mrs. Charles R. Huntington, Mrs. John Hone, Mrs. Thomas S. Young, Jr., Mrs. Frederic Goodridge, Mrs. Henry P. Loomis, and Mrs. Henry Lewis Morris. The Fortnightlies are always largely attended, and that of next Tuesday night will be no exception to this rule.

***

The week will bring a few weddings. Walter Andrews of Newport, Boston, and Washington, and who is well known in New York, will be married to Miss Currie Connaly in St. John's Church, Washington, at 4 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, and a number of New Yorkers will go on for the event. On Wednesday will come the wedding of James G. Oxnard and Miss Caroline M. Thornton, daughter of Mrs. John C. Thornton. William Murray Crumbie and Miss Hattie A. Slade, daughter of William Gerry Slade, will be married at the residence of the bride's parents, 322 West Eighty-seventh Street, also on Wednesday afternoon.

***

The wedding of Banyer Clarkson and Miss Helen Denton Smith, daughter of the late N. Denton Smith, will be celebrated on Wednesday afternoon at the Madison Square Presbyterian Church. This wedding will bring together a fashionable assemblage. Mr. Clarkson's mother was Miss Jay, and he is related to the Astor, Wilkes, Jay, de Peyster, Livingston, and other prominent New York families. Miss Smith's mother was Miss Harriet Shelton. Miss Smith is a sister of Mrs. James Russell Parsons of Albany, who has won literary fame by her charming book, "How to Know the Wild Flowers," and of Mrs. Charles William Blodgett. Miss Smith will have no bridesmaids, but her younger sister, Miss Ethel Smith, will be her maid of honor. Mr. Clarkson's best man will be J. Pierrepont Edwards, and his ushers are to be A. D. Clarkson, John Jay, Irving Paris, William Foulke, Edward de P. Livingston, and Edward N. Crosby. The ceremony will be celebrated at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon, and the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst will officiate. There will be a small reception, after the ceremony, at the house, for relatives only, and the whole affair, both wedding and reception, will be extremely quiet, as the bride's family is in mourning.

***

On Saturday Osborn W. Bright and Miss Joanna Shepard, daughter of Augustus D. Shepard and niece of the late Col. Elliott F. Shepard, will be married at the Shepard country residence, The Gables, at Fanwood, N. J.

The bridge whist tournament at Sherry's to-morrow afternoon in aid of the Jewell Day Nursey, and which promises to be very successful, is not yet closed to would-be subscribers, and subscriptions, at $5 each, may be sent to Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, 125 East Thirty-ninth Street, up to Monday noon. Among those who have already subscribed are Mrs. Edward Van Ingen, Mrs. James B. Taller, Mrs. Thomas Talmadge, Mrs. George Sheldon, Miss Lucie Draper, Mrs. William Manice, Mrs. John Terry, Mrs. Fellowes Morgan, Mrs. Charles Childs, Mrs. Adam Norrie, Miss Jennings, Miss Ethel Wickham, and Mrs. Frank Wellman. Members are allowed to select partners, but if they do not do so when writing the committee in charge will select partners for them. This tournament is open to any one who can play the game at all, and is by no means intended for experts only. The rules governing whist tournaments will be followed, under the direction of C. S. Street and E. T. Baker. The hours for the tournament are from 2:30 to 5 P. M., and the committee in charge are Mmes. Arthur M. Dodge, Louis L. Stanton, Charles E. Miller, Charles Steele, and H. H. Hollister.

The women who have been working to organize the fair to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria on Dec. 5 for the benefit of the Mothers and Babies' Hospital and Dispensary are well satisfied with the results of their labors. The last feature which has been added is a restaurant, where those who attend the fair may take tea or even dine. Some well-known girls in society have generously consented to act as waitresses on this occasion. In the evening there will be informal dancing, and owing to the fashionable patronage under which the fair is held, it is expected that this feature will prove successful and attractive. At the present date the special features of the bazaar will consist of: 1, the "zoo"; 2, the bench show; 3, the locomobile; 4, the gypsy encampment; 5, the doll table; 6, the flower table; 7, the wheel of fortune; 8, the Hungarian Band; 9, the sale of Christmas novelties; 10, the restaurant. Among other features the "zoo" now includes Angora guinea pigs that received first prize at the Madison Square Garden show; two prize rabbits, pedigreed Angora cats with light blue eyes, deaf sars, and silky tails; a donkey, Japanese goldfish, large apes and pocket monkeys, canaries, parrots, white mice, and Japanese robins. The list of the bench show includes a $1,000 French bulldog, a black poodle from Mr. Trevor's kennels, a white poodle from Mr. Jules Vatable, a full-blooded cocker spaniel from Mr. H. K. Bloodgood, wire-haired fox terriers, and other dogs. A locomobile will be shown and sold. The gypsy encampment will include a well-known professional fortune teller and many well-known society women in costume, who will sell baskets, rugs, Indian beads, &c. The doll tables will display over 200 dolls. Assisting at the flower table will be a real Geisha maiden, who will sell Japanese plants. The Hungarian Band will play from noon to midnight. The reception given yesterday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Gallatin (Miss Amy G. Gerry) at their Fifth Avenue residence to introduce their daughter, Miss May Gallatin, was attended by representatives from almost every family of position in New York society. Miss Gallatin and the girls who assisted her were gowned in pink, and pink flowers were used. There was no attempt at elaborate decoration. The girls who assisted Miss Gallatin in receiving were the Misses Elia de Peyster, Evelyn Parsons, Pauline Robinson, Nathalie Schenck, Helen Kountze, Eleanor R. Morris, Nellie Hard, Margaret Robison, Sibyl Kane, Mary Harriman, Katherine G. Pratt, Dorothy Edwards, Caroline de Saulles, and Nathalie Henderson. Since her marriage to Mr. McCormick she has often visited New York, spending several months at a time here. Yesterday's reception was not intended to be a large or formal affair, but was nevertheless largely attended. Mrs. McCormick was gowned in black lace over pale blue silk, Miss McCormick was in pale gray, spangled and trimmed with white lace, and the two younger girls were gowned in white crêpe de chine and white lace, respectively. Mrs. Charles Thorndike Parker also assisted her sister. The house was simply decorated with white and yellow chrysanthemums, and the table decorations were yellow. THE WEEK AT TUXEDO.

Special to The New York Times.

TUXEDO, N. Y., Dec. 1.—Miss Pierson of Ramapo, while driving through the park to-day, just escaped a serious accident. Two strangers in an automobile were racing through the park, when Miss Pierson encountered them at Alexander's Corner, on the lake. Her horse became frightened and ran away, throwing her out as well as a woman friend who was driving with her. The wagon was demolished and the automobile, in trying to get away from the frightened horse, reversed, ran up the high embankment, and was overturned. Miss Pierson and her friend were taken to the clubhouse, where the doctor was called, to find them only frightened and badly shaken. The wagon was found upturned and hanging on the fence on the edge of the lake.

Thanksgiving week was a gay one here. The cottages have been filled with guests, and almost every cottage had numerous entertainments. Mrs. Charles Alexander gave at her Tuxedo cottage a musicale on Thanksgiving Day to all the Tuxedo set. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander will return to their town house, 7 West Fifty-eighth Street, this week, for the Winter, coming to Tuxedo Saturdays and Sundays during the Winter. They have engaged rooms at the club. During the week many will leave their cottages here and will return to the city. Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Coats, who have been at the Van Cortlandt cottage, have vacated that cottage and are now stopping at the club. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Mortimer will move into their new villa, which has been completed, during the holidays. Mr. and Mrs. J. Frederic Tams gave a house party this week in honor of their guests, Mrs. Burke Roche, William C. Lovering, and Francis L. V. Hoppin, and Miss Frelinghuysen. Cornelius Bliss was the guest of Charles W. Gould at the club over last Saturday and Sunday. Pierre Lorillard, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. T. Suffern Tailer have gone South on a shooting trip. Mr. and Mrs. De Lancey Nicoll were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Henning at their cottage throughout the week. Mr. and Mrs. James Coats, who have just arrived from abroad, are stopping at Mr. and Mrs. George Gordon King's, on Tower Hill. Mr. and Mrs. King will close their cottage the coming week and return to New York.

The coming wedding of Miss Preston and Charles T. Hoffman, Jr., is being much discussed here. The wedding will take place at St. Mary's at noon on Dec. 29, and all the invited guests will then proceed to the new Tuxedo Winter Club, where the wedding breakfast will be served. The rooms at the club and annexes have all been engaged for the occasion.

THE AGNOSTIC TO THE UNKNOWN GOD.

O God! O Father of all things! O Lord and giver of life!
O fountain of peace and blessing! O centre of storm and strife!
The waves of thy will roll onward: I stand alone on thy shore:
I veil mine eyes in thy presence: I seal my lips—and adore.

Art thou not Force and Matter? Art thou not Time and Space?
Art thou not Life and Spirit? Art thou not Love and Grace?
Do not thy wings o'ershadow the whole and the humblest part?
Are not the world's pulsations the ebb and flow of thy heart?

O God! O Father of all men! O Lord of Heaven and Earth!
Shall we, who are dust before thee, exalt thy wisdom and worth?
Shall we, whom thy life embraces, set forth thy life in our creeds?
While the smoke of thy battle blinds us shall we read the scroll of thy deeds?

We spin the threads of our fancy; we weave the webs of our words;
But nearer to truth and knowledge are the songs of the quiring birds.
The rays of thy golden glory fall free through our nets of thought:
And all that we seek is hidden, and all that we know is naught.

How shall I kneel before thee who hast no visible shrine?
Is not the soul thy temple? Is not the world divine?
Will tower or transept tell me what the snow-clad mountains hide?
Is the surging anthem holier than the murmur of ocean's tide?

To whom hast thou told thy secret? On whom is thy grace poured out?
Whose lamp will direct my goings? Whose word will resolve my doubt?
Shall I turn to the sects and churches that teach Mankind in thy name?—
But the best is a mote in thy sunshine, a spark flung out from thy flame.

Slowly through all my being streams up from each hidden root
The sap of thy life eternal—streams up into flower and fruit.
Is this the truth that we dream of? We seek what we never shall know:
But the stress of thy truth constrains us when the springs of thy love o'erflow.

At night, when the veil of darkness is drawn o'er the sunlit blue,
The stars come out in the heavens, the world grows wide on my view.
At night, when the earth is silent and the life-waves cease to roll,
The strains of a deeper music begin to wake in my soul.

Is it then, O God! that we know thee—when the darkness comes—is it then?
When the surge of thought and passion die down in the hearts of men?
Is it then that we hear thy message? Is it then that we see thy light?
Is the sound of thy voice our silence? Is the sheen of thy face our night?

—EDMOND HOLMES in The Spectator.

THE "POM-POM" IN THE BOER WAR.

Capt. E. L. Zalinski in Cassier's Magazine.

The "pom-pom" is a one-pounder, automatic gun. It uses metallic cartridges similar to those used in small-arms, but of a calibre of 1½ inches, throwing a shell weighing one pound. The cartridges are placed in a looped belt, and this is attached to the gun. By a simple operation, one of the cartridges is inserted in the barrel and is fired by pulling the trigger. After this the force of recoil is utilized to continue the firing automatically as long as belts with cartridges are supplied.

Attempts were made to get this gun into the British service, but it was objected to on the ground that the projectile was unnecessarily large to kill a man and not large enough to be considered a piece of artillery. It was stated that an entire battery of these guns could be quickly put out of action by a single piece of field artillery, and that there was no place for them in either service. Had it been stated previous to the South African war that a British field battery of artillery could be put out of action by a single one-pounder in the hands of half a dozen farmers, the statement would have been regarded as ridiculous. There is no question that a single piece of field artillery would stand a very good chance of putting a one-pounder Maxim automatic gun out of action, on perfectly level field, with no cover. But the Boers did not fight these guns in that way. They did not come out into the open to fight. With a piece of artillery the charge is such that sufficient dust and gas are blown into the air to make the gun visible, even when using smokeless powder. It is difficult, also, to conceal a piece of artillery, with its horses and other accessories. Moreover, a piece of artillery recoils and has to be brought back into position and resighted after each discharge.

With a "pom-pom" the recoil is all taken up inside of a stationary casing, and but little of its force tends to displace the carriage. The gun does not, therefore, budge when it is firing. The gunner takes deliberate aim, guessing at the range. He fires about five shots, which can be done by holding the trigger in the "pull" position for about one second. As soon as the projectiles explode, he is able to observe exactly where he is hitting, and quickly readjusts his sight. After a few trials he is able to explode the projectiles on the exact spot required, and, as the recoil does not disturb the position of the gun, he can go on firing as long as he wishes.

ONE OF THACKERAY'S FEASTS.

From The Cornhill.

Perhaps the one feast which clings most closely to the reader's memory is that described by Thackeray in one of his charming essays; though how far this may be defined as a "feast in fiction" is a question for the casuist. The piece is, one fears, less known in these degenerate days than it deserves, and a quotation may be pardoned even by those persons of a right turn of mind who know their Thackeray. The dinner in question was eaten at the Café Foy—for whose locality the modern tourist will consult his Baedeker in vain. The account of this dinner is too long to quote in full, but one cannot refrain from extracting the bill of fare and the description of the beefsteak: "We had

Two entrecotes aux épinards.
One perdreau truffé.
One fromage roquefort.
A bottle of Nuits with the beef.
A bottle of Sauterne with the partridge.

"And perhaps a glass of punch, with a cigar afterward, but that is neither here nor there. * * * After the soup we had what I do not hesitate to call the very best beefsteak I ever ate in my life. By the shade of Heliogabalus! as I write about it now, a week after I have eaten it, the old, rich, sweet, piquant, juicy taste comes smacking on my lips again; and I feel something of that exquisite sensation I then had. I am ashamed of the delight which the eating of that piece of meat caused me. G. and I had quarrelled about the soup, * * * but when we began on the steak, we looked at each other, and loved each other. We did not speak, our hearts were too full for that; but we took a bit, and laid down our forks, and looked at one another, and understood each other. There were no two individuals on this wide earth—no two lovers billing in the shade—no mother clasping her baby to her heart—more supremely happy than we. Every now and then we had a glass of honest, firm, generous Burgundy, that nobly supported the meat. As you may fancy, we did not leave a single morsel of the steak; but when it was done, we put bits of bread into the silver dish, and wistfully sopped up the gravy. I suppose I shall never in this world taste anything so good again."

RICKETY CA ANZARO.

George Gissing in The Fortnightly Review.

Even when I had grown accustomed to the place, its singular appearance of incompleteness kept exciting my attention. I had never seen a town so ragged at the edges. If there had recently been a great conflagration and almost all the whole city was being rebuilt, it would have looked much as it did at the time of my visit. To enter the Post Office one had to clamber over heaps of stone and plaster, to stride over tumbled beams, and jump across great puddles, entering at last by shaky stairs a place which looked like the waiting room of an unfinished railway station. The style of building is peculiar, and looks so temporary as to keep one constantly in mind of the threatening earthquake. Most of the edifices, large and small, public and private, are constructed of rubble set in cement, with an occasional big, rough-squared stone to give an appearance of solidity, and perhaps a few courses of bricks in the old Roman style. If the building is of importance the work is hidden beneath stucco; otherwise it remains like the mere shell of a house, and is disfigured over all its surface with great holes left by the scaffolding. Religion supplies something of adornment; above many portals is a rudely painted Virgin and Child, often, plainly enough the effort of a hand accustomed to any tool rather than that of the artist. On the dwellings of the very poor a great cross is scrawled in whitewash. These rickety houses often exhibit another feature more picturesque and, to the earthly imagination, more consoling; on the balcony one sees a great gourd, some three feet long, so placed that its yellow plumpness may ripen in sun and air. It is a sign of plenty; the warm spot of color against the rough masonry does good to eye and heart.

THE OLDEST PICTURE BOOK.

From The Nineteenth Century.

The oldest picture book in our possession is the midnight sky. We stand out under the stars on some clear moonless night, and, looking upward, though no forms are visible, though it is only here and there that the natural grouping can by the utmost legitimate effort of fancy be made to fit some preconceived shape, yet we still seem to see the whole vast dome covered with mysterious frescoes. There in the north shine the two Bears, the unsleeping guardians of the pole. Between them winds the Dragon. There stands Cepheus the King, and by his side, in midstream of the Milky Way, is seated Cassiopeia, his Queen. The figures overhead and to the south change with the changing hours and seasons, and the December midnight brings us the most glorious show of all. There is Orion; following him are Sirius and Procyon, his dogs; above are the Bull and Twins; and higher still, Auriga and Perseus join Cassiopeia on the Milky Way. Andromeda, chained to her rock, lies beneath her boastful mother; while her enemy, the great Sea Monster, is sinking down below the western horizon. The April nights give the predominance to Arcturus, the most brilliant of the constellation of Bootes the herdsman, who stands with one hand stretched toward the Crown, the other toward the Great Bear. Beneath him lies the Virgin, while the Lion is rushing downward toward the west.

The Scorpion is the lord of the south during the short Summer nights, while the Lyre, with its bright blue jewel Vega, claims the zenith; and between, the two giant heroes, Ophiuchus and Hercules, spread their huge limbs. The September midnight is the time for Pegasus, and then the watery and fishlike constellations have their turn—the Dolphin, the Sea Goat, Aquarius with his stream and the southern Fish, the twin Fishes, and fair Andromeda's huge marine persecutor.

We seem to see these forms, though no form or semblance of the form is really there. For from a great antiquity men have looked upward to the heavens and have pictured thereon, in their own thought, certain forms which we have inherited from them by long tradition; forms which became so real to them that the stars themselves, on which they based them, seem to fade out or to be but as the nails which kept the pictures in position, while the forms remained the real objects which filled the heavens.

TO PREVENT TYPHOID IN AN ARMY.

From The Spectator.

Dr. Canney points out that hitherto attention has been solely fixed on the question of ameliorating the condition of the sufferers, whereas, if prevention is possible, amelioration is obviously of secondary importance. Going at once to the root of the matter, he declares that the worst of the typhoid epidemics—that after Paardeberg—being a natural and expected result, "will have to be handed down in the annals of military medical literature as a byword for retribution for neglect of sanitary laws." Typhoid, he continues, can be prevented wholly, and dysentery largely, by filtration or boiling of all water used for drinking purposes, and this being so, he proceeds to discuss the equipment necessary for applying these methods to the exigencies of an army in the field. Of the two, the quick-boiling apparatus is more efficacious, but presents the greater difficulties in regard to fuel, bulk, and weight. Thus, an army of 50,000 men would require 500 combined heaters and stoves, weighing about 22 tons and occupying 200 feet cubic space, plus the weight of 150 gallons of petroleum and 20 gallons of spirit used daily as fuel. But he contends that it would render the transport of vast typoid and dysentery hospitals unnecessary, and so vastly reduce the hospital equipment to be transported. In conclusion, Dr. Canney deals effectively with the objector who urges that "'Tommy' will drink when he likes." "There is not room," he says, "in our army for this laissez-boire theory."

IN MEMORIAM.

Christians Massacred in China, 1900.

Father of souls, that bade us go
Along these tangled ways of life,
Our souls are stronger for the strife,
Our joy is deeper for the woe.

The wind has torn the forest hem;
The rain has found the lily's heart;
Yet this is sweeter for the smart,
And that is stouter in the stem.

BASUTO CUSTOMS.

From Good Words.

With regard to the ordinary heathen burial, it was the Basuto custom to bury their dead in a sitting posture, and generally in their kraals, but this practice is becoming less common. They are indifferent regarding the graves of their dead, which are left unprotected by wall or fence.

Marriage by cattle, according to the well-known native custom, is universally practiced. The price of a wife is about fifteen head of cattle, though the value varies largely according to the circumstances of the case and the nature of the bargain. Polygamy is common, and exists along with many other old customs. One rather curious law, I believe, stipulates that when a man dies his wife or wives pass to the brother, who, if necessary, must support them, and in certain cases the burden is not light.

Another interesting ceremony I witnessed was a service for rain, which was badly needed at the time. It seems that the father of a missionary, whose memory was much respected, had been credited with the power of bringing rain, for it happened that rain had come on more than one occasion after his petitions. As the Basutos believe that the son inherits the spirit of his father, this missionary was supposed to have also the power of bringing rain. Notwithstanding the missionary's reluctance to encourage such superstition, he was urged to hold this service, and accordingly it took place in the open air under some large blue gum-trees. Lerothodi (the paramount chief) and over 2,000 natives, embracing many heathen, were present. A number had thin branches of the willow tree twisted around their heads with the leaves drooping down over their foreheads, while nearly all had "smeared" their skins with fat, making them shine like bronze in the bright sunlight. After the service, which was conducted in Basuto and lasted about two hours, Lerothodi, who was magnificently dressed in European costume, rode back to his settlement, and ascended the side of a hill opposite, proceeding, as was the custom, some distance in front of his followers. It was a curious picture to see this native chief wearing a silk hat, followed by a large escort of mounted natives clad in blankets!

HOW HE EARNED BREAKFAST.

Booker T. Washington in The Outlook.

I must have walked the streets (of Richmond) till after midnight. At last I became so exhausted that I could walk no longer. I was tired, I was hungry, I was everything but discouraged. Just about the time when I reached extreme physical exhaustion I came upon a portion of a street where the board sidewalk was considerably elevated. I waited for a few minutes to be sure that no passersby could see me and then crept under the sidewalk and lay for the night upon the ground, with my satchel of clothing for a pillow. Nearly all night I could hear the tramp of feet over my head. The next morning I found myself somewhat refreshed, but I was extremely hungry, because it had been a long time since I had had sufficient food. As soon as it became light enough for me to see my surroundings I noticed that I was near a large ship and that this ship seemed to be unloading a cargo of pig iron. I went at once to the vessel and asked the Captain to permit me to help unload the vessel in order to get money for food. The Captain, a white man, who seemed to be kind-hearted, consented. I worked long enough to earn money for my breakfast, and it seems to me, as I remember it now, to have been about the best breakfast that I have ever eaten.

CALLED TO PRAYERS.

From "Turkey in Europe." By Odysseus.

One hot night the Khoja slept on the veranda to be cool. He awoke, however, in a fright, and saw what he took to be a robber dressed in white climbing over the garden wall. He seized his bow and immediately sent an arrow straight through the imaginary burglar. On calm examination, however, he found that the white object was one of his own nightshirts which his wife had washed and hung on the wall to dry. The Khoja accordingly began to call out, "Praise be to God," and other religious exclamations, which awoke the neighbors, who mistook them for the morning call to prayer. Finding it still wanted several hours to sunrise, they surrounded the Khoja and indignantly inquired what he meant by his untimely piety. "I was thanking God," he replied, "that I was not inside my shirt when I shot an arrow through it."

MANY PROPOSALS.

From "The Story of My Life," by Augustus T. C. Hare.

Talking of the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, Lord Houghton said: "Miss Coutts likes me because I never proposed to her. Almost all the young men of good family did; those who did their duty by their family always did. Mrs. Browne (Miss Coutts's companion) used to see it coming, and took herself out of the way for ten minutes, but she only went into the next room and left the door open, and then the proposal took place, and immediately it was done, Miss Coutts coughed and Mrs. Brown came in again."

THE CHANGING SKIES.

A SONNET.

Form follows cloudy form across the sky;
In crystal seas float islands of delight;
Grand turrets seem to guard yon mountain's height;
Lo! there the folded flocks of evening lie;
Here rosy billows heave, and, breaking, sigh;
Archangels meet, and clash their sabres bright;
See! scarlet squadrons marshal in the night;
Pale wanderers' lamps the midnight glorify.

In my life's sky dream follows dream of thee:
The wild majestic pageant passes on—
Abodes, defenses, warriors, herds, fair seas,
Moods come and go; shape thou my destiny,
Thou who remain'st when all the dreams are gone—
My home, my strength, my glory, and my peace!
—ELIZABETH GIBSON in Chambers's Journal.

THE ENGLISH INTELLIGENCE DEPARTMENT.

Arthur Griffiths in The Forum.

There is, as a rule, no reluctance to help the military attaché. Foreign nations know the importance of reciprocity. They keep attachés in London who are always eager to learn. These are, as a rule, courteously treated, made free at the military clubs, are welcome guests at military messes, are invited to be present at professional functions, manoeuvres, experiments, and trials with new weapons. Some attachés, both our own and our neighbors', have become personæ gratæ in the countries with which they have been connected often for years. Two French officers were very popular with us, the Baron de Grandcourt and Count Pontavice de Heussey. Many English officers won golden opinions abroad. Gen. Swaine, who was long at Berlin, was much esteemed by all, from Kaiser to junker; so was Col. Grierson, who has just accompanied Count Waldersee to China. Gen. Slade, for many years military attaché at Rome, was admitted to close friendship by the ill-fated King Umberto, and a number of officers who served in Cuba learned greatly to like Lieut. Col. Lee, who shared their hardships, and is now military attaché in Washington.

The task of obtaining knowledge has no doubt been greatly helped in this way; but a zealous officer has been known to go sometimes beyond the official channels and deal, in re-rosa, with the secret agents that are often employed in the affairs of purveying exclusive news. There is more than one Esterhazy abroad ready to sell information, true or false; and it is a well-known fact that at the time Dreyfus became involved in the web which led to his expulsion from the French Army the very same matter which he was supposed to have sold was peddled about the Intelligence Offices of Europe. It was offered at Berlin, and brought to our own people in Queen Anne's Gate. The risk is great in tampering with these unavowable sources of supply. Some years ago a military attaché at a certain imperial Court got into trouble by listening to the specious proposal of one of these creatures. He was suddenly informed by his own Chancellery that his passports were ready, and that he had better make his way out of the country with all possible dispatch, as his Ambassador would have no power to protect him from arrest. Nevertheless, a good deal of confidential, not to say secret, information reaches our Intelligence Department by degrees, bit by bit, a small scrap at a time, so that all the items can be pieced together by an expert hand. There may be some matters still shrouded in mystery, a new form of explosive, or a new weapon, such as the French quick-firing field gun, which may long escape unraveling, but the desired information will come sooner or later.

CONSIDERATIONS ABOUT CHINA.

The Rev. Roland Allen in The Cornhill.

I remember two years ago, when the legations called for guards and the city was disturbed, a wild story going about that the Empress was resolved to invite the Foreign Ministers to an audience, have them all slaughtered before her, let loose the troops upon the foreigners in the city, and to commit suicide. I asked Chinese about that story, how it could possibly get repeated, and they all seemed to think it quite natural that people should believe that the Empress might do it. "It is better than being browbeaten by foreigners," they said. That despair of relief from the constant insolence of foreign nations, the coldness and hardness produced by seeing their country slowly torn to pieces, by feeling the old order passing away and a new order with which they were utterly out of sympathy come in, by feeling that the encroaching foreigner despised their ideals and hated their most cherished convictions, the sense that whatever they were in name, in fact they were slowly passing into slavery to a power which they hated and loathed, that they were falling before a force that knew no law of right as they knew right, that they were the laughing stock of the world, that before the world and before their own people they had no "face," that their armies, land, education, doctrine, were all being wrested from them, to be administered at the will of their enemies, such a feeling might well inspire them to grasp at the Boxer promises with the desperate hope that, with the aid of the gods, they might at last drive out the enemy, regain their old position, and at least be rulers in their own land.

Added to these were more ignoble motives. They loved the very faults of the old system, which they themselves confessed to be faults. They had grown up under a system of bribery and corruption; they drew their wealth from it. They were driven to maintain their position not only by pride, by inborn conservatism, by natural shame, but by the knowledge that change meant for them ruin and degradation. If they did not fight there was only one other choice possible—to accept reforms which they detested and to sit humbly at the feet of a people whom they despised as profane. The thing was impossible. Reform for them meant extinction. They preferred the counsels of despair. Their choice was foolish, but it was very natural. They preferred a momentary vengeance and annihilation to slavery. They failed even to get vengeance, and now the European nations are quarreling over the wreck and how they may best destroy the old China to create a new. The work is very necessary, but the matter of accomplishment is very sad.

SLAVERY IN ZANZIBAR.

From Alnslee's Magazine.

"It is this sea-borne traffic that is most difficult to suppress. Just now, (in December,) when the southwest monsoon sweeps the Indian Ocean, it is active. The lean dhows from Muscat steal along the coast, and, concealed in many a creek and river mouth, wait for their agents inland to bring them a cargo. Then, seizing a moment when the warship is engaged elsewhere, they slip out and dart eastward. The favorite girls are those captured from the Masai and the Boran Gallas, whose charms appeal to Arabian Moslems somewhat as those of the Circassian women do to the Turks. The Borans are particularly renowned for their beauty, and a slave thief will risk his life to obtain one. This tribe, which occupies the northernmost district of the Protectorate, is altogether swathed in romance. White men have never reached its capital where the stockade of the royal palace is said to be of pure ivory. The Boran warriors are the only ones in Africa who fight on horseback, and such is their valor that they have time and again repulsed the fierce Somalis from the border.

"The Masai girls are considered the equals of their Boran sisters in attractiveness, but not in refinement; the latter, rumor has it, practice the rites of Abyssinian Christianity and the lost arts of centuries past. The Masai girls are easier to capture, and are therefore more common. The tribe was formerly celebrated for its vast flocks and herds, but a devastating famine some years ago left it almost destitute. The warriors thereupon began a system of raiding on all sides, and another fierce tribe, the Wakikuyu, took advantage of their absence to descend on the Masai, kill off the old men, and steal all the women and girls. These are now being disposed of at comparatively low rates to local Arab or Swahili middlemen, who retail them at a big profit."

FAITH AND DOUBT.

From The Spectator.

A life of faith does not exclude the agonies of doubt. Faith presupposes a hypothesis strong enough to bear the whole fabric of a man's theories of life, and to support him in every question of conduct. Such a faith is as much as most of us can look for here. Thomas à Kempis, whose religious genius so often made him wider than his creed, and to whom the thoughts of many hearts were revealed in moments of painful uncertainty, expressed what we mean so much better than we are able to do as to tempt us to quote him at length, well known though every word of his writing is: "When one who often anxiously wavered between hope and fear was one day consumed with sadness he prostrated himself in prayer in church before a certain altar, and revolved these things within himself, saying: 'Oh, if I did but know that, I should persevere on and on.' All at once he heard within himself the divine answer: 'And what wouldst thou do if thou knewest this? Do now what thou wouldst do then, and thou wilt be safe enough.' And presently, being comforted and strengthened, he committed himself to the Divine will and his anxious wavering ceased. Neither had he a mind to search curiously to know what should befall him hereafter, but studied rather to inquire what was the acceptable and perfect will of God for the beginning and accomplishing of every good work."

MACAO.

From Blackwood.

Portuguese guardas civiles watch almost every corner with sword and pistol, and there is no admixture of the "Lokung" or Hongkong police, where they would be eminently useful, among a population concerning whom my China "boy" warns me, "Take care pocket. Macao man plenty thief, plenty pirate, plenty murder." The very shop inscriptions are more European than Chinese, one of incessant occurrence being "English first-class gaming house; Caza de Fantam de prima classe," a 4 a similar notice in Chinese. These hells were a source of much gain, and still more disrepute, to the local authorities. One which I investigated was an absurd parody of its sister hell, Monaco, with its hot and fetid atmosphere, its ostentation of honest dealing and order, and its meretricious decoration. Instead of green baize tables were brown paper-covered planks, around which were seated stark-naked Chinese croupiers, and for heaps of gold were piles of copper "cash." Here, too, were the sullen, feverish, crowding gamblers and the pushing spectators. Baskets of coin worked by pulleys were being constantly drawn up to, or lowered down from, an opening in the upper story—in fact, up the spout." The favorite game, fantam, is childishly simple.

Gambling here, as in Spain, is the national vice, and is more pernicious than opium or samshu (rice spirit;) yet the Portuguese do not hesitate to raise a large revenue from this polluted source, the percentage of items being:

Fantam licenses	25.0
Immoral houses	1.5
Lotteries	42.5
Taxes, cuetoms, and other sources	31.0
	100.0

The finance system is successful enough if dollars only be regarded. The receipts are considerably in excess of the expenditure, and are pocketed by Portugal.

ALUMINIUM CONDUCTORS.

From Cassier's Magazine.

The already practically foreshadowed widening use of aluminium conductors for electric transmission purposes adds interest to Lord Kelvin's recently expressed opinion of them. The weight of aluminium required, he said, is almost exactly one-half of the copper which would produce the same effect. The diameter of cable is 28 per cent. in excess of one made of copper, and the cost of insulation for an underground cable is increased in about the same proportion when we pass from copper to aluminium. Aluminium is not a pleasant metal to deal with, but its high conductivity will make it invaluable for overhead transmission. It is true also that the weight to be supported on posts is half of copper, but the surface exposed to the wind is greater, and its strength is not great. The chief drawback to its use, especially overhead, is its liability to become rotten. This defect does not exist if the metal be pure, and especially free from sodium. But exposure to the atmosphere, especially near the sea, induces deterioration. The fact that aluminium is easily oxidized ought not to condemn it. The same is true of iron and steel, and yet we do not hesitate to place structures of these metals in exposed positions; only we paint them. So Lord Kelvin proposes that we paint or varnish aluminium conductors wherever necessary. A few hundred yards of one-and-a-quarter-inch aluminium wire were put up by Lord Kelvin on a Scotch estate somewhat over a year ago, and on this line he is watching the effects of weather.

ON A PRAIRIE TELEGRAPH POLE.

Past mountain and foothill, plain and lake,
Where it links the East and West,
The tense wire tingles from sea to sea,
A river that runs unrest.

As a two-stringed harp of haste it throbs
With the rise and fall of States,
And sings through a land of sun and peace
Of far-off wars and hates.

Through a glimmering sea of waving green,
Of silence, and golden suns,
As a thread of pain in the woof of peace
From world to world it runs.

But the tales it tells are idle tales,
And the songs it sings are strange
To us who follow the glad, gold trail
Of the sun on the Open Range.

"ALL FISH."

From "The Story of My Life," by Augustus J. C. Hare.

Mrs. Thurlow says that Cardinal Wiseman went to dine with some friends of hers. It was Friday, but they had quite forgotten to provide a fast-day dinner. However, he was quite equal to the occasion, for he stretched out his hands in benediction over the table, and said, "I pronounce all this to be fish," and forthwith enjoyed all the good things heartily.

WHAT THE IRISH SING.

From The Nineteenth Century.

And what are the songs the Irish sing? The better educated or the more well-to-do of the people sing Moore's melodies or political ballads such as "The Rising of the Moon," "The West's Awake," "God Save Ireland," "The Wearing of the Green"—ballads which tell of the ancient glories and the modern woes of the country; but the songs which are most popular with the lower class of the Irish peasants are those rude and quaint effusions called "street ballads," from the fact that they are sung by the vagrant dealers in this form of literature, in the streets of towns and villages. They are also known as "Come all Ye's," because they often open with the words, "Come all ye sons of Erin," or "Come all ye pious Catholics," or "Come all ye tender lovers," according as patriotism, religion, or love forms the subject of the theme. These street ballads are a distinctive or national feature of Irish life. They are unknown, so far as I have been able to gather, in other parts of the kingdom. Printed on long, narrow slips of rough gray paper in worn and battered type, full of typographical errors, adorned with rude woodcuts having no relation whatever to the subject of the song, these ballads, in language devoid of rhyme and reason, often inflated and bombastic, sprinkled with grotesque classical allusions or florid and flowery turns of speech, (typical of the Celt's passion for rhetoric and high-sounding phrases,) deal with some political, agrarian, or religious events of the hour, or, failing these topical subjects, with the old, old story of romantic loves as it appeals to the mind of the Irish peasant. The makers of these ballads—itinerant vagabonds for the most part—are the bards of the humble cabins of Ireland. They are the only poets who have touched the hearts of the lower orders of the peasantry; and as they chant their ballads—for they are singers as well as poets—to old, familiar airs, at fairs, markets, sports, and political meetings, their effusions have a large sale at a penny or a halfpenny each.

LOOTING IN CHINA.

From Gunton's Magazine.

For an enterprise undertaken in behalf of civilization and humanity to drop promptly into pillage and devastation saps the moral strength of the whole proceeding. It entitles Chinese apologists to point the finger of scorn. It is easy to understand how invading soldiers, fresh from victory over a fanatical and cruel foe, and seeing on every hand the results of Boxer ravages, would most naturally act in the spirit of revenge and repay outrage with outrage, but for the military authorities of the allies to permit such proceedings is inexplicable. To say that it could not be helped entitles the Chinese to retort: Very well, if your organized and disciplined armies cannot be held in check by their own officers, how can you demand a penalty from us for failing to restrain these hordes of Boxers who recognize no authority? The Government, to be sure, was aiding and not restraining the Boxers; nevertheless, the Chinese are entitled to throw this reproach in the face of Christendom. We can only hope that the reports have been exaggerated and that stern measures were and are being applied. At least, it seems assured, from the replies to inquiries made at once by our War Department, that American soldiers were not implicated in the looting of Tien-Tsin; and it is hard to believe that the same will not prove true of our men in Peking when the facts become known.

A COUNTRY BREATH.

A hay-load in the city square,
The sweets of a whole Summer fair,
In one rude wagon piled;
The fragrant breath of swarm, still rains,
The scents of strawberries in green lanes,
Faint petals blown from roses wild.

And straightway all the bustling place
Is filled with some enchanted grace,
And tinkling with the notes
Of field larks, and of silver streams,
Of south winds, murmuring their dreams,
Through airy aisles of oats.

My lady in the gilded shop
Lets all the tawdry trinkets drop,
And through the magic sees
A dooryard sweet with mint and phlox,
And pink with ruffled hollyhocks,
That nod to belted bees.

The sooty laborer with a thrill,
Plucks shamrocks on an Irish hill,
A gamin cheers and chaffs;
All busy footsteps pause a bit,
Somewhere is toil by clear skies lit,
A sunburnt world that laughs.

And long and long the sweetness stays,
And cheers and cools the heated ways,
Like happy news from home,
Till the pale moon and misty stars
Look down as if, by meadow bars,
Their rays touched clover bloom.

But little recks the countryman,
Bound homeward on his empty van,
Along the closing marts,
What store he brought with him to-day,
Or whats, within a load of hay,
Could touch so many hearts.
—SUSAN HARTLEY SWETT, in The Youth's Companion.

MUSICAL SOUNDS FROM SAND.

From Chambers's Journal.

Perhaps the most interesting experience of musical sands is that recorded by Kinglake in his journey across the desert. He says: "As I drooped my head under the sun's fire and closed my eyes against the glare that surrounded me, I slowly fell asleep—for how many minutes or moments I cannot tell; but after a while I was gently awakened by a peal of church bells—my native bells—the innocent bells of Marlen, that never before sent their music beyond the Blagdon Hills! My first idea naturally was that I still remained fast under the power of a dream. I roused myself and drew aside the silk that covered my eyes and plunged my bare face into the light. Then, at least, I was well enough awakened; but still those old Marlen bells rang on, not ringing for joy, but properly, prosily, steadily, merrily ringing for church. After a while the sound died away slowly."

Kinglake thought he had been the victim of a hallucination; but it is probable that he heard actual musical sands, either issuing from the rocks beneath the sand, or caused by the friction of the particles of sand over which the travelers were walking, as in the case of a curious mountain which Darwin visited in Guiana. It is called by the natives El Bramador—or the Bellower—because of the sound given forth when the sand covering it is put in motion.

DRINK IN SOUTH AFRICA.

From The Contemporary Review.

But of all the wrongs in regard to natives and their labor in the Transvaal none come near to the scandals of the liquor trade. The laws restraining it are excellent on paper, but their administration is infamous. They prohibit the sale to natives; but they are broken wholesale. The profits are enormous; to the inexperienced Kafir the sensation of getting drunk is a novelty, something too grand to be resisted. The Government sells drink licenses, and all nationalities are more or less engaged in the illicit traffic. There have been some 150,000 natives in the mines, earning, say, £40 or £50 a year in wages. Their one temptation to expenditure is drink. Vile spirits are sold to them on wage days, manufactured in Johannesburg itself, underground, or imported from the East Coast, and worth perhaps 2d. per gallon, are charged 4s. 5s., 15s. A native, when he is paid, will buy a bottle of this poison, drink it in an hour or two, and go mad for a week. They go mad with drink, jump about, and are beside themselves, ready for murder or anything else. Under the drink influence natives employed in different mines frequently have regular battles, especially on Sunday, when work is stopped, and many have been killed. Now, the mine owners have made every effort to get this trade stopped. It is exceedingly injurious to their business; they have to allow for perhaps a third of their men on the average, being drunk and absent from work all the time. On numbers of mines the whole difference between profit and loss depends upon passing the average quantity of rock through the mill every week. If the average is not reached—that is, if the men are not there to keep the mill constantly going—it is a loss.

THE NEED FOR HORSEMANSHIP.

R. B. Cuningham Graham in The London Daily Chronicle.

We hear of cavalry in the Transvaal kept sitting for long hours on their horses without dismounting even at a halt; we hear of men surprised by the Boers, unable to scramble to their horses' backs and to escape, and the civilian who has lived with horses groans in spirit, and thinks of the times out of number, on a long march, in which he has eased his own horse by getting off, and walking by his side, and of how easily a second whip jumps on his horse's back even when hounds are running, and though his horse is struggling to break loose. Nothing can be more inartistic and less practical than the way a cavalry instructor teaches a man to mount. The pause with the full weight thrown on the stirrup leather, the leg stiff as a gatepost passed across the horse's back, and then the bounding whack with which it hits the horse on the off side, would be ridiculous if in the circumstances they were not lamentable. Look at a lot of Irish boys in Galway on their three-year-olds tied at the outside of the village public house; they all come out, some of them perhaps half drunk, and in a moment are on their horses and away, without a fuss, no thumping of their horses' off flanks for them, no standing in their rotten stirrup leathers mended with pack thread, but in a single motion they are on their horses' backs. The heads and posts, the tent pegging, the leaping exercises, to rupture men and damage horses' legs, will be seen only in their proper place—the traveling circus; leaping itself all horsemen should accustom themselves to, but it is not an exercise likely to be useful with a tired, half-fed, overweighted charger in the field, and therefore falls into the category of a mere exercise, pleasant and pretty in itself in piping times of peace.

THE CHARTER REVISION.

The optimism of the charter revisers is not less confident, but is more cautious and better justified than that of the charter authors. If they listen with credulity to the whispers of fancy and pursue with eagerness the phantoms of hope it is in a learned and experienced way. With the failures of the present charter before them for warning and instruction they could not be foolishly credulous or thoughtlessly eager. They have confidence in the people, and we know of no other rule of guidance for the givers of organic law in self-governing communities. The original Charter Commission thought the double legislative body an imperative necessity, and it thought there was safety in having a large local Legislature, because "experience shows that it is more difficult to corrupt, to mislead, and to form pernicious combinations in large than in small legislative bodies." The disproof of this precept has been almost ludicrous in volume and character. The Municipal Assembly as now constituted has been unintelligent, obstructive, and contemptible. The revisers very wisely propose that the Council shall be abolished. That is surely good and desirable. But in advising that the Board of Aldermen be enlarged to 120 members and that its powers be increased they yield to the conviction "that if the voters of the city can be compelled to rely solely upon themselves a better public spirit will be aroused and a better class of men will be returned to the local Legislature as the opportunities of its members for useful public service are increased." This is the only theory upon which the revisers could proceed; but we know that the issues of our local elections are often confused and that our hopes of "better men" are blasted by the weakness of the electorate in yielding to considerations of an alien but paramount nature. Mr. PLATT's exploit in the Mayoralty election of 1897 will remain a conspicuous instance of the failure of the better-men theory; and in the People's Municipal League campaign of 1890 the prominence of some of our public-spirited clergymen in the fight alarmed a certain class of voters who feared that their customs would be interfered with, insomuch that they gave the victory to Tammany, cheerfully putting the issue of Sunday beer above the issue of pure government.

Nevertheless the revisers of the charter have visibly been mindful of the fact that the instrument they submit to the Legislature is to be subject to the ordinary risks and accidents of terrestrial administration. It has been their aim to confer great power, concentrate responsibility, and provide safeguards. The principle is sound and their work is sound. The blemishes, the instances in which they have taken undue risks or shown themselves to be untaught by experience, are so few as hardly to deserve special mention. They have very wisely emphasized the public confidence in the one department of the City Government that has in good and evil times least often disappointed the expectation of the people—the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. Under the revised charter, if the amendments are adopted, this board will be the real governing body for the city. Its members will all be elected officers, and by the system of cumulative voting the just balance of power between the boroughs will be preserved; while the controlling vote will be in the hands of the Mayor, the Controller, and the President of the Board of Aldermen, all three of whom are elected on a general ticket by the voters of the whole city. The great powers of the board will be exercised under a sense of responsibility to the people of the whole city, but subject also to the influence exerted by the local appeals of the Borough President members. One of the most costly abuses of Tammany rule is provided against by giving to the Board of Estimate and the Board of Aldermen the power to fix the salaries of all persons drawing pay from the city.

The treatment of the problem of the Borough Presidents is ingenious and of good promise. At present these functionaries are useless. The revisers give them something to do, and raise the office to such dignity and possibilities of usefulness that men of capacity, instead of imbeciles, will be attracted to it. Here, too, the opportunity was seized to make due provision for the varying needs of the boroughs in respect to local improvements, matters which necessarily call for local knowledge and interest in a municipality so little homogeneous as a city that includes rural Richmond, the village communities of Queens, and the urban population of Manhattan and Brooklyn under one government. The abolition of the Board of Public Improvements, which has never justified its creation, and the grant of new powers to the Local Improvement Boards, which can now act by resolution, subject only to the approval of the Borough President and of the Board of Estimate, are highly commendable changes.

The recommendation of a single Commissioner at the head of the Police Department is, of course, what every intelligent and disinterested citizen has prayed for these many years. The power of the Mayor to remove the Police Commissioner summarily is an important safeguard, and the Commissioner's power to go outside the uniformed force in choosing a Chief of Police is likely to be productive of good results. As a necessary condition of this change to a single-headed Police Department the revisers provide for a separate Bureau of Elections. The recommendation for the repeal of the Ramapo act is a matter about which no honest man will have any doubt whatever. The assumption by the State of the right to impound and sell water to municipalities might solve some difficulties. It is a system that would not be without obvious disadvantages for this city, which has so often experienced the selfish and rapacious hostility of the rural legislator.

The revisers have confined their labors to a patching up of the old charter. They have had the very great advantage over the authors of that instrument of two years' observation and experience of the faults and failures of its provisions. They have done their work with conservatism and intelligence. The machinery of the City Government would certainly work better under their charter than under the present charter. That fact gives us no assurance whatever that their amendments will be adopted by the Legislature. That is a matter to be determined by Mr. THOMAS C. PLATT.

GUARDING THE GUARDIANS.

The conviction that the police force must be reformed before any serious results can be obtained in the repression of vice in this city is by no means confined to the men who want to see the work done. In a remarkable interview with a reporter of The Evening Post, MARTIN ENGEL, the leader of Tammany in the Eighth District, made these significant remarks:

"Titus has closed a few houses. There's one," and he pointed to a dirty yellow brick house with window blinds drawn. "That's closed, ain't it? Not on your life," he burst out. "The blinds is down. That's all. Business is goin' on while that copper is standin' there like a cigar-store Injun. Now, what's the use of all that? They're the appearance of bein' closed, see; that's all. You can buy any copper for 50 cents, you know; but I don't know any of them men. They're from Harlem may be, but you bet your life they wasn't an hour on the job till they was fixed."

We are far from believing the allegations of Mr. ENGEL. In the same interview he made a number of others which were manifestly untrue, and which openly contradicted each other. Doubtless there are individual policemen who can be bribed. The demoralization to which they have been exposed has been persistent and extreme, and it would be extraordinary indeed if some of them did not try to profit from the kind of corruption they see going on and of which they are compelled to be the agents. But we are convinced that the greater number of them would prefer to preserve their self-respect. We are still more firmly convinced that an honest head of the force could make all individual corruption practically impossible within a short time. It is not the "coppers" who, Mr. ENGEL thinks, can be bought for a small sum each who are the responsible persons in this matter, even though they were the majority of the force. It is their superiors and the political organization which controls their superiors.

One of the members of the Committee of Fifteen, to whose views we have already referred, Mr. BALDWIN, says that the motto of the committee should be "Permanency, Publicity, and Non-Partisanship." In regard to the second point in the motto, publicity, he is persuaded that the names of all persons who are responsible for the conditions existing in the city should be published by the committee as fast as they have sufficient evidence concerning them. He expects that this would involve a number of libel suits, but is prepared for them. Unquestionably publicity and very complete publicity is absolutely necessary to the accomplishment of the work of the committee. If proper care is taken as to the form and degree of the evidence there is little risk in the process. The thing most important to make public is the evidence itself. The committee will not have to be confined to stating its opinion of the guilt or responsibility of individuals, in other words, to making accusations. That may or may not be required. What can be done with excellent effect is to make public the evidence collected by the committee in such form as shall be most expedient, and let the public draw its own conclusions. Of course the committee will be guided by competent counsel in obtaining and in using evidence. Mr. BALDWIN is quite right in thinking that the remedy for all remediable evil with which the committee will have to deal is to turn on the light.

A HOPEFUL SIGN.

Mr. ODELL made a little speech to his friends and neighbors gathered to do him honor the other night, which indicates that he has his eyes wide open to certain things which have not lately attracted the attention of Republican leaders of the "organization." He announced his faith in Newburg as the site for a great shipbuilding plant, and said he was willing to back his faith with an investment in the project.

We do not know exactly what are the present advantages that the town so nobly situated at the northern entrance to the Highlands enjoys for shipbuilding, except the wide stretch of deep water which faces it and the deep channel by which it can send its products to the sea at the port of New York. But it will be remembered that one of the features of the admirable report of the Greene commission on the improvement of the canals was a careful and convincing exposition of the manner in which the canals, made adequate to large barges, could bring the iron and the coal of the West to precisely this point for the establishment of the shipbuilding industry there. We take the speech of Mr. ODELL as evidence that he has been considering this among other facts in connection with the canals and their relation to the trade and industry of the State. It is usual to regard the development of the State water ways as a question concerning only the transportation of the traffic originating in the West to the seaboard and return, but no one can study the painstaking and comprehensive report of the Greene commission without being convinced that the cost of the improvement recommended would in large part be compensated by the development of trade along the line of the canals and within the boundaries of the State. The possibilities at Newburg are but one example of those involved in the broad scheme of the commission.

We are glad to see, also, that the Governor-elect has determined to reappoint Mr. PARTRIDGE as Superintendent of Public Works. He could hardly have made a better selection, even if Mr. PARTRIDGE had not had the inestimable advantage of experience in his first term. Mr. PLATT last week took occasion to say in public that he considered Mr. ALDRIDGE as quite fitted for any place in the appointment of the Governor. That gave the friends of the canals a little shiver. It indicated that the public works might again be turned over to Mr. ALDRIDGE's tender mercies. That danger is dissipated.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC "FEDERATION."

That was a curious announcement in Friday's papers of the formation of a "Roman Catholic Federation" throughout the United States. To any reflective reader it must have seemed mainly curious because so superficially superfluous. The Roman Catholic Church—and we use the prefatory adjective simply because there are other organizations that arrogate to themselves the word "Catholic"—seems already to amount to a Federation. It is one of the most important federations in the United States, and, we make haste to add, one of the most influential. It is also one of the most beneficent. If we were required to bound its beneficence, we should say that the limitation of it was to be found in its tacit assumption that "no good thing could come out of Nazareth"; that every undertaking for the amelioration of social or political conditions that might be projected would have to have, in the first place, some authorization that would secure its exclusiveness, before it could secure the sanction of the Church, or "Federation."

That is an important matter in this community at this moment. Of course, the Roman Catholic Church is opposed to vice. But evidently the exclusive efforts of that Church are not able to suppress vice, or even to keep it within bounds. A Roman Catholic Federation, to co-operate with Protestants and Jews, and Agnostics—of whom there are not many on the east side—would be very warmly welcomed by all the workers in this field.

But this does not seem to be at all the purpose of the Catholic Federation. Its purposes extend, like its organization, throughout the whole limits of the United States. Though we have no authentic or official source of information about its objects, or rather because we have not, such expressions as that we have printed from Father WALL have a value. That one class of American citizens should band together against every other class is a phenomenon not easily explicable, and any explanation is more welcome and valuable than none. According to Father WALL, "there is no doubt that Catholics are being discriminated against." This is news to most of us. The reverend Father's instances, in support of this surprising contention, are that the agreement of the United States with the Church, in respect to Indian schools, "has not been lived up to"; that Catholic churches in the Philippines have been looted by the American troops; and that Gen. WOOD, as commander of Cuba, "has refused to recognize a marriage solemnized by the rites of the Catholic Church."

We are bound to say that these alleged grievances are far from furnishing any reason for the formation of a laic and civic organization of the members of one religious denomination against the members of all the others. The redress of grievances, of the character of those alleged, if it cannot be obtained by proper representations and appeals to the American sense of justice, must be secured by votes at the polls; and the want of a proper "solidarity" of the Roman Catholic vote has never, that we know of, been charged. In the next place, the specific complaints of discrimination seem to us to be captious or frivolous. Of the charge of a breach of faith, on the part of the United States, in the matter of the Indian schools, we never happened to hear, in this particular form, until we came upon it in this statement. That may be simply the result of our own ignorance, which we admit to be great. But we are quite convinced that an appeal to the justice and good sense of the American people would be far more efficacious than the formation of a sectarian "Federation" toward securing the redress of this grievance, even if it be substantial. The second grievance alleged we have no hesitation in declaring to be frivolous. It is without doubt true that some months ago American troops, ill-instructed in the sensibilities of their Roman Catholic fellow-citizens, did what a pious Roman Catholic not instructed as to the particular circumstances would regard as amounting to a desecration of certain churches in the Philippines. But not one of these desecrations was intended or authorized as a desecration. Moreover, as to most of them, it has been fully explained that the churches were abandoned churches, in respect to which the notion of desecration would no more have occurred to a Filipino or Spanish or informed American Catholic than it did occur to the soldiers who made military use of them. As to the grievance of the American commander in Cuba's refusing to recognize Church marriages, and requiring evidence of a civil contract, his course has been precisely that of some of the most Catholic countries of Europe, which make a discrimination between marriage as a civil contract and marriage as a religious ordinance. We are quite unable to see in Father WALL's list the statement of a substantial grievance, and much less the statement of a grievance which would justify the civic enrollment and separation from their fellow-citizens, in a "Federation" of their own, of any Roman Catholics who were also patriotic American citizens.

A NEW JUSTIFICATION FOR HOMICIDE.

However we may ridicule it, hypnotism is assuming an aspect in its relation to medical jurisprudence which makes it a proposition to be reckoned with. A few days ago, in Red Bud, Ill., a young man deliberately shot and killed another young man. The murder was premeditated, since the murderer had openly declared his intention to kill his victim on sight, and made his promise good on the first occasion which offered. After the shooting the murderer surrendered to the Sheriff. His explanation of the occurrence was that the man he shot "had hypnotized him to his detriment." The Coroner's jury seemed to be satisfied with the explanation as good and sufficient, for they promptly exonerated the prisoner. This tends to establish hypnotism, when practiced to the detriment of the subject, as making homicide justifiable, or at least excusable. Of course, one Coroner's jury does not make the law, but its finding is at least significant as showing that the popular conception of hypnotic influence is likely to be given weight by juries in murder cases, if skillfully presented.

Fortunately for the hypnotists, they would seem to have the matter pretty much in their own hands. They must not become careless, however, nor omit to keep their subjects well supplied with suggestions calculated to divert their minds from what may be a natural homicidal impulse. They would do well to dwell as much as possible upon the beatitudes. It will not do to "work" the subject to his disadvantage, pecuniary or otherwise, for he may have lucid intervals during which, if neglected by his director, he may develop a desire to sever the relation somewhat abruptly.

Seriously, what is there in hypnotism? How much of truth is mixed with the deluge of nonsense in which its curious psychological phenomena have been wrested into recent prominence? The charlatans and fakirs who have chiefly posed as its exponents cannot answer these questions to the satisfaction of any one. It would seem to be a problem in medical jurisprudence worth serious investigation.

GENERAL NOTES.

On the day before Thanksgiving there were twenty more marriage licenses issued in Baltimore than on any previous day in the history of the city bureau. Prosperity continues to do its effective work.

Pennsylvania's fiscal year closed Nov. 30, and the State rejoices that its income was the largest in any year of its history. The receipts amounted to $17,494,211.78, an increase of over $2,000,000 over the preceding year.

It is stated that ex-Attorney General Wayne MacVeagh has changed his residence from Pennsylvania to Washington and has leased a house in the capital, intending to make it his permanent home. Some Pennsylvanians think he may again become Attorney General.

Unless The Columbia (S. C.) State has erred in its calculation, and that is not likely, the 50,000 votes cast in South Carolina for President and Congressmen at the November election cost the State a little over 40 cents each. The Controller General borrowed the money to pay the bills.

The Illinois Historical Society, which was chartered last May, has appointed a committee to collect State historical relics and materials, and advises the organization of county and town societies, to be auxiliary to the State society. Several counties have already acted favorably upon the suggestion.

The Mobile (Ala.) Register, since the election, dismisses the topic of fusion with the blunt remark that "it means a sacrifice of principle for pap." It must be conceded that The Register during the campaign apparently made the sacrifice very reluctantly.

Negroes are attempting to establish a line of steamships between Philadelphia and the Republic of Liberia, to be known as the West African Trading Company. The Rev. William H. Heard, formerly United States Consul General at Liberia, heads the movement. A meeting for organization is called to be held in Philadelphia Jan. 10.

The Philadelphia Ledger says that Postmaster General Charles Emory Smith's decision to comply with President McKinley's request to remain in the Cabinet after March 4 next is "gall and wormwood" to the supporters of ex-Senator Matthew S. Quay in Philadelphia. They look upon it as an indication that Quay's power is waning and that he has less "influence" at the White House than they had believed.

W. H. Cummings, who for ten years past has been Principal of the ancient Kimball Union Academy, at Meriden, N. H., has resigned because of ill-health, and has been succeeded by Ernest Rolston Woodbury. The academy has an honorable and enviable history, having existed for nearly ninety years, and offered especial opportunities to worthy young men and women of limited means. Mr. Samuel L. Powers of Boston has lately presented to the academy an athletic field.

LOW WAGES AND VICE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apropos of the letter of Maud Nathan in your issue of this date—Nov. 27—during the Parkhurst era a few years ago it was asked of one of the heads of the police force at that time what could be considered the chief causes of prostitution, and in answer one of the greatest reasons given was—miserable wages paid by employers. The wonder is not that any such state of affairs exists, but that it is not infinitely worse.

It is to the everlasting credit of working-women that such an overwhelming majority of them are the clean, bright, upright, conscientious, Christian women they are. A business man once said to me: "There are men getting rich, piling up money, at the expense of their help—getting rich by robbery, for it is nothing else. The man who pays his help insufficient wages is a robber, and gets his wealth unjustly." I looked at him in helpless amazement, for to my most certain knowledge that man was at the very time paying his girls—he had a wholesale and retail confectionery business—the sum of 50 cents a day; and at holiday time they worked till 10 o'clock and later, and got no extra money for it.

The highest paid help in his store got $7 a month only, and they were two of the best and truest women I ever knew in my life. He was making money rapidly at the time, and has become very wealthy as time has gone on. And I doubt not that there are, as Maud Nathan says, leading business men in this present movement for clearing the city of vice who pay a wage to their help that is only an invitation to the very prostitution they are trying to abolish.

Do the rich employers of this city ever look at their own and think, "How would I like it if she, my daughter, my wife, my sister, had to stand on her feet all day, moil and toil all her too short evenings to keep her scanty clothes clean and whole, and thus day after day and night after night work without ceasing at something or other, or else neglect herself, and even then be only half clothed, half cared for?" Would they like the thought of these, their beloved, making $5 or $6 or $7 a week do for food, clothing, medicine, fire, shelter, fares, all the constantly arising expenses of the passing days?

On an elevated train one day I overheard father and mother and daughter talking, the daughter meanwhile twirling an expensive bracelet that must have cost what would having been a workingwoman's salary for weeks, and she said "N. is working at —'s now—she is getting $6 a week; that is very good, really."

I looked at the speaker's fine clothes and jewelry and at the equally overdressed parents, and wonder how far $6 a week would go toward making them comfortable. There are thousands of women to-day, clothed in purple and fine linen and faring sumptuously, looking down in contempt on workingwomen, who have their useless luxuries at the expense of these very workingwomen, nobler far than they. If living wages were paid there would not be such great dividends on capital, but with the more equal distribution of the comforts of life happiness would be increased more generally.

Oh, the grinding drudgery of the lives of the ill-paid—longing for time to read, to get out into the country, to have a little better between the days of toil, to have something of the real sweetness and brightness of living, to really live, and not exist only, to have somewhat of the beauty of life and not all its seamy side; oh, for a surcease of waiting, waiting, and doing without at last! It was once told a business man by a friend of his, a workingwoman who had uphill work indeed, and to whom life was a struggle for even the commonest necessities, that she had spent during the entire year but $27 on dress, including everything, shoes, headwear, and all, and she was a woman who had to go to her work well attired.

He replied characteristically: "M., I spend more than that—yes, four times that—on cigars alone." There is a girl, as good a girl as walks this city, who is one of many more employed in one of the large stores of this city. She is proficient at her work, and gets paid as well as any of them, and that is the munificent sum of $7 a week. She pays half of that to a relative for board. She has extra carfare, and that means at least a dollar a week. She has to get her luncheons besides. She has left about $2 a week for clothes and all other necessities. Her position demands that she look well. She spends her little spare time in mending, turning, making old into new, and is often too tired to hold herself up. But, oh! the great fortunes that are built up on these structures of human flesh and blood!

And of what avail are your great charities, your churches, your libraries, your hospitals, when they are built by money screwed out of the laborer? If the laborer were properly paid there would not be need of all these hospitals. What avail are great buildings erected for self-aggrandizement on money wrung from the heart's blood of the underpaid poor? Who can wonder, then, at women, seeing all the injustice, toiling till brain and body are alike faint, turning with all their natural love for the beautiful, with all their natural love for care, to that which beckons and allures, false as it is? Woe be unto the whited sepulchres that hold back an honest wage with one hand while they allure with the other!

And may all employers everywhere learn the full force of the Bible denunciation of him who oppresses the hireling in his wages. The blood of many a man and woman cries from the ground against the oppressor this day. And it will do little permanent good for these men in this movement, those who are consistent and those who are not, to attempt to stop this evil, even in a degree. An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure. You may uplift those now down, in a measure at least, but where is the lasting good if you do not stop the causes?

The men who want to make this city better cannot do a greater thing toward it than to immediately begin to pay at once a living wage to every man and woman they employ; to give them as he would wish to have himself, doing like work. Hours of work should be shortened, and two "shifts" taken on, thus employing thousands more people. There might not be—and possibly there might—such large dividends for stockholders, but the dividends in the way of righteousness and happiness and peace and blessing would be incalculable. Let the employer get nearer to his help. There will be less need of his going on vigilance committees in the city at large. PATRICIA.

Higher Pay for Women Urged.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your paper has come to me every morning for over a year, and I have enjoyed the perusal of its clean and instructive pages.

Physicians say every disease has a cause, and if they succeed in getting at the cause the disease is invariably cured.

The vice and degradation of our city is certainly to be deplored. But from what and where does it spring? What causes this evil, this loathsome leprosy? One, I am sure, is low salaries. If these righteous gentlemen would kindly work out the problem how any woman who receives for her services $7 or $8 per week, out of which board, carfare, laundry, and luncheons have to be taken, can exist, let alone live, in New York City, one great agent of unrighteousness would disappear.

It would be well for every clergyman in this city to take for his text some Sunday morning the six verses of the fifth chapter of James. L. S.

COLD CARS AND STATIONS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Possibly through the columns of your paper I may arouse the traveling public to the fact that we have some rights, as well as the corporations, who hold such valuable franchises as the Long Island Railroad, Brooklyn Rapid Transit, and Metropolitan Railroad. In the cold snap of two weeks ago I had occasion to go to New York and took the Myrtle Avenue surface line at Richmond Hill. There was no warmth in the car, and when I reached Ridgewood I asked the motorman of a Greene and Gates car which of the lines was warm. He said, "Oh, this is, get in." which I did, and found it just as cold as the other and the door left open. I asked him to shut it, which he did not do, and when I got up to do so, he took hold of my arm, saying: "That door will be shut when I think it is best, and not before."

So we all shivered all the way to the New York side. There I took a Fourth Avenue electric car, and the conductor left that door open. When I spoke to him he said it probably would be open all the way up. I said, "No, it won't"—and it wasn't.

Yesterday I waited in the Long Island station for one hour, and found there was no fire in the waiting room, and as I was suffering from a bad cold, I felt it very much. At last I asked one of the officials if there was no place where I could go and keep warm. He said he believed there was heat in the ladies' room, and so I tried that.

"Ladies' room!" Heaven save the mark! A bare room with stone floor, and the door wedged open, and when I felt of the radiator, by a stretch of the imagination I could believe that some time in the dark ages there had been a fire. Then I went out into the sunshine. As soon as the train was called I went into it, and found that just as cold. When I spoke to the conductor he told me "it was warm enough."

It seems to me that the rates of travel on this road are high enough to warrant common comforts and no impertinence.

A SUFFERER.

Richmond Hill, L. I., Nov. 29, 1900.

THE PRICE OF GAS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to your editorial in this morning's paper, entitled "The Consolidated Gas Monopoly," I wish to say that I see no reason why the people of this city should not be, as you put it, "stirred up" over this outrage just as much as they were over the iniquitous Ice Trust; and not only "respectfully" ask the Gas Trust to "go slow," but compel it to go very much slower and give us gas very much lower, not in quality, as they are doing, but in price.

For about one and a half years previous to the consolidation of the Consolidated and New Amsterdam Companies we were furnished with gas at 65 cents per thousand feet, and as soon as they combined they immediately raised the price to $1.05 per thousand, the full limit of the law.

They say they lost money when they sold it at 65 cents, but I know that all during that period of cheap gas the Consolidated Gas Company paid 4 per cent. on its watered capital stock, and I am at a loss to know how they could pay dividends if they were losing money.

I do not say that 4 per cent. is sufficient compensation for the use and risk of their money, but I do say when they add 40 per cent. more, bringing it to 44 per cent., that that is entirely too much. Why should they are not satisfied with, say, 15 per cent.?

I know, from my own experience, that the gas has not only become poorer, but that my gas bills for the past two months, burning about the same amount of gas, have been almost one-third higher than before, but I and others in my circumstances are obliged to use this gas or grope in the dark, and I think it is a shame that any company should be allowed to bleed the poor people (whose streets they are using) in this manner.

Why would it not be a good scheme for your valuable paper, and other papers interested in the welfare of our citizens, to employ Gov. Roosevelt's proposed method of doing away with trusts, that is, to give them publicity, and a lot of it, because if you only give them a little it will be of no use whatever, but if your paper and the other papers of this city, except, or course, those which are interested in trusts, would take this matter up you would soon compel them to give us gas at a reasonable figure.

I am not an Anarchist, as some may think, and I believe the gas companies should make more than 4 per cent., but I don't believe they should make 44 per cent.

JAMES CONWAY.

New York, Nov. 28, 1900.

UNION WITH BOSSES OPPOSED.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your editorial of to-day, headed "Co-operation with Mr. Platt," you quote President Cutting's remark as to how to make Mr. Platt "affable."

It seems to me that the Citizens' Union will do better work by absolutely leaving the political bosses alone and proving their strength by their own individual efforts. A citizens' union ought to be independent, and any union with Platt or Croker would end the value of such a union to the city.

I would much rather have the fighting Platt than the "affable" Platt, because we would be sure then of our ground. A league with Platt as against Croker, if successfully carried out, would leave the citizens in much the same condition as they are now, except that we would have a different set of bosses.

To rid the city of its present abuses is not to swap one boss for another, but to elect men who, indifferent to politics, will give us a businesslike government, and who will not care whose toes are stepped on. Such men can be had, but they must have a free hand, not dictated to by any clique of men here or in Albany, otherwise an election of such men would prove a farce.

Politics as seen in our city should never enter into the management of our elections. We should not boast of being anti-Croker or pro-Platt, but for or against good government. Then, and not till then, is there any hope of purity in local government.

Does President Cutting really believe in an "affable" Platt? No doubt Mr. Platt can be affable, but when he is, look out.

The Governor's Responsibility.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

At the meeting yesterday ex-Mayor Hewitt said: "If that Purity Committee will simply request Mr. Croker to direct the Mayor to tell the Police Commissioners that if they do not shut up all these places promptly and within one week he will remove them from office, and with the present Governor of the State we all know that the Mayor will be promptly approved and the whole thing can be cleaned up in less than thirty days." So it seems that in the last analysis the power and responsibility rest with the Governor.

Why then stop with the Mayor, who, as is well known, will not act upon this suggestion of ex-Mayor Hewitt?

Why not go a step further and request the Governor to tell the Mayor that if he does "not shut up all these places promptly, and within one week, that he will remove him from office"?

Ex-Mayor Hewitt says: "So that in the last analysis, if things go wrong, if public order is destroyed, if the sense of decency is outraged, the responsibility rests with the Mayor." Does it not also rest equally and primarily with the Governor? He also says: "The police are under the charge of a Superintendent. The Superintendent is responsible to the Commissioners. The Commissioners are responsible to the Mayor." He should have added: "And the Mayor is responsible to the Governor."

The Governor should be as prompt to act as he was in regard to the election order to the police. He should require the Mayor to exercise all his powers promptly or remove him and appoint some one who will.

Opposes Croker and Platt.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The only way to revolutionize the city, both socially and politically, is to oust from their offices that noble pair of brothers. They have been tried and found wanting, pretty much in the same category as Belshazzar. Croker and Platt should be compelled to retire. NEMESIS.

THE PIPE AS A MISSIONARY AGENCY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I'm a minister. I smoke a pipe. I do it (a) because I like it, (b) because it does me no harm, and I think it does me good. I see no sin in it. It is not forbidden in the decalogue nor in the New Testament. Distrusting my own judgment, I find that some of the noblest specimens of the Christian ministry in our age use tobacco. I have found the tobacco habit a positive help in my ministry of twenty-seven years. It has served to put me in easy touch with a large number of men that I could never have reached but for my pipe. Accessibility must be the keynote of the successful minister of the twentieth century. Break down the barriers, sweep away the conventionalities, and let us see eye to eye. There is nothing that puts men more at their ease with one another than a fraternal and social smoke. Bishop Potter's name is most justly on the lips of every right-minded New Yorker to-day. The city acknowledges gratefully the debt it owes him. Among the lesser reasons (passing over the weightier) for his popularity is the very thing that Mr. Catlin reprehends in his letter of this date. It is not the thing itself, but it is the thing as a symptom and sign of something better beneath good fellowship—a desire to come in touch with all sorts and conditions of men to do them good, not so much by precept as by fellowship. Because of this quality in our Bishop men like him; because they like him they listen to him; listening to him they are made better.

A FOE TO HANDSHAKING.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Going into the Mercantile Library the other day I met an acquaintance whom I had not seen for many a day. Naturally I was glad to see him, and offered my hand. Well, Mr. Editor, he gave me a grip that not only seemed to crush my hand and fingers, but actually brought water to my eyes and made me so angry that—well, I wanted to say things which no man as prominent as I am in our church prayer meeting ought to say. As he loosened his hold I looked at that hand. It was just about the size, shape, and color of a medium-sized ham.

Now, as we are given to understand Mr. Lincoln used to say, "That reminds me," where's the sense in this handshaking business, anyway? I don't want to take hold of any man's perspiring, more or less clean, and, perhaps, awfully powerful hand; and, particularly, in the name of all that's pathetic, why must a poor, unfortunate President of these United States be required to go through all this misery and have his hand wrung, his arm twisted, and his bile stirred by each of one or two thousand ardent patriots at a White House reception?

This imposition, this senseless custom, this horror should be stopped, and right now—with a re-elected President who can't fill the office again, and who can lose no votes from refusing to undergo the torture—right now is the time to do it.

Just give my compliments to Mr. McKinley and tell him to take a stand. Tell him to draw the sword of state, and, holding it in his right hand or waving it wildly over his head, say: "Gentlemen, patriots all, not another shake!" He can smile or bow—or both. He can hint Mr. Robert Fitzsimmons to stand by him and be stripped by the loyal, but not another shake. And multitudes of Presidents yet to be will rise and call him blessed. GRIP.

Fire Department Amenities.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of Nov. 29 you publish an article signed "Anti-Agitator," which relates to Capt. James D. Clifford, who has been tried at a theatrical performance, under the management of a great "I Am." As to the claim of "Anti-Agitator" that the outlook for good feeling and confidence between officers and members is brighter than it has been before for the past eight years, it is a falsehood, pure and simple. If any lack of confidence and harmony was engendered, it was done by the formation of the new and so-called Croker and Scannell Association, especially as firemen have been told by high officials to come in out of the rain, or they would get wet. "Anti-Agitator" advises the public to take Mr. Clifford's claim of representing 3,000 firemen before the Central Federated Union with a large grain of salt.

I advise "Anti-Agitator" and his allies to prepare themselves, as the courts will force a just decision down their throats without either salt or any other seasoning. Another fairy tale of this "Anti-Agitator" is his claim that Chief Croker assists firemen to get their hose up a stairway or into a window of a ten or twelve story building. If "Anti-Agitator" would strain his eyes at a fire, he could find Chief Croker exactly where so many white hats may be found, and that is on the street, and the same being noticable at a three-alarm fire. Crowded Aisles in a Theatre.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While attending a performance at a well-known "continuous vaudeville" house last evening, I noticed that each of the side aisles was filled with people, as well as a portion of the middle aisle. This, I believe, is in direct violation of the Fire Department laws, and I think steps should be taken to see that the law is enforced as a matter of protection as well as comfort to the patrons.

There seems to be little inclination on the part of the management to miss one single admission, even at the risk of an enormous loss of life in case of fire or a panic, and if the Fire Department is not aware of the conditions they should be made to know them and protect human life, even if the management should lose a few dollars each night by smaller attendances.

I trust you will give this letter space in your valuable paper, as I know it will reach the eyes of a number of persons who think as I do, and it may be the means of averting a horror such as that of the burning of the old Brooklyn Theatre many years ago. A READER.

In sunshine times or rain,
We hasten on with lack of heart,
And never meet again;
We look into each other's face,

And do not longer wait, because
We do not understand.

We leave the cheerful words unsaid,
We gaze with vacant stare,
When 'tis, perhaps, an hour which calls
For sympathy or pray'r.
We tread life's dusty road in haste,
And selfish seek our goal,
Unconscious of the needs which plead
From out a weaker soul.

Thus through neglect we lose from life
What life was meant to hold—
The ministry of helpfulness—
And grow callous and cold.
We meet, but pass with empty hand
Hearts which appeal in vain;
We pass, and leave our good ungiven—
And never meet again.

To mark the tests of tenderness
Which lie within the days;
To prove our sympathy and love
In little helpful ways;
Ah, this will gild life's eventide
With mem'ries that are blest;
For they alone are restful there,
Who did for all their best.

Letters From Readers on Various Timely Topics

UNITY IN RELIGION.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a constant reader of your valuable paper, I wish to thank you personally as well as officially for your admirable reports of the New York State Conference of Religion, which met in this city last week. They were, as far as my observation went, the fullest and most accurate of any appearing in any of our great daily newspapers, and the space given to these reports testified to your appreciation of the importance of this movement as a step in the direction of religious unity. The conference has had from the beginning the warm and earnest support of many of the ablest and most progressive leaders in all Christian denominations and in the Jewish Church as well, and very few objections have been raised against it in any quarter.

One of the few exceptions to this general approval was a letter which appeared in THE TIMES over a year ago, to which you kindly permitted me to reply in your columns, and I now beg a similar favor again to reply to some further objections to the conference appearing in the editorial columns of The New York Sun. The writer understands the purpose of the conference as being "to harmonize the different manifestations of the religious sentiment," but sees no possibility of a common worship except "in the common absence of any definite belief," or "in a totally new religion which rejects the distinguishing elements of the faith of each and consists of the mere sentiment of devotion." To these strictures I should like, by your courtesy, to have the opportunity of replying.

I agree with the writer that common worship must grow out of a common religious faith. And the men who are supporting this conference have come to realize such a fundamental unity. Whatever religious differences may separate men must be conceded to be differences of apprehension only. The Supreme Being is one, and Man is everywhere essentially the same. The relation, therefore, between God and man is unvarying. It is the apprehension of that relation, not the relation itself, which varies. And this apprehension with the growth of knowledge is progressive. The same movement takes place in religion which has already wrought such marvelous results in the world of natural science. Crude, deficient, and arbitrary conceptions of the material universe have largely given place to more accurate conceptions based on clearly ascertained premises derived from a careful induction of facts, and with knowledge has come unity.

The same movement in the religious world is leading men from arbitrary and superstitious conceptions of the Supreme Being and their relation to Him to more accurate conceptions derived from careful induction of the facts of religious experience. This movement tends to unity as distinctly in matters of religion as in matters of natural science. Thinkers starting originally from widely separated standpoints are converging to an essential agreement on the basis of ascertained truth. "All thinking men are coming to be on the religion," said Prof. Sanday of Oxford, and the truth of this statement would appear to be so much a matter of common observation as to require no further argument. The leaders of religious thought in our time, not only Catholic and Protestant, but Christian and Jewish as well, are coming very largely to say the same thing.

But, says our objector, "faith differs radically in Christian, Jew, and Pagan. How can there be unity among these except in the absence of faith?" This would seem to be an erroneous conception of faith as opposed to knowledge in an inverse ratio. But this view of faith is not that now generally held. Faith is not opposed to knowledge, but loyal to it. Nor is it to-day growing weaker, but rather stronger, rising from particular creeds or rites to the spiritual reality of which they may have been but defective expression. Thus faith in God as a Father, and in the reality of the workings of His Spirit in the heart and conscience, and in the universality of His moral law, is intrinsically the same in all forms of Jewish and Christian belief, however the expressions may vary.

Here, then, we find our basis for the possibility of common worship. Our reviewer overlooked the fact that the primary purpose of our gathering, however, was not to frame a manual of common worship, but to affirm this basal unity of religious faith. The whole programme was arranged to this end. After reviewing the ethical progress of the century, our first topic at the first morning session was "Religion, the Life of God in the Soul of Man," in which these essential unities were expressed. It was on the basis of the propositions there argued that we proposed to found the possibilities of common worship. The papers of Drs. Newton and Berkowitz were cordially in agreement regarding these possibilities, and the remark of Dr. Berkowitz that he must worship as a Jew and others as Christians is hardly a fair quotation. What he said was intended to emphasize that we enter on this unity of worship with full loyalty to our individual convictions and denominational affiliations; that while thus emphasizing the common and fundamental unities, it was not by the abandonment of any individual convictions. Again, it is to be borne in mind that worship, as it becomes more spiritual, is less an objective rite and more and more a subjective state of the soul. This is increasingly realized in all religious communions, even the most ritualistic, and consequently the lines of Whittier find general favor:

> O Lord and Master of us all,
> Whate'er our name or sign,
> We own Thy sway, we hear Thy call,
> We test our lives by Thine!

So, too, the authority in matters of religion to which our critic appeals is increasingly realized to be the inward authority of conscience everywhere the same, rather than the outward authority of any ecclesiasticism. For even where such outward authority exists, it exists professedly as a mere symbol of this inward Divine authority. Common worship, therefore, for those thus coming to recognize a common faith is no impossible nor even difficult matter. And the committee found their duties to consist in little more than the compilation of hymns and collects and scriptures which were already in very general use, both among Jews and Christians of every variety. It is a matter of very general comment that there is the freest interchange of hymns among Catholics and Protestants, and that many of these same hymns are in use also in the Jewish communion. Yet of all forms of expression, hymns, perhaps, are the richest and loftiest embodiments of the spirit of worship, and therefore, also, of the reality of faith. It was not therefore necessary for the committee to assume a unity of faith that did not exist, nor to create a unity of worship that did not exist, but simply to gather into a convenient manual such selections as had already met a cordial approval among very various religious communions.

We repudiate the charge of "agnosticism." Not agnosticism, but an experimental gnosis, which is the most certain of all knowledge, is the basis of this movement. LEIGHTON WILLIAMS.

EPISCOPALIANS AND SCHISMATICS

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your correspondent, "C. B. D.," asks for a more accurate definition of my position with reference to the Protestant Episcopal Church and other denominations in the United States, and in doing so makes the statement that "there is one Catholic and Apostolic Church"; that "the Church of England is a branch of this Church"; that the Episcopal Church in this country sprang from the Church of England, and at the Revolution "did not in any way separate from that Church, but retained every essential mark of unity with the Catholic Church," &c. He further asserts that sects differing from this—the Catholic Church, of course—were founded by man, and that such are guilty of "the sin of heresy and schism," and from this he concludes that a member of the Church of England living in the United States is a member of and owes exclusive allegiance to the Episcopal Church here.

Without entering into any extended argument on all this, I would point out that the soundness of "C. B. D.'s" position depends entirely upon the meaning to be attached to the word "Church." If Church is synonymous with Episcopal organization, "C. B. D." is right; the Pope of Rome and his followers are also right, while three-fourths of the professing Christians in America and fully one-half of the Protestant Christians throughout the world, are outside the pale of the true Church. It may be taken for granted, however, that the Church of England at least knows her own position better than "C. D. B." does. What says she on this point? Article XIX. reads as follows:

"The visible Church of Christ is a congregation of faithful men, in which the pure word of God is preached, and the sacraments be duly administered according to Christ's ordinance in all things that of necessity are requisite to the same." Is anything here said about either episcopacy or apostolic succession? Not a word. On the contrary, the article goes on to say that the Church of Rome, which is the largest episcopal body bearing the Christian name, in common with certain other apostate churches named, "hath erred not only in their living and manner of ceremonies, but also in matters of faith." This unquestionably amounts to a declaration that the Church of Rome does not belong to the visible Church of Christ, in which "the pure word of God is preached," &c.

"C. B. D." is certainly in error in stating that the Episcopal Church of America did not separate from the Church of England at the time of the Revolution. The two bodies have been organically distinct and independent of each other since the year 1788. I will not trespass on your space in dealing with this question further than to point out that if it was as your correspondent would have it to be, American Episcopalians, George Washington among them—would be in the same relative position to the Archbishop of Canterbury, and by consequence to the King or Queen of England, as Roman Catholics in the United States are to the Pope. Are Episcopalians generally prepared to accept this as a condition of American citizenship?

It appears, then, from the foregoing, that the Episcopal Church in America must accept her position as one of a number of Christian denominations which have an equal right "to worship God according to the dictates of their own consciences." That position is at least a tolerable one, and to most Americans perfectly satisfactory. Nor will any Englishman, resident in this country, if well advised, quarrel with the existing order of things. With him personally, however, it may be entirely different. It is the privilege and birthright of every Englishman—whether or not he recognizes the fact—to be a member of a Christian Church, whose essential feature in the past has been, not that it is an Episcopal organization—that being merely its outward form and mode of ordination—but that it is Scriptural and anti-Roman in its character and constitution, and co-extensive with the State in the sphere of its influence and operation; the ideal upon which the Established Church of England was framed being that the Church is the spiritual side of the State, and the State the secular side of the Church—one and indivisible. For an Englishman to secede from that Church and become a non-conformist in England, or a member of one of the numerous other denominations in America or elsewhere, may or may not be an act of schism, as "C. B. D." characterizes it. That depends entirely upon the grounds upon which such a step is taken. The Apostle enjoins Christians to "mark those who cause divisions," from which it is clear that the "sin of schism" lies at the door of those who by their false teaching or evil living compel separation from their fellowship. The schismatic is thus apt to be a heretic also, hence the two are coupled together in the liturgy. If the Catholic—by which, presumably, is meant the Roman—Church has not given true Christians just cause for separating from her communion, as stated, then the blood of the reformers of the sixteenth century and that of multitudes besides, has been shed in a mistaken cause. Such, I suppose, is the opinion of "C. B. D."

My own position, then, briefly stated, is this: So long as I am an Englishman I am a member of the Church of England, first in virtue of that Church being a national institution, and still more, of its being Protestant and Scriptural in its essential character and constitution. In America, while I may prefer the service of the Episcopal Church, where that service is rendered as an act of worship, and not as a musical or theatrical performance—as is too often the case—I am non-sectarian, remembering that Christ said, "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them," and also because it appears to me that by identifying myself exclusively with any particular denomination, where all are on an equal footing before the law, I should, so far as my influence extends, be promoting a sectarian spirit, which I believe to be the great weakness and danger of Protestant Christianity in our own day and in this country especially.

If it is urged that such an attitude is inconsistent and detrimental to the interests of the individual, my answer is that it is one of those hardships which a Christian man is sometimes called upon to endure, and in the writer's case it certainly is not of his own seeking.

As to the superior antiquity claimed for the Church of Rome, the question was once put by a Roman Catholic to a Protestant: "Where was your Church before the time of Martin Luther?" "Where was your face before it was washed?" was the rejoinder. The soiling process appears to be progressing rapidly once more in many of our so-called Protestant churches, some of which are scarcely distinguishable from mass houses. C. W. MULLIN.

"Hereay and Schism?"

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your correspondent, "C. B. D.," in his letter of the 26th inst., flourished the good old-fashioned weapons of "heresy and schism" against the sects of this country. It may be remarked here that several of these sects of Christians, so-called, are much larger than the Church he represents. It must be a dreadful responsibility on the smaller body to keep the true faith. But with his frank and modest assumption of the Catholic position, it would have been well to give us the official title of his Church in full, which is the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States of America. The name was not thrust upon it. It was freely assumed.

Is there any taint of heresy and schism in the word Protestant? Was it an acceptance of the great section or sect making of the Reformation? Is it proposed now to repudiate that great schism? If a considerable part of the Protestant Episcopal Church wishes now to assume the name of the Catholic Church or something like, it should at first convert those of its own fold to the change.

Catholicity is an admirable quality, and we find many claimants for the name Catholic. The principal of those using the name, or which are so named in history and general literature, are the Roman Catholic Church and the Greek Church, whose title is "the Holy Orthodox Catholic and Apostolic Church."

Claimants for the quality or the name are found in the Church of England and the Protestant denominations of Europe and America. To grant all claims would lead to a reductio ad absurdum. There cannot be several universals. Which is the one?

A Plea for the Palisades.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE TIMES prints the fact that the Morrison Building Company has been awarded a grant of land under water near Fort Lee, and that a sugar refinery is to be erected there.

Cannot something be done to prevent this disfigurement of the Palisades? Once these people have obtained a footing it will cost millions to eject them when the hoped-for reservation of the Palisade front takes place. Why should New Jersey allow its Commissioners to give away property that they are with another set of Commissioners trying to preserve? A much better site for sugar refinery work is to be found in Newark Bay, and there is no real need for such an establishment at this point on the river.

A sugar factory existed at One Hundred and Fifty-ninth Street on the Manhattan side until 1899, and was quite unsuccessful and became an intolerable eyesore, being removed only last Winter to the great satisfaction of all citizens. There is no more unsightly class of building than a sugar factory. Your uniform interest and care for the improvement of this great metropolis lead me to appeal to you in this matter.

An Appeal to Australians Here.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Australian Commonwealth comes into being with the advent of the new century and the new year. This event will mark one of the most important steps of recent years, and eventually become one of the landmarks of history. The movement undoubtedly gained much impetus from the example and progress of the United States, while the carefully drawn constitution for the new Commonwealth reflects the close acquaintance and sympathy which Australians generally possess for many of the institutions and tendencies of the latter.

Under these circumstances it has been suggested by several Australians resident here that some formal recognition of the birth of the Commonwealth on the part of all such at present in New York and its vicinity would be most appropriate and pleasant. It would stimulate the national pride and emphasize the hopes of the participants, and would be a graceful reminder to the new Australia that her wandering sons were not forgetful of their mother land.

To this end the undersigned committee would be much pleased to hear from any and all Australians who may be living here permanently or temporarily. It is their hope that all such will respond promptly and readily, so that the occasion may be celebrated earnestly and with enthusiasm. Letters should be addressed to Dr. C. J. WHAT TO DO WITH THE DEWEY ARCH FUND.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The other day a notice went through the press which embodied the suggestion of one of the prominent contributors to the Dewey Arch Fund that the money collected for the purpose of erecting a permanent monument should be consecrated to charity. It was not specified to what particular kind of charity this sum should be devoted. May I, as one who has given considerable time to the study of charities, and of the tuberculosis problem in the United States, particularly in the City of New York, be permitted to suggest what kind of charity in my humble opinion is at the present time most urgent, practical, and productive of the most good?

At a recent public hearing of the Tenement House Commission the subject under discussion was "The Relation of Tuberculosis to the Tenement House Problem." Dr. Prior of Buffalo, a close student of the tuberculosis problem, stated that there are at least 20,000 consumptives among the tenement dwellers of this city; that 6,000 people of this city die of consumption every year, and that the consumptive poor in this great Commonwealth are the only class of invalids who do not get proper care, and for whom no accommodations, hospital, or sanitarium facilities exist. Prof. Herman M. Biggs, one of the greatest authorities on tuberculosis in this country, and one of the higher officials of the New York Board of Health, said at the same hearing, in regard to the problem of tuberculosis, that infection, that is to say, transmitting the disease from a consumptive to a healthy individual, is one of the main causes of the fearful prevalence of this dreadful disease in the tenement districts. So, for example, he cited that in a block on Pearl and Monroe Streets, containing a population of 2,000, 318 cases of tuberculosis occurred in four and a half years.

To show the prevalence of this disease and the danger of infection and fearful mortality, the statement of these two gentlemen will suffice. But to a casual observer it must sound like a paradox when I say that it is now generally admitted by the highest medical authorities that this very disease, consumption or pulmonary tuberculosis, is nevertheless one of the most preventable and curable afflictions human flesh is heir to. It is in the power of man to prevent and cure, nay, perhaps even to eradicate this great plague.

Consumption is a communicable disease of the poor, and has just as important a social as a medical aspect. Society must come to the aid of the medical profession in their battle with this common foe. Overcrowding in unhealthy homes, malnutrition, poverty, and privation contribute perhaps more than anything else to the frequency of the disease among the poor, and our Tenement House Commission and charity organizations are endeavoring to remedy some of these evils. But against the immediate source of the propagation of tuberculosis, that is to say, the presence of consumptives among the tenement dwellers, their labors are of no avail.

The realization of this condition resulted in a bill brought before the legislative bodies in Albany. Two hundred thousand dollars was asked for the erection of a sanitarium for the treatment of incipient cases of consumption, and $50,000 was finally granted for such an institution, to be located in the Adirondack Mountains. Even a layman must see that in view of the presence of 20,000 poor consumptives in New York City alone, a single sanitarium, for which only $50,000 has been appropriated, and where only early cases are to be admitted, is like "a drop of relief in an ocean of woe."

Not only several large sanitaria for the treatment and cure of consumptives of the City and State of New York are needed, but we must have an equal number of hospitals to which more advanced cases can be taken from the tenement homes, where they constitute permanent centres of infection. These hospitals, which should not be situated too far from the city, would have a twofold purpose. They would take care of, isolate, and treat all those unfortunate sufferers who in their homes are neither treated medically nor receive that hygienic care which is so essential in the management of consumptives. Secondly, by being in a hospital and under strict medical supervision, and being near the city, patients may be visited by their friends and relatives, but can no longer, by their unsanitary habits and carelessness with their expectoration, convey their disease to their kin and neighbors.

The urgent need of such a hospital or hospitals near our city must be evident. An attempt to obtain a city appropriation for that purpose was made last Spring by the framing of a bill by Dr. Nelson Henry of this city. Several physicians called upon Mr. Van Wyck, the honorable Mayor, to urge upon him the signing of this bill, but without success. So, in spite of all agitation there has not yet been done anything to relieve this fearful condition existing in our very midst.

Seeing in the daily papers the suggestion to devote the Dewey Arch Fund to charitable purposes, the thought came to me that a more fitting monument to the victor of Manila could not be erected than a Dewey Monument Sanitarium (or hospital) for the Consumptive Poor of the City of New York.

Before making this suggestion public I endeavored to get the opinion of a few men who were interested in the Dewey Arch regarding the feasibility of the project. Some thought well of it, and some were indifferent, not caring for what purpose their money should be used as long as it was some charity. Others expressed their doubt as to the donors consenting to have the money thus appropriated, and thought that, having been subscribed in a burst of enthusiasm, many would want their money back, and were glad that it has not been asked for.

I do not share this last opinion. Dewey is still the hero of Manila, and we all are still grateful for what he did for the honor and glory of our country. The patriotic citizens who contributed to the Dewey Arch Fund desired to honor the great Admiral and to commemorate one of the most remarkable naval victories of history. I can hardly think that the majority of donors would object to this change of the original project, which for some reason or other did not become a reality. The money is there, and sufficient to do a world of good. I am sure there cannot be a better monument erected to any American hero, who can congratulate himself in having won a great battle without the loss of one American life, than to see a great institution named after him, whose sole object it is to save American lives.

Let it be known to all those who are not yet familiar with the results now obtained in sanitaria and special hospitals for consumptives, that as many as 75 per cent. are cured when taken in time to these institutions. They return to their homes, after a sojourn of from six to nine months, as breadwinners and supporters of their families. The life in the institution has made better citizens of them. They have been taught cleanliness, regularity, and sobriety, if they should have been addicted to intemperate habits, and above all, they will have learned how not to propagate their disease, and how to protect themselves from reinfection. Let it also be known that the consumptive residing in the dark, filthy tenement, no matter in what stage of the disease, has little chance of recovery, and in 90 cases out of 100 his disease will progress from bad to worse, terminating in a lingering death, but not until he has probably infected every one of his immediate family.

And all this misery and untold suffering can be prevented if sanitary authorities, philanthropists, and intelligent citizens combine to do their duty.

I earnestly hope that the money subscribed for the Dewey Arch may be consecrated to the erection of a living monument—a life-saving institution, and let its name be "The Dewey Sanitarium for the Consumptive Poor of the City of New York."

Let a Dewey Arch in modest proportions be the gateway to this house of hope for thousands who otherwise might have to perish in despair. I believe that could the noble Admiral himself have a voice in this matter he would be more than glad to consent to this mode of commemorating his name and his deeds, for such an institution would indeed be a living monument, not only of true patriotism and humanity, but also one of gratitude to a great American by grateful American citizens. MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S POSITION

Admissions Made of His Family's Interests in Supply Companies.

America's Diplomatic Victory in China Noted in England—Significance of Mr. Krueger's Reception in France—Rumors of German Intervention.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The week just closed has been one of singular flatness. People seem to have tacitly agreed to rest from their contentions until some kind of a lead has been given by Parliament, which assembles on Monday to vote supplies.

There are still people who at least express a confident anticipation that the money business will all be finished in a little more than a week, and that members will be let loose again for their Christmas holidays by the 17th. I do not believe it. The swearing in will occupy two days and perhaps part of Wednesday, a half day, so that business cannot readily begin until Thursday, when the debate on the address in reply to the "Queen's speech" will open. The Ministers have calculated upon limiting the range of this debate by embodying in the Queen's speech the fewest possible topics. The strategy is vain, because any number of amendments raising all manner of questions can be started no matter were the "Queen's speech," to consist of the single sentence, "Gentlemen of the House of Commons, I want money." Accordingly there will, apart from the grand full-dress display of oratory over the South African policy and conduct of the war, be debates upon the affairs in China, the Indian famine, and probably upon several domestic topics, and, above all, a determined effort to raise the question of the relations between the Chamberlain family and the public spending departments.

I have said nothing to you about this matter recently, very little at any time measured by the amount of attention it has provoked among all classes of society here. On the whole I thought it better that you should receive the news of these scandals through the customary telegraphic agencies, and besides, it is always ungracious to hound and down a man without overwhelming evidence of his guilt. In a sense, however, Mr. Chamberlain has this week admitted his, let us say, indiscretion by calling to his aid a curious species of irresponsible political bobolink named Wanklyn, and by publishing through this medium a justification or excuse for his peculiar connections with sundry army and navy supply contracting companies. Not only is the slowness of the man to speak out a confession of weakness, but the line the defense takes is really equivalent to damaging admissions.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S PRIVATE BUSINESS.

Mr. Chamberlain ignores the Hoskins Company altogether, although that is owned, I may say, entirely by his wife, children, and other relatives. He leaves out of sight his direct connection with the Colombo Commercial Company, which has been kept busy building huts for the Boer prisoners, located in Ceylon, and maintains perfect silence about the Andros Fibre Company in connection with which curious transactions took place some years ago, and seeks to fasten the attention of the public upon the Birmingham Trust, a small concern, which invests in most of these other companies and about £5,000 worth of whose shares Mr. Chamberlain owns. The great War Office business of Kynoch, Limited, likewise is completely left out of sight, and yet, I was told the other day by a banker who ought to know, that Mr. Chamberlain himself was one of the bank's guarantors for a loan this company had to raise some years ago when in low water.

There is nothing whatever wrong in any of these incidents taken by themselves and apart from the Colonial Secretary's position as a Minister of State. That makes all the difference and a determined effort is to be made to force him and his son out of the Government if not out of public life in consequence of the obtuse moral sense exhibited by them in mixing themselves up with companies fulfilling Government contracts while they themselves occupied positions of influence and power.

CASE OF THE EARL OF SELBORNE.

The Earl of Selborne has been frequently scolded for retaining, while acting as Mr. Chamberlain's deputy in the Colonial Office, his position as Director of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company. The excuse given was that, being an underling, it did not matter. But now that his Lordship has risen to the dignity of a Minister of State, he has promptly resigned his seat on the board and did so before any Opposition journal said a word upon the subject. A step of this kind, taken voluntarily, strengthens the position of the small band of determined opponents of the Colonial Secretary who mean to drive him out. One evening perhaps will be occupied with this subject and there will be plenty of others, so many that I was not surprised to hear a Member of Parliament declare the other day that they meant to keep the House together until Christmas. I think such a feat improbable, because there will be too many members anxious to get away.

Irish or no Irish, however, there will be storms ahead, and this week's calm signifies as much. We are not really calm in mind. Many things make us intensely bitter, and the disappointment of those who entered lightly into this horrible South African business only keeps them silent while left alone. Touch them and they explode like a lucifer match. Rage burns at the heart of the Jingo, and his mood is so savage that while passion holds him he often positively gloats over the idea that all those "horrid rebels," as he calls Burghers, may soon be wiped off the face of the earth. I interpret this violence of mind as an indication that public opinion is swinging round. When the human mind rushes to the extreme in any direction it is time to look for reaction, and those in touch with the pulse of opinion in the country assure me that reaction has already set in.

COERCION IN SOUTH AFRICA.

We are beginning to count the cost, beginning also to fear that much more than the domination of England over the two annexed States is coming into the question of South Africa. We do not wholly believe in the extremely violent messages coming just now from Capetown, because they are suspected to be colored up for the purpose of reconciling this country to an application of coercion in the Irish manner all over the colony. Discounting this, however, we cannot help feeling that permanent British trade interests are being menaced in South Africa as they never have been before, and we begin to want to know whether a better method of settling troubles out there could not be applied than the bludgeon, and nothing but the bludgeon. Starvation or deportation of women and children, the burning of farms, the looting of cattle, the sweeping away of stores, the trampling of growing crops, and so on, hardly appear to be sane proceedings on the part of a people who boast of their capacity to develop the countries committed to their care and who at present rather want an extension of markets for their commodities. These views are germinating beneath the surface and will find pretty strenuous expression in the Parliamentary conflict now about to open.

Over and above all this a most uncomfortable feeling exists that our present unwieldy Government is not equal to the business it has in hand. It seems that our Government usually drifts along and always wakes up, when too late, to discover that something should have been done long ago. The very manner in which Parliament has been summoned is an example in kind of the loaf and let-alide method in which affairs are managed. Most of the members of the inner Cabinet even were completely surprised that there should be such a desperate effort required to get the money voted forthwith.

BRITISH IGNORANCE OF CHINA.

It is the same with Chinese affairs, we really know nothing about them or about what the Government is doing in relation to them. More importance appears to be attached to the attitude of the Washington Cabinet than to anything done or said by our Ministers, and any success that has come so far to diplomacy seems to have been yours, if I may judge by the manner in which the powers have modified their, till the other day, indispensable preliminary demands.

Indemnity, it seems now, will be assessed according to the damage proved, and the demand for disarmament gives place to stipulations about the occupation of certain strategic positions between the coast and the capital. That is, if authentic, all right and proper, but we did not bring it about, and in China itself anybody seems to be able to flout us with impunity. Russia has resumed her control of the coast railway and, as I should expect, has Li-Hung-Chang completely in her grasp. This wily old man has declared that no indemnity will be paid that involves a foreign loan and the subjugation of Chinese finances to further foreign control. He is quite right and Russia and Japan will probably back up the Chinese diplomatists in this view. The country is not going to surrender its right to exist free from outside domination, and therefore to wrangle about indemnities is breath wasted, but we doubt whether anybody in power here sees this or troubles much about doing anything.

THE KRUEGER DEMONSTRATIONS.

Mr. Krüger's triumphal progress through France and the startling exhibition of popular enthusiasm for the Burgher hero among all classes of the French people have in a manner stunned us. We were quite prepared to find an abundance of noisy demonstrations, especially among the so-called National Party and anti-Semite faction, both eager to make the most of his presence in that country, but the public interest has gone altogether beyond the factions, and has fairly swamped the political malignants beneath a wave of enthusiasm in no sense prompted by hostility to the existing Ministry or to republican institutions, or even to England.

We should like to be very angry if we could see how the attitude of the French Ministry and people has been so circumspect, but our hands are so tied by the absence of any intimation to the Powers of our having destroyed two recently independent states in South Africa, that we are compelled to grin and bear it. "We shall have our revenge some day," the Jingo mutters or shouts, but in the meantime an attitude of sniffy contempt is the only one open to such.

Mr. Krüger's reception in Germany promises to be quite as enthusiastic as the one in France and there reports are afloat that German statesmen, even the Emperor himself, favor opening negotiations with a view to arbitrate for a settlement of the war and all questions open between the races in South Africa. I cannot trace these reports to any substantial source, although it is probable enough that the mine shareowning element, a powerful one in France and a considerable one in Germany, would do its utmost to aid Mr. Krüger in his attempts to bring this movement to a head. The continuation of the strife is a serious loss to tens of thousands of speculative investors, both in France and Germany, and they are all most anxious to have the work resumed. So are we, but the position is complicated here by race hatred, by a passion for dominion, and, apparently, by a sullen determination on both sides to hold on to the mines. Unless Mr. Krüger is prepared to renounce the control of the gold-bearing strata within the Transvaal, preliminaries to arbitration are not in sight. On this point his entourage loudly proclaim him to be as unyielding as adamant, and decidedly he is a man of very determined character.

WAR OFFICE SCANDAL IMMINENT.

Lord Wolseley has left the War Office, one might say like a lackey dismissed, and we are promised a lifting of the veil on various pretty scandals now that he is free to unbosom himself in the House of Lords. The feud between him and Lord Lansdowne will be opened up, and the late Commander in Chief's backers assure us that his attitude and work will be completely vindicated. I take leave to doubt this. Lord Wolseley is not in any sense a great man, although a nice, pleasant fellow among his friends, and nobody believes that he could have managed the details incident to a preparation for and conduct of this war with conspicuous success had he been left absolutely free to take his own course. In many ways he is a simple, gullible, and most unbusinesslike kind of man, as I know from some episodes in his life in the days of the great Barney Barnato, but the dispute is really not one of persons or of individual opinions or even of relative administrative capacity.

The military side of the War Office has never submitted with good grace to that imperfect measure of increased civil control imposed upon it by Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman after the Duke of Cambridge had been forced to resign. Lord Wolseley has been the exponent of this discontent, and, from that very fact, was bound to come into conflict with any Secretary of State who upheld his own position as the representative of the nation's mind and will. If Lord Wolseley takes to telling tales out of school and casting mud at Lansdowne he will find the press-fomented popularity which he now enjoys vanish like the morning mist.

We are dissatisfied with many things about the War Office, but the trend of public opinion is not toward efforts to remedy abuses and defects by the handing of everything over to the professional soldier, a being on the average the most innocent of business knowledge to be found in the country.

Lord Kitchener's supersession of Roberts is interpreted to mean an increased rigor in measures taken and in war. The difficulty is the insufficiency of troops and horses with which to carry out the harryings. Men with knowledge estimate the total loss of horses, mules, and oxen since the campaign began at 500,000. A. J. W.

IN FOREIGN LANDS.

CHILE DIVIDED AS TO THE AGGRESSIVE ATTITUDE OF HER GOVERNMENT TOWARD BOLIVIA.—Mail advices from Valparaiso are that there is considerable opposition to what is called "the unconciliatory and grasping foreign policy" of the Chilean Government as recently illustrated in its ultimatum to Bolivia. The withdrawal of President Errasuriz and the leaving of the executive duties in the hands of the Vice President, together with the coming Presidential election is said to have practically divided the country between the indicated policy of the present administration and the attitude of the industrial and commercial classes which are content to let matters remain as they are. There are several copper and silver mines in Bolivia which are owned in Chile and operated by Chilean capital; there are also coal and timber properties there which the Chilean owners desire to develop, but the owners are loath to do so on account of the unsettled condition of affairs between the two countries.

According to unofficial reports as a result of internal industrial activity exports have of late been materially in excess of the imports, and the equilibrium of exchange has been so far restored that the present inconvertible paper dollar is almost at par. The value of local shares in banks and gas and other industrial companies has risen from 10 to, even, in some cases more than 20 per cent. The rate of interest at the banks is being reduced and the expectation is said to be caused of a restoration of the condition of commerce which prevailed before the civil war of 1891, when the basis of the value of stocks and shares was a return of 6 and 7 per cent., instead of, as has since been the case, a return of 10 or even 12 per cent. In financial circles it is believed that the revenue has been so judiciously handled of late as to provide a surplus amply sufficient to guarantee a return to a gold currency at the end of next year should the Government, in the meantime, not have become embroiled in international disputes.

It is for these reasons, it is said, that all Chileans identified with industrial or commercial life, except those whose interests might be augmented should Chile gain control of the carrying trade of Bolivia, are not prepared to accept the explanation of the Government that its recent warlike measures were solely for the purpose of preventing a surprise. Besides the law for compulsory military service, which simply awaits promulgation, Chile has added some $2,000,000 or $4,000,000 to the estimates of her War Department, is negotiating for the purchase of a new ram, and is considerably increasing her stock of artillery.

"All this," say the industrial press, "is found to be regarded by the Argentine-Bolivian combine as a challenge, and it is not impossible that the party in favor of a depreciated currency will contrive that the fund accumulated for the restoration of honest money to Chile shall disappear in a ruinous competition of armaments, and with it the equilibrium of exchange and Chile's dawning prospect of commercial prosperity."

JAPANESE EXPENSES IN CHINA.—The Kobi Chronicle of Kobi, Japan, complains that there is a good deal of misleading information in Europe and America in regard to the part that Japan has played in the China campaign. It is denied that the Japanese casualties have been very great, also that Japanese gave no quarter. Nor are the expenses of the campaign likely, for some time to come, to have any effect upon Japanese domestic conditions. Up to the middle of October, it is calculated that the sums paid out by the treasury owing to the expedition in China aggregate only 12,000,000 yen, or about $6,500,000. This money has been taken from the reserve of 50,000,000 yen set aside when disposing of the Chinese indemnity and intended as a fund for naval maintenance, aids to education, and famine relief.

The method of replacing the draft is now said to be occupying the attention of the Government in Tokio. It is estimated that the total expenditure will not fall short of 20,000,000 yen, or $10,000,000, when the accounts include the cost of wintering the mixed brigade, 12,000 of all ranks, which Japan will leave in North China.

The Japanese reports from the "supply department" of the War Office give at considerable length a description of just what munitions were taken into China, and how they were employed. Thus it is learned that in the march to Peking last Summer, in which 27 officers and 94 men of the Japanese forces were killed, and 27 officers and 658 men were wounded, 8,979 common shell, 5,000 shrapnel, and 66,000 rounds of rifle cartridges were expended. The Japanese troops, according to Government reports, took into China 354 cannon, including 76 rapid-firers, 2,835 small arms of all sorts, a large quantity of ammunition, 1,531 boxes of gunpowder, and 80,000 bushels of hulled rice.

The Kobi Chronicle adds that reports concerning the amount of treasure taken by the Japanese troops from Peking have been greatly exaggerated. All they took was 2,637,700 taels, or about $1,895,850.

OBSERVATIONS OF THE CHINESE MINISTER IN PARIS.—Le Matin of Paris recently created a sensation by publishing an interview with the Chinese Minister there, Mr. Yu-keng. On the following day, it is said that the Minister sent his secretary flying about Paris from one newspaper office to another with an expurgated copy of the interview, which limits and qualifies the alleged original statements. Later Le Temps printed an authorized interview which on all essential points confirms Le Matin's interview, but which is expressed in more guarded language. Mr. Yu-keng is said to be a thoroughly Europeanized Chinaman. He is reported to have said in part:

"It is not enough for the powers to define conditions; you must know on whom to enforce them. Now the allies know nothing of this, having no responsible authority to deal with. They have, to be sure, Li-Hung-Chang and his colleagues, but this is purely a diplomatic fiction, a mere farce to amuse Europe. The pretended negotiators can do nothing in the terrible uncertainty which rests upon them, nothing except contrive ruses and false-hoods, in order to gain time, and save, if possible, their own heads. If they are refractory they are useless and expose themselves to the reprisals of the powers. If, on the other hand, they are submissive, and if the Empress retains an atom of power, their fate is certain. Assume that they are driven into a corner and agree to sign. It will be merely for form's sake, and not a solution."

He concluded by saying that, as a matter of fact, the real problem was very simple, but its simplicity had been covered by an intricate mass of unimportant details by foreign Ministers who sought to gain signatures at every step. "Let the powers," this interview continues, "bring back the Emperor to Peking, whether he will or no, and rescue him forever from the disastrous guardianship of the Empress. Whenever my master, who has been dethroned for attempted reforms, becomes free and independent, Europe will have found its most loyal auxiliary and its most certain pledge. In gratitude for his happy restitution he will offer Europe the removal of all the anti-foreign officials and the execution of some hundreds of Boxers in every province. Two or three weeks of personal rule will do more to end the crisis than all the supposed curative agencies of foreign officers and soldiers."

THE NEW NATIONALIST PARTY IN IRELAND.—It was announced by the London correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES the other day that the Irish members of Parliament would not attend the December session, but would, instead, be present at a Nationalist convention, called to convene in Dublin "for disciplinary and organization purposes." According to the Nationalist press of Ireland it is believed that if local differences can be buried the Irish members of Parliament, under proper leadership, can be made to wield considerable influence in the sessions of 1901, even if they cannot maintain an absolute balance of power. The necessity for the convention was recently outlined by William O'Brien, M. P., in a speech made in Westport, Ireland, under the auspices of the United Irish League. He called upon the coming convention to expel Mr. Healy from the ranks of the Parliamentary party, and is said to have made it clear that he regards himself as the real dictator of the party, against which he declared Mr. Healy had tried to unite "all the shams and rogues in Irish politics."

The convention, he concluded, would have the strength, "and it will have the courage to give a finishing stroke to the hopes of the disruptionists. It will decline to oblige The London Times by driving a thorn into the side and into the heart of the Irish party. It will give Mr. Redmond a party, whatever their number, who will have their heart in their work, and will stand shoulder to shoulder against our people's enemies. In one word, the National Convention will give fair play to the Irish party in the arduous task that is before them. It will share their responsibilities and their risks, it will cheerfully and generously maintain the party it has created, it will make men proud again to be in the fight for Ireland, and it will confront our new Chief Secretary, if he comes here in any spirit of aggression, with a country as solidly and substantially united as the United Ireland which confronted Mr. Forster and Earl Spencer and Mr. Balfour."

BRITISH MONEY LENDERS

New Act Regulating Their Operations Goes Into Effect.

ITS PROVISIONS STRINGENT

It Is Hoped that the Swindling of Young Men of Wealthy Families Will Now Be a

AT THE THEATRES

The Famous French Actors, the Newest Play from England, and Other Topics.

The present rush to the Garden Theatre to see Sarah Bernhardt and Constant Coquelin in "L'Aiglon" is not an indication of a sudden development of fine artistic taste in this neighborhood. Once in a while the multitude rushes to an exhibition of dramatic art in the same spirit as it goes to horse races and football games. Bernhardt and Coquelin are two of the greatest actors in the world, and the world knows it. It hails them as prodigies, and it loves prodigies of any sort. So the multitude has sometimes crowded in to see Irving and Miss Terry and other actors of note. But there is matter for congratulation this time because the objects of adulation are so worthy of it in every respect.

The artistic methods of Mme. Bernhardt and M. Coquelin are perfectly normal. They are both models of artistic propriety and fitness. Dramatic students who could exactly imitate their way of doing things would become fine actors even if lacking a fine natural endowment. Now, comparatively few of the foremost actors in any epoch are good models. The Keans and Irvings produce splendid effects, but in defiance of all the rules of elocution and expression. Their individual greatness is not to be fairly disputed, but the novice who falls under their influence contracts manners which are apt to convert him into a hopelessly bad actor. The Booths, Bernhardts, and Coquelins are artists of a much rarer quality. They are models of style in reading and gesture and facial expression, in plastic grace, in taste of selection, in comprehension of pictorial effect. Their influence is far-reaching, but always good. We never hear an actor of these days ridiculed for imitating the acting of Edwin Booth, because the actor who made Booth his model in his early efforts merely adopted a standard and normal method of expression. On the other hand, the imitators of some more recent actors, who reach the right effect by the wrong road, are always subject to scornful criticism.

In Rostand's play the splendid powers of the two French artists are restricted somewhat by the conventions of the French stage in poetic drama. While Rostrand is romantic and no slave to the classical traditions of French tragedy, still there is only one recognized way of delivering hexameters and the measured recitation of certain passages, having the form of tirades, as the eloquent speech of the Eaglet after his star rises in the heavens, when the Emperor and Metternich have refused his request to return to France, is in strict accordance with usage.

Nobody does this sort of thing as well as Bernhardt, unless it is Coquelin. Surely Jean Mounet-Sully, with his queer, crablike walk and his habit of holding his head sideways, is not in the same category. There is always some wise talk about Rachel when Bernhardt is in view. The fame of a dead actress is a handy brick to throw at a living one. But Rachel's advent was in the luckiest moment for her. Romanticism had all but killed classicism in the French theatre, and, in its turn, had languished. There was a demand for a revival of classical tragedy, which had been given in the cheapest and shabbiest way on the allotted nights in the subsidized theatres. Rachel had just the face and voice for classical tragedy. No one ever said she could have rivaled Bernhardt in "La Dame aux Camélias," "Hernani," or "Tosca." There are intelligent men living who say they feel Bernhardt's superiority to Rachel, whom they remember well, even in the classical "Phèdre." Rachel had a sepulchral voice suited only to the most sombre rôles. Bernhardt has infinite vocal variety, and in the present rôle the range of her voice is splendidly illustrated.

Coquelin, too, revels in the long, richly varied speeches of the talkative personification of the surviving spirit of Bonapartism, a spirit, as is well said in this play, which will arise in France from time to time. It is unusual for so rare and valuable an exhibition of genius and talent to be made the subject of a popular craze.

The new play at Daly's, "The Man of Forty," is a good example of one peculiarity of the modern commercial theatre. The relations of the light-hearted millionaire hero and the beautiful grass widow whom he took out of a tearoom and clothed in fine linen and expensive frocks are presumably set forth in all their frank paganism in the author's original scheme, just as they would be in a French play. The intelligent spectator sympathizes with the villain in this piece just once, not when he has a fatal attack of angina pectoris, but when he says "Oh, rubbish!" or words to that effect, to his wife's assertion of her virtue. If it was thoroughly understood, too, that Dunster had strong legal grounds for divorce, and a chance to get the control of the much beloved yet happily unseen children, there would be more logic in Mrs. Egerton's silence in a critical situation.

But, no matter. The matinée audiences at Daly's will be glad to know that Mrs. Egerton is real nice, in spite of her fine evening gowns, and the piece in its present shape contains nothing more risqué than the harmless scene between the hero and the horsey young wife of the jackass in the firelit library.

There seems to be nothing more to be said of "The Man of Forty" at this writing, except that it is richly mounted and uncommonly well acted. In the circumstances, it is worth seeing. E. A. D.

THIS WEEK'S PLAY BILLS.

Many Successful Attractions Soon to Close—Some New Offerings.

Of the new attractions to be offered this week the most essential will be "The Sprightly Romance of Marsac," at the Theatre Republic to-morrow evening, with Maclyn Arbuckle in the rôle of an impecunious journalist. The same evening Miss Lulu Glaser comes forward as an aspirant for stellar honors at the Manhattan Theatre in the new comic opera "Sweet Anne Page," by De Lange and Smith and W. H. Neidlinger. Another star to make her first appearance to-morrow evening is Miss Hattie Williams in "The Girl from Maxim's," at the Grand Opera House.

The names of Miss Annie Russell and "A Royal Family" must still be repeated in a summary of the theatrical bills that remain unchanged. However, Mr. Frohman takes occasion to announce that his star will not be able to remain at the Lyceum Theatre longer than Feb. 2 because arrangements long ago had been made for the production at this house of "Lady Huntsworth's Experiment." Another of Mr. Frohman's stars to announce the approaching end of his season in this city is John Drew with his dramatization of "Richard Carvel," at the Empire Theatre, which will be a month hence. Miss Maude Adams and "L'Aiglon" are attracting audiences to the Knickerbocker, but they can do so only until the end of Christmas week. Before she terminates her engagement she will give one or two special matinées.

William H. Crane and "David Harum" are doubly coupled at the Garrick Theatre for an indefinite period, as Mr. Frohman is making no future plans for this house, thereby clearing the way for this piece to stay as long as the public wants it to, which will be all Winter, to judge by present indications. Peter F. Dailey is nearing the end of the second month of his present engagement at the Madison Square Theatre. He will continue until the end of Christmas week; then he will be obliged to say farewell to this city, as contracts with the Broadhurst Brothers calls for the production of their latest farce, "The House That Jack Built," at this theatre.

The new McNally farce "Introducing" the Agoust family has undoubtedly proved a success, and, with the interpolations of new music and business from time to time, the piece should remain at the Victoria for a considerable length of time. The term of "Arizona" at the Herald Square Theatre will expire in three weeks. However, before retiring from this city the management proposes that it shall not be forgotten, and will therefore on Tuesday night, when the one hundredth performance takes place, present every woman occupying an orchestra seat with a souvenir in the shape of a silver flagon.

Richard Mansfield takes his entire company of actors, singers, dancers, and auxiliaries, to the number of almost 400, and the spectacular equipment, all as seen at the Garden, to the Harlem Opera House for seven appearances this week in his success, "King Henry V." These are positively the last opportunities which New Yorkers will have to see Mansfield as the youthful, brave, and triumphant King Harry. None of the spectacular magnificence will be curtailed.

James O'Neill, in "Monte Cristo," still affords the entertainment at the Academy of Music. The week will be inaugurated by the distribution of souvenirs to-morrow night of statuettes representing Mr. O'Neill as the Count of Monte Cristo. There seems to be no doubt that Henrietta Crosman, with "Mistress Nell," has a piece that will serve her well, thus the Savoy Theatre is provided against any change of bill for some time to come. Miss Olga Nethersole will this week give the last eight performances of "Sapho" at Wallack's Theatre, where her engagement terminates on Saturday, Dec. 8. Miss Nethersole will immediately proceed on a tour throughout the United States. She will open at Providente, R. I., on Monday, Dec. 10, and will then journey across the continent to San Francisco, returning to the East again in May, where her tour will finish in Boston at the end of that month.

An interesting event to occur at the Irving Place Theatre this week will be the premiere performance of Otto Erich Hartleben's "Rosenmontag," (Rose Monday,) which will take place on Thursday evening. During the first part of the week, however, "Die Goldgrube," (The Goldmine) will be continued. "Fiorodora," at the Casino, continues to please the audiences with its pretty music. "Lost River" is within three weeks of its end at the Fourteenth Street Theatre, and at the American Theatre "In Mizzoura," one of the most popular of modern plays by Augustus Thomas will be revived.

At the Bijou the "Belle of Bridgeport" goes merrily on. This week, however, will mark the production on Thursday afternoon, Dec. 6, of the new play, "Madge Smith, Attorney," by Ramsay Morris, with May Irwin and a company especially selected for the east. It was originally intended to give the performance of this play on Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 12, but owing the rapidity with which the rehearsals and the work on the scenery has progressed it was found that the performance could be given with ease a week sooner than contemplated. The plot of this new play turns on the efforts of the two principal characters, John Smith and his wife, Madge Smith, to hide from each other little flirtations each had had before they became Mr. and Mrs. Smith, and which now have turned up and threatened to interrupt the calm and contentment of their even home life.

"Under the Red Robe" will be the attraction to-morrow night and for the week at the Metropolis Theatre. Robert Manchester's Burlesquers will make their first appearance at the Dewey Theatre, with a curtain-raiser entitled "On the Fall River Line," which introduces many novelties. Jerome Sykes and "Foxy Quiller" go into their final weeks at the Broadway Theatre, where they will be followed by Jefferson De Angelis and his company on Dec. 24, in their operatic comedy entitled, "A Royal Rogue." John Hare will not continue much longer at the Criterion Theatre with his "Gay Lord Quex." He will visit Boston, Philadelphia, and Chicago for a fortnight's engagement and a week in Washington. This will conclude Mr. Hare's engagement in this country.

A new wax group was placed on exhibition at the Eden Musée yesterday which has unusual interest. It fills four special rooms in the Chamber of Horrors and is entitled "Fruits of Idleness." The first scene shows a street corner in the tenement district. A young man stands in front of a saloon watching a fight between newsboys over a game of craps. The second shows him attacking a passerby in a lonely section of the city at night. The third scene shows the parting of the criminal from his mother at the steps of the "Black Maria." The last scene shows the criminal breaking stones in Sing Sing Prison under guard of keepers. Moving pictures will be shown hourly in the Winter Garden. There will be afternoon and evening concerts.

Sydney Grundy's play, "The Late Mr. Castello," which scored a success at the Lyceum several years ago, will be revived by the Donnelly stock company at the Murray Hill Theatre.

THE VAUDEVILLE SHOWS.

Jessie Bartlett Davis, who made her début in the continuous last week at Keith's Union Square Theatre, is one of the few vaudeville recruits from the comic opera fields who achieved an immediate success and without initiative experience. Mr. Keith therefore regards it as necessary to retain her as his principal attraction for another week. Second, but equal in excellence of artistic work and in notable success, is Henry Lee, whose personations are not senseless mimicry, but are extraordinary in fidelity of make-up and in moderation of speech and gesture. Grant, Dewey, Roosevelt, Bismarck, &c., prove exceedingly interesting persons for a few seconds. To these stars next week will be added Isabelle Urquhart and company in "Even Stephen," Howe, Wall and Walters; Sager, Midgely, and Gertie Carlisle, and a new European acrobatic act, which is said to be very amusing.

The vaudeville specialty stars at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre are led by McIntyre and Heath in their new blackface skit, "The Man from Montana." Lottie Gilson is also prominent in the bill, and she promises a number of new ballads. Others are three Yoscarys, European gymnasts; John Wilson and Bertha Warin, farcical absurdities; Harrigan, the tramp juggler; Newell and Shevett, humorous bar performers; Musical Kiolsts, novelty musical act; Charles Ulrick, the barrel king, and Sheridan and Flannigan. Della Fox will play a return engagement at Mr. Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre. In addition to her on the long programme will be found George W. Monroe, in a clever skit; McAvoy and Maye, acrobatic Capitaine, daring aerial gymnast; Binns and Binns, musical tramps; Elizabeth Murray, in songs and stories, and the Review Comedy Four, singing comedians.

Marie Wainwright will figure as the feature at Proctor's East Fifty-eighth Street Theatre, appearing in a comedietta entitled "Lady Di's Escapade." Gus Williams, the German debator, will also be found in this bill, while others will be Juan Caicedo, on the bounding wire; Foy and Clark, in Will M. Cressy's farce, "The Spring of Youth"; Louise Cunning, sweet singer of Scotch ballads; Ferrell and Starch, fun on the wheel; Losh and Huff, blackface comedians; the Craigs, musical act, and Evans and White, dancing experts.

Harlem continuous patrons will have ample amusement in this week's programme at Proctor's One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Theatre, which leads off with Eleanor Falk and her Eight Jersey Lilies. The specialty folks are numerous and include Mark Sullivan, humorous monologue and imitations; La Petite Elsie, Greay-Stephens's Landseer dogs, Knight Brothers, gymnasts; Louis Simon and company in "The Coachman," Frank and Don, talking comedians, and a new series of moving pictures in the kalatechnoscope.

The new bill to be offered by the Hashim Brothers at Koster & Bial's to-morrow evening is remarkable for interesting specialties, foremost of which locally is its inclusion of Jeanie Joyce, who returns to the stage after an absence of several years; Gussie McKee, a new-comer to vaudeville, assisted by a chorus of young girls costumed as jockeys, débuts in a spectacular specialty called "A Day at the Races," and the Potter family, who perform on the flying trapeze. The remaining part of the programme includes James and Bonnie Thornton, Ganaro and Bailey, cake walkers; the Van Aukens, comic tumblers; Mlle. Alma, poseuse plastique; Ward and Curran, comedians; the nine Toozoolo Arabs, the Yamamoto Japanese troupe, and Pauline Hall.

There is always enough of good variety at Hurtig & Seamon's Music Hall to meet with the desires of those who are fond of a good vaudeville entertainment. Those who will be found in the programme are Bessie Bonehill, the singing comedienne; Hugh Stanton and Florence Modena in their farce, "For Reform"; Ah Ling Foo, The Sohlkes and their five little novelty dancers; Seely and West in a musical comedy; Brothers Demm, the acrobats; Eldors and Norine, jugglers, and a number of others.

The leading attraction at Huber's Museum this week will be Mme. Victorine, the woman sword swallower; Healy and Du Bois, the trick cyclists, enter upon the second week of their engagement to-morrow. A novelty animal act will be seen in Baker's trained pigs, while other attractions will be the Neapolitan Four, Mlle. Gracie's trained birds, and Allen's Punch and Judy. The theatre as usual will contain two companies, headed by Fred Roberts and Fannie Lewis, both of whom enter upon the last week of their engagements.

MR. DIXEY'S NEW ROLE.

To Appear in "The Burgomaster" at the Manhattan Theatre.

Henry E. Dixey, who has during the past week been appearing with the Metropolitan English Opera Company in their performances of "Pinafore," has signed a contract with Manager W. W. Tillotson to play the title rôle in "The Burgomaster," to be produced at the Manhattan Theatre on New Year's Eve. Mr. Dixey's selection from among many candidates was due to his peculiar fitness, though method, temperament, and experience.

"The Burgomaster" is a musical comedy in a prologue and two acts. The plot deals with the adventures of the Burgomaster (Mr. Dixey) of a village which, according to the fable of the piece, is found in the ruins of the Dewey Arch. The Burgomaster is supposed to have peacefully slumbered for 250 years.

Entertainment of The Strollers.

The club named The Strollers will give an entertainment in the ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria six nights, beginning next Friday, Dec. 7, and three afternoons to aid the Red Cross Texas Relief Fund, the Samaritan Home for the Aged, Mothers and Babies' Hospital, and other worthy charities.

A musical comedy called "The Cruise of the Summer Girl," written by Louis Fitzgerald, Jr., with lyrics by Cheever Goodwin, Safford Waters, and Harry B. Smith, and music by eight several American or imported composers, including De Koven and Lachaumé, will be performed. The cast will include that esteemed veteran of amateur theatricals Edward Fales Coward, and many younger persons, as well as a débutante in that innocent form of public recreation, May Irwin, who will appear in Act III., after her own show is finished, and sing a new song. Miss Grace Heyt, who will have an important rôle, will also have a solo dance in Act II., and many other gifted ladies and gentlemen of the social world will come forward and do clever things. New scenery and properties will be used. The ladies' committee represents society at its finest. The men's "Committee on Invitation" represents clubland, the professions, and Bohemia.

Theatrical Gossip.

Miss Eleanor Gist, who at present is appearing with Nat C. Goodwin's company in "When We Were Twenty-one," will sever her connection with that company and become a member of the Weber & Fields stock company.

On the afternoon of Dec. 12 Manager Conried of the Irving Place Theatre will deliver his first lecture of the season, which will be entitled "Schiller's Life and His Poems." The admission to this lecture will be free. Tickets can be had upon written application to the theatre.

Della Fox will again abandon the vaudeville stage and make her appearance some time this month in a new musical comedy entitled "A Good Fellow," the book of which is by Robert Smith, and the music by Will McConnell. Her rôle is one that will not require much vocal work, but considerable stage business.

Arrangements have been concluded by Manager Jacob Litt of the Broadway Theatre and Manager E. R. Reynolds of the Jefferson De Angelis opera company for the appearance of this organization at the Broadway Theatre, beginning Dec. 24, in the operatic comedy "A Royal Rogue," by Charles Klein and William T. Francis.

Jean Marcel, the French artist who invented the "Marcel Living Statuary and Human Bas Reliefs," was a passenger on the American liner St. Louis, which arrived yesterday. He brought his entire outfit of twenty-five models, and all the paraphernalia of his European production, presented for some time at the Alhambra Music Hall, London. M. Marcel will make his first appearance in the city at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre on Dec. 10.

THE BLACK AND WHITE SHOW.

The aim of this club is fast nearing realization. Organized only two years ago to revive the fast waning interest in black and white, it is now holding its third annual exhibition, and the merit of the work shown marks progress. A visit to the Durand-Ruel Galleries may well be recommended to the lovers of the monotint. Of especial interest are three studies by the late George Inness. These are of a peculiarly personal character and will strongly appeal to those who revere the great landscapist's memory.

It is natural that the medium expresses itself principally in anecdote works, as its illustrative uses are the demands of commerce. It will, however, be seen how deeply the sense of color is felt by some of those, regarded more as landscape painters. The values produced—and in fact the thorough handling of values is the first requirement of monotints—indicate gradations of color scheme which almost rival the expression of the palette. This is noticeable in the work of Arthur E. Blackmore, C. Myles Collier, the landscape background of Horsfall's African jungle, George H. McCord's bold and free valley scene, the leaves by G. W. Waters, and "The First Blow of Winter," by Francis Wheaton.

The figure work is most in evidence. Walter Russell shows some striking war scenes, while the portrait No. 71 is exceedingly creditable. The "Society Notes," by Albert Beck Wenzell, together with his dramatic "Ride of the Walküre," is worthy of note. Hugh M. Eaton has a few pictures which will appeal to the visitor. Frederick J. Boston shows a well-drawn figure in No. 7, "A Vision," while Benjamin Eggleston has a strong character study in No. 22, "Winter." Other good work is shown by Elizabeth Fullick, Josephine M. Culbertson, J. Frank Waldo, and others. The etchings by Dr. Leigh Hunt announce the past master of needle and burin.

The officers of the club for this year are George Inness, Jr., President; W. Lewis Fraser, Vice President; Dr. Leigh Hunt, Treasurer; Hugh M. Eaton, Secretary, and Josephine M. Culbertson, Assistant Secretary.

May Build Large Paper Mills.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 1.—Wisconsin capitalists, some of them Milwaukeeans, are said to be interested in six different propositions to build paper and pulp mills. At a low estimate the cost of these mills, if all are erected, will be $1,200,000, and they will have an output of about 210 tons of paper daily. The propositions include the erection of a four-machine paper mill at Appleton, Wis., with a pulp mill in the same vicinity. Other mills of smaller capacity and less cost are contemplated near St. Paul, Minn., at Petoskey, Mich.; at Crystal Falls, Mich., and another at some place not yet announced.

Michigan Farm Company to Dissolve.

DETROIT, Dec. 1.—A dispatch from Jackson says: "The A. P. Cook Company, owning 11,000 acres of farm land, comprising eighty farms in twenty-five counties in Michigan, valued at $250,000, will be dissolved after December. The company was incorporated twelve years ago by A. P. Cook and his three sons, just before A. P. Cook's death, to avoid probating the estate. The incorporation was for twelve years, and the dissolution is by mutual consent.

AMONG MUSICIANS

As the regular season of music advances music lovers fall into moods more and more thoughtful, and the mail of the musical editor is laden with letters of inquiry, complaint, and objurgation. No music critic has yet been discovered who can think the thoughts of a hundred thousand readers. And if such a being existed, his writings would be full of irreconcilable contradictions. The one poor and lowly wretch who arouses the anger of so many readers of this journal invariably does so by something he says about a singer or a player. The poor composers—except Meyerbeer—seem to have no friends at all. Probably that is because most of them are dead. But when some one appears to take an interest in the creations of a master mind and to be not wholly absorbed in worship of the interpreter, this writer is inclined to give him especial attention. What follows is in answer to a letter of inquiry about the philosophical and ethical ideas of Wagner. More might be said, but this is a daily newspaper, and room must be left for the news.

In the early dramas we meet with Wagner's inclusion of ethical ideas in his designs. One seeks in vain among the old popular operas of the Rosini or Meyerbeer schools for a drama with a moral. But owing to Wagner's adoption of the myth as the material from which to erect his dramatic structures, the inclusion of an ethical lesson in each of his schemes followed almost inevitably. For mythology is essentially ethical. Wagner, however, humanized the teachings of the mythologies into which he delved by emphasizing the beautiful idea of the saving grace of woman. He did not, perhaps, deliberately adopt as the motto of his works the line of Goethe, "The woman-soul leadeth us ever upward and on," but it may be inscribed upon them without violence to their intent. We may see by an examination of the original sources of the dramas how the importance of this thought in the works is due to the deliberate purpose of Wagner himself to bring it to the front. In some of the original stories it plays little or no part, but in the Wagner music drama the "Ewig-Weibliche" is always impressed upon the imagination of the auditor with all the skill of the dramatist and all the eloquence of the musician.

In "Lohengrin," as the reader can see for himself, the master made a special point of excluding the operation of this principle, because he desired to bring forward a study of a woman who had no love in her nature. With Wagner the woman-soul could be influential for good only when acting under the guidance of love. Ortrud acted under the dictates of hate, and her influence was therefore destructive, but ultimately futile. The reader will readily perceive the dramatic, poetic, and musical value of this thought. In all the Wagnerian dramas we are confronted with studies of the warring of good and evil principles. When the good principle is identified or associated with the love of woman, and that love is made the saving grace of its object, the dramatic force of the story is splendidly intensified, the scope of the poetry and the music immeasurably widened. Especially is the music benefited by the possibility of identifying the highest ethical idea of the poem with the most beautiful and potent of its emotions; for it is the peculiar privilege of the music to voice the emotional content of the drama, and when this becomes one with the ethical idea, the auditor is led by the music into the very shrine of the poet's imagination. The reader will note, too, that in those dramas in which the love of woman does not figure as a saving influence, the tragic fate of the hero is accentuated, and the woman herself is made a more conspicuous embodiment of grief.

In most of the works of Wagner there is to be found a philosophical or metaphysical basis, and this is most easily discovered in the later dramas. The poet-composer was at different times deeply influenced by the writings of Feuerbach and Schopenhauer. From the former he obtained some of the vaguer conceptions of his philosophy, but the latter supplied him with definite ideas. It was in the early fifties that Wagner was a student of Feuerbach, and his mind eagerly caught at the thoughts contained indefinitely in such phrases as "highest being—the community of being"; "death, the fulfillment of love," and such declarations as "only in love does the finite become the infinite." These ideas later took clearer shape in his mind when he gathered from Schopenhauer the sharply cut description of the negation of the will to live as the highest abstraction and elevation of thought.

With love figuring as a community of being, with death as its highest fulfillment, and with the absolute effacement of the desire of life as the loftiest aspiration of human passion, Wagner was equipped with a philosophical background for several of his most dramatic conceptions, notably for "Tristan und Isolde." Yet one has no difficulty in understanding his own assertion that the negation of the will to live and the community of being had entered his mind in an indefinite shape long before he read the works of the two philosophers, for they may be traced in the story of "Der Fliegende Holländer."

Some of Wagner's biographers, notably Houston Stewart Chamberlain, to whom this master was little short of a divinity, have devoted much space to the consideration of Wagner as a philosopher. The truth is that he was never a philosopher at all in the strict sense of that term. He was a groper after philosophies. He sought for a rational foundation for his artistic theories and endeavored to found them upon metaphysical tenets borrowed from works which seemed to meet his needs. But there is no difficulty in perceiving that what always appealed to him in a philosophy was its poetic or dramatic material. That he was sometimes mistaken as to the real value of this material is not astonishing. The best text books of Wagner's philosophy are his dramas. Therein one finds that the ethical side of a philosophy was what touched him most directly, and that it did so because of its close relation to the principles underlying the tragic in human experience. This is paying a higher compliment to Wagner than to call him a philosopher, for it is practically asserting that his dramatic nature was his guiding star.

It is easy to note that in "Der Fliegende Holländer" Wagner more nearly rid himself of those hampering historical details to which he objected than he did in "Tannhäuser," and more especially than in "Lohengrin." The legend of "The Flying Dutchman" was not one of the great world-thoughts, but it had the advantage of being founded on an incident which might be repeated at any time and in any place—namely, the periodical landing of the wanderer. In "Tannhäuser" and "Lohengrin," and in "Parsifal," Wagner used material found in the great cycle of tales belonging to the Christian mythology of Germany, England, and France. He found himself unable to avoid introducing some of the historical details contained in the original stories. Because of their sources and nature these three dramas have been classed as the Christian trilogy of Wagner in contradistinction to the Nibelung works, which are called the pagan trilogy. While this classification is justified by the nature of the works, it should be remembered that Wagner himself repudiated any intention to produce works charged with a religious purpose. Ethical ideas, indeed, he always cherished, but he denied that he taught Christianity. He recognized the assistance which art had given to religion, and he saw that in Greece the dramatization of national religious beliefs had given to the stage a power unknown in modern times. But he himself was too wise to dream of making the lyric drama a mere corollary or illustration to the pulpit text. A passage in "A Communication to My Friends" gives an account of his resumption of work on "Tannhäuser," and explains the mood which governed him in the composition of the score. He says that at the time he was yearning for a pure and unapproachable ideal of love. "What in fine," he continues, "could this love-yearning, the noblest thing my heart could feel, what other could it be than a longing for release from the present, for absorption into an element of endless love, a love denied to earth and reachable through the gates of death alone? * * * How absurd, then, must those critics seem to me, who, drawing all their wit from modern wantonness, insist on reading into my 'Tannhäuser' a specifically Christian and impotently pietistic drift!"

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

An Interesting Novelty Announced for the Second Concert.

The programme of the fifth concert of the Philharmonic Society, which will take place on Saturday night at Carnegie Hall, preceded by the public rehearsal on Friday afternoon, is one of unusual interest. The general public no doubt will devote its attention to the soloist, Fritz Kreisler, the Austrian violinist, who was here as a boy wonder some years ago and comes back reputed to be a technical prodigy. But music lovers will find their appetites stimulated by the announcement of another of Richard Strauss's gigantic structures for orchestra. Here is the list:

Overture, "Egmont," Op. 84.....Beethoven
Concerto for violin, No. 1, G minor.....Bruch
Mr. Fritz Kreisler.
"A Hero's Life," tone poem, Op. 40.....Richard Strauss
First time in New York.
Orchestra increased to 120.
Sonata for violin, "Le Trille du Diable,".....Tartini
Accompaniment orchestrated by Fritz Kreisler.
Mr. Fritz Kreisler.
Ride of the Valkyries.....Wagner

The following note on the Strauss work is sent out by the society: "Composed less than two years ago, it is, in a manner, the latest and the most copious word that has been spoken in instrumental music. It is not only extraordinary in form and contents, but also in scope and character. In it the composer attempts to give delineation to as comprehensive a psychological plan as any of the schemes which Beethoven or Berlioz placed at the foundation of his symphonies. There are six subdivisions in the work, six poetical moments as a German commentator would say; yet the performance is continuous. In the first the ideal hero is pictured, in the second his foolish adversaries, in the third his consort and helpmeet, in the fourth his strife with worthy foemen, in the fifth his deeds of peace, and in the last his renunciation of the world and his peaceful end. In carrying out this programme Strauss has not only employed the device of typical phrases developed by Wagner, but has touched the farthest limit that has yet been reached in the matter of harmonic daring and instrumentation.

To maintain the proper balance between the instrumental voices, the orchestra of the Philharmonic Society will have to be increased to one hundred and twenty players, the score of "Ein Heldenleben" calling for three large flutes, one piccolo flute, three oboes, (at times a fourth,) one English horn, a clarinet in E flat, two clarinets in B flat, three bassoons, one contrabassoon, eight French horns, five trumpets, (two in E flat and three in B flat,) three trombones, two tubas, kettledrums, snare drum, side drum, bass drum two harps, and the usual quota of strings There will also be a series of special rehearsals, as the directors of the Philharmonic Society and Mr. Paur are resolved that a work which challenges performance because of its significance in the evolution of the musical art shall have the most perfect performance that can be given to it."

MME. SEMBRICH'S SONG RECITAL.

A Remarkable Programme to be Heard on Tuesday Afternoon.

The song recital on Tuesday afternoon at Carnegie Hall by Mme. Sembrich, will mark her first appearance in America this season, and it will be a most remarkable concert in many ways. In the first place she will have the assistance of no less distinguished a pianist than Mr. Breitner who, as a matter of courtesy, has kindly consented to play the accompaniments Mme. Sembrich arrives on the St. Louis just three days before the recital, but as she is an excellent sailor, a short period of rest is all that she requires. The programme, as first announced, was probably one of the most remarkable programmes ever arranged by any singer. Still, Mme Sembrich has been making constant slight improvements and corrections, with the result that she will be heard in a list of songs representing almost every school and almost every period. The programme, as it will be given at Carnegie Hall Tuesday afternoon, and which has not before been published in its present form, is here appended.

In the second group, "Er der herrlichste von Allen" is omitted. In the third group there has been no change, and the last group also remains as at first.

The Opera Season.

The season of opera in English at the Metropolitan Opera House is drawing to a close. When the performances of "Pinafore" and "Cavalleria Rusticana" were concluded last night, but two weeks of the season remained. The novelties for next week are "Lucia di Lammermoor" and "La Traviata." Neither of them has been previously given by this organization. "Lucia di Lammermoor" will be sung in conjunction with "I Pagliacci." "Esmeralda" will be given three times, with several changes in the cast, Mr. Shechan being heard as Phoebus, Mr. Whitehill as Claude Frollo, and Mr. Lind as Quasimodo. The farewell week, commencing Monday, Dec. 10, will be devoted to repetitions of the season's successes, the bill being changed at each performance. This repertoire will enlist all the artists of the Metropolitan English Grand Opera Company.

The season will close on Saturday, Dec. 15, and the following Tuesday the entire organization will leave for Chicago, where it will sing for two weeks at the auditorium. The company, numbering 200 people, including principals, chorus, orchestra, ballet, scenic artists, stage carpenters, wardrobe, property men, electricians, and machinists, will travel in a special Pullman palace car train. The equipment of this special train will include five sleeping cars, one private car, one dining car, two Pullman tourists' cars, and seven baggage cars, containing the complete scenery, costumes, properties, armor, electrical effects, and other paraphernalia as used in the productions given at the Metropolitan Opera House.

Mr. Franko's Symphony Concerts.

Mr. Sam Franko's second orchestral concert will take place at 3:30 P. M. on Tuesday, Dec. 11, at the Lyceum Theatre. From the programme selected it gives promise of exceeding in interest Mr. Franko's first concert, which took place on Tuesday last, Nov. 27, and which received such high praise at the hands of the press of this city. As yet no soloist has been announced, but the programme will be as follows:

Johann Sebastian Bach, 1685-1750.....
Overture, (suites,) D major
Karl Ditters von Dittersdorf, 1739-99).....
Symphony, "Phaeton," first time in America
Allesandro Stradella, (1645-81)....Aria "Chiesa
Jean Philippe Rameau, (1683-1764).....Suite of Dances
Domenico Cimarosa, (1749-1801).....
Overture, "Il Matrimonio Segreto"
First time in America.

This is undoubtedly a symmetrically constructed programme, in which variety and interest are happily blended. Mr. Franko's purpose can hardly fail in accomplishment, and, as a whole, his arrangement of the selections are calculated to enhance a well-balanced and most attractive offering.

Mr. Dohnanyi's Recitals.

Ernst Dohnanyi will give his third piano recital at Mendelssohn Hall on Saturday next at 2:30 P. M. The programme:

Notes of Musical Doings.

Mme. Teresa Carreno gave an informal piano recital on Wednesday afternoon before the students of the New York College of Music.

The Oratorio Society will resume rehearsals this week on Thursday evening. In connection with "The Messiah," it will take up Antonin Dvorak's requiem mass, which will be given on April 4. There will be two performances of "The Messiah"—one on Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 26, and the other Thursday evening, Dec. 27.

After an absence from this country of over three years, Jean Gerardy, the Belgian 'cellist, will make his appearance in this city on Monday afternoon, Dec. 17, at Mendelssohn Hall. He will be assisted by a number of prominent artists, and immediately following his New York appearance he will make a tour of the principal cities of the United States and Mexico.

Miss Minnie Tracey will sing at her song recital, which is to be given in Mendelssohn Hall on Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 12, a number of songs from manuscript, with violin obbligato, which were expressly written for her. Among them will be a song by Lennert Lunburg, who is Paderewski's favorite and most promising pupil.

William C. Carl will give his seventy-sixth free organ concert in the "Old First" Presbyterian Church, Fifth Avenue and Twelfth Street, New York, next Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 4, at 4 o'clock. The recital will be free to the public, and no tickets required. Soloists: Miss Bessie Bonsall, contralto, and Mr. F. L. Huebner, (lately of Italy,) basso.

The Musical Art Society will give its first concert for this season on Thursday evening, Dec. 20, in Carnegie Hall. The first part of the programme contains examples of the old Church and Christmas music. For the second part, Mr. Damrosch has chosen the Bach concerto for two solo violins. Two songs by Brahms, and Russian songs by Kopylow and Taneyef complete the programme.

MUSIC FOR THE YOUNG.

Mr. Frank Damrosch's Symphony Concerts with Explanations.

Mr. Frank Damrosch, who does much for the musical education of this community, began at Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon another series of what he is pleased to call symphony concerts for young people. The plan of these entertainments has been set forth in these columns, but no harm will be done, and possibly some good, by summarizing it again. Mr. Damrosch's idea is to teach children how to listen to music by explaining before the performance of each number on his programme its nature, its form, and the purpose of the composer. He hopes that by this process he may raise up some lovers of music who will accord to the art the respect which it deserves and who will not imitate the example of the mass of concertgoers in reducing music to the level of ice cream. No doubt much may be achieved by the judicious outline of the form and content of the music which Mr. Damrosch gives. He does his talking in a very simple and unaffected manner, frankly disavowing all claim to be considered as a lecturer. But he knows what he is talking about, and he shows discrimination in choosing the portions of his subject best suited to the comprehension of the youthful mind.

A good many children entirely too young to be taught musical form by a public address are taken to these concerts, but that is not the fault of the conductor. Others quite old enough to understand all that is said are taken, and numerous adults are now regular attendants. This is a subject for devout thankfulness. The children will eventually learn. Most of the adults, however, need the instruction more than the children. Nothing is so profoundly discouraging to the real lover of music as the buzz of stupid, ignorant, childish, and foolish comment to be heard in every music room. There is no excuse for it. The road to discrimination is wide and straight. The neglect to take it is the result of intellectual indolence. Few people really try to learn what music is. Mr. Damrosch's talks

ROYALTY TO AID LIPTON

Yacht Being Built Specially to Try Out Shamrock II.

COMMENT ON AMERICAN GOLF

LONDON, Dec. 1.—There is a persistent rumor that the mysterious new yacht building at the Hendersons' is for the Prince of Wales. It is learned, however, in spite of Lord Lonsdale's denial, that it is more probably the order of Emperor William of Germany. Whichever of these royalties the builder may be, it can be said that the Prince of Wales will be on board the new craft when she sails in the Shamrock II.'s trial races on the Clyde. In these trials the new Shamrock will have as trial horses not only this new royal yacht and the old Shamrock, but also the Sybarita. There will be a great race off Cowes between these yachts, and perhaps the Meteor and others, for which the Prince of Wales or Emperor William will give a cup. The Prince of Wales is taking the keenest interest in the new challenger. He intends personally to test her sailing qualities before she crosses the Atlantic.

The new yacht being built at the Hendersons', the identity of whose owner is so closely concealed, is chiefly interesting from the fact that the instructions given to George L. Watson were to design her in such a manner as to make her the most useful trial boat for the Shamrock II. The real object of Sir Thomas Lipton's recent visit to the Hendersons' was to compare her lines with those of the new America's Cup challenger, which is building at Dennys'.

Sir Thomas Lipton recently has been considering the proposal to send the Shamrock I. into American waters for a series of trial races with the Shamrock II. However, while he is anxious to give the new yacht every chance, he feels pledged to the Glasgow Exhibition Committee to race the older boat in the international match which the committee has arranged to take place on the Clyde, and he has decided to leave the decision to Mr. George L. Watson, who has designed the new challenger for the America's Cup. Therefore, it is improbable that both boats will cross the Atlantic, as Mr. Watson only desires to see how the new and old yachts compare, and he believes this can be done on the Clyde.

The only alterations yet made in the Shamrock I. are to replace her corroded plates, improve her sheer plans, and reduce her draught eighteen inches, so improving her chances under the new British Rule (preparing) Five, but which will not be put into execution until the trial races of the Shamrock II. have been sailed.

The Field comments good-naturedly but rather fearsomely on the changes which may occur in golf now that America has taken it up with such vigor. It traces the spread of the game in the north and south of Great Britain, and dilates on the present supremacy of the Southerner, adding:

"Some day, it is very probable, American influence will dominate both. The passion for improving anything he touches is strong with the Englishman. With the American it is perhaps stronger still, and it is difficult to say what new departures in this ancient and honorable game may not soon be initiated to vex the soul of players of the old school."

Continuing, The Field somewhat sorrowfully notes the invasion of the "bogy score," handicapping and medals for prizes, saying: "A single or a foursome in its pristine simplicity no longer gives general content. The future of the game, now America has taken it up so warmly, is likely to witness some new and strange developments."

No more generous tribute to the American jockeys' horsemanship could be written than appears in The Sporting Times over the signature of John Corlett, one of the best racing authorities in England and himself a horse owner. He points out that no less than five Americans are included in the first ten winning jockeys of the year, and says it would have been six if Maher had come over earlier. He continues:

"There is no such conservative body anywhere as the English turfman, and we have said enough to show the amount of prejudice the American jockeys have had to conquer. There is one thing, however, that the English turfman thoroughly believes in, and that is 'getting there.' This the Americans have done with a vengeance, and it is sheer merit which has secured them the position they now hold even in England."

Dates of Skating Fixtures.

TURKEY WITH A DIAMOND.

Discovery This Time Comes from a House in Brooklyn.

A diamond valued at $100 was taken from the crop of a turkey by Mrs. Mary Lemon of 53 Java Street, Greenpoint, while cleaning it on Thanksgiving morning. The value of the stone was placed by a jeweler to whom Mrs. Lemon took it.

The diamond is finely cut and of an excellent color. The turkey was bought at a shop in Franklin Street.

Search for Lawyer Francis Duffy.

A general alarm was issued from Police Headquarters yesterday for Francis Duffy, the Wall Street lawyer and assignee of the insolvent brokerage house of A. C. Hooper & Co., who disappeared on Nov. 22. Mr. Duffy is described in the alarm as being forty years of age, 5 feet 5 inches in height, weighing 155 pounds, having a florid complexion, blue eyes, with a nervous twitch in the right eye; reddish-brown mustache, turning gray; high forehead, top of head bald, and wearing a dark gray Spring overcoat, gray sack suit, black derby hat, marked "McCue Bros." and initials "F. Civil Service Reform League.

The twentieth annual meeting of the National Civil Service Reform League will be held in this city Dec. 13 and 14. The day sessions, with one exception, will take place at the City Club. On the evening of Dec. 13 a public meeting will be held in the concert hall of Madison Square. OVER MORRIS PARK COURSE

Grant of Pennsylvania Led the Field for Individual Honors—Penn and Yale Tie.

Intercollegiate cross-country run championships were divided yesterday in the second annual meeting at Morris Park of the five colleges composing the Cross-Country Athletic Association. Alexander Grant, the crack long-distance runner of the University of Pennsylvania, carried off the individual honors, while Cornell won the team contest. Cornell won in the first meeting, one year ago, and the Ithaca boys were jubilant when their runners landed the victory a second time.

The race was close enough to keep the result in doubt until the expectant leaders had crossed the finishing line. The narrow margin of two points was the limit of Cornell's triumph, her four runners being the first quartet to finish, and the points were determined by adding the individual positions of each man. The University of Pennsylvania, which divided the position of favorite with Cornell, tied with Yale for second place at 28 points. Columbia came fourth, far in the rear, 71 being the points by positions of the Blue and White delegation, while Princeton was out of it altogether, only three of her team finishing from six starters.

The race was run over the regular Morris Park steeplechase course, five times around the oval circuit, making a little less than seven miles—six and two-thirds, to be exact. The first obstacle after the start was an enormous hurdle, followed by similar ones at intervals, and as many jumps over ditches. The last one, at the conclusion of each lap, was a twelve-foot water jump. There were about one-half dozen of both hurdles and jumps in each lap, making sixty obstructions in all during the race. The water jump, however, only had to be cleared four times, as the runners cut into the track for the finish and came down in a spurt, if they felt like it, in front of the judges' stand, where the times were taken by Robert Stoll, Mortimer Bishop, and C. C. Hughes.

In the absence of John R. Van Wormer, Bartow S. Weeks and James E. Sullivan acted as judges of the finish. Mr. Weeks gave the parting instructions to the thirty-two lightly clad, bare-legged representatives of five universities, as they stood, lined up in three rows, awaiting the starter's pistol. There was a fair showing of college men on hand, fifty or more boys and others who were natives of the locality, and six ladies, who tried to keep warm under the grand stand during the hour's delay occasioned by the final rubdown and massage exercise given to the men by their trainers and assistants. Ernest Hjertberg, the former well-known runner, had charge of President Seth Low's young men, and Trainer J. F. Moakley came down with the Cornell contingent.

ADAMS LED AT THE START.

J. P. Adams, now a Columbia law student, but who ran on the Yale cross-country team a year ago, leaped to the front, the entire bunch getting off well together and making a pretty sight, with their different colored college shirts, as they rounded the curve to take the first hurdle. Adams stumbled in clearing the hurdle, and as the runners entered the open field, E. B. Bushnell, one of Pennsylvania's good runners, jumped into the lead. Grant, the hope and pride of the Pennsylvanians, was not far away, and before the first lap was half ended he claimed the leader's place and held it to the finish.

Grant had a worthy rival in the Cornell junior B. A. Gallagher, who has a record of 10:04 for two miles. As the men came down the stretch for the water jump the two were even, but Grant took the jump first. As each lap finished, the crowd gathered close to the water jumps and every time a man splashed into the water or slipped on the muddy edge, a roar of laughter went up. A. C. Bowen, one of Pennsylvania's leaders, got a nasty fall as he cleared the water on the third lap, but, although bespattered with mud from his head down, he pluckily scrambled up and went on with the chase. He finished the race in fourth place and was the second Pennsylvania man in.

Grant and Gallagher kept their positions unchanged in every lap. Grant led by thirty feet at the end of the second. At the end of the third Gallagher was so close that he could almost touch the Philadelphian. At the end of the fourth Grant led by twenty-five feet, but he immediately began to let himself out and pulled away from his Cornell rival foot by foot with apparent ease. As he came down the track for the finish he was greeted with wild applause. He won the race in 34:17, eight seconds ahead of Gallagher, while the latter was ten seconds ahead of his college mate, A. J. Sweet, the only Cornell man in the team who ran last year. Sweet led Bowen of Pennsylvania by seven seconds, and the latter was nineteen seconds ahead of the first Yale man to come in, W. D. Franchot. The Yale men, however, were well bunched, two more coming next, W. D. Waldron and L. L. Gay.

Cornell's third man, C. J. Morrison, came next, in the eighth place. These eight men kept their positions unchanged throughout the last lap. Morrison's position at eighth place really saved the championship for Cornell. At the end of the third lap he was running ninth, but soon after he passed H. S. Hetrick of Yale. In the last lap the latter was passed by E. R. Bushnell of Pennsylvania, placing Hetrick in tenth place. Bushnell beat him by eight seconds, which made the tie for second place, for had Hetrick held ninth place, the second prizes would have gone to Yale, with but 1 point below the victors.

The close finish shows that the leaders were in excellent trim, and after the race many of them ran up the track, encouraging their companions to hold out to the finish. The last man in was C. E. Sharps of Columbia, whose time was 43:50, 9 minutes and 45 seconds behind the winner.

Twenty-seven of the thirty-two starters finished. J. P. Coats, who started off so lively, had to be carried into the house after two and a half laps, but the others were all in good condition.

GRANT BEHIND THE RECORD.

Grant's record is 12 seconds behind the time made by John Cregan of Princeton, when he won the individual honors last year, Grant being second. Cregan was graduated in June.

The Columbia team entered a protest against Grant on the day before this race, claiming that he had been running as a collegian over the four-year limit. The Pennsylvanians submitted proof that Grant did not run before 1897, and J. C. Higgins of Yale, manager of the Cross Country Association, decided against the protest.

Each college was allowed to start seven men, and the first four who finished counted in the team results. The summary, giving the number of each man as he finished, and the full number of starters, is:

Cornell—B. A. Gallagher, 2; A. J. Sweet, 3; C. J. Morrison, 8; C. J. Finch, 13. Total points, 26. W. G. Berryman, D. McMeekan, and B. B. Smith started, all finishing but McMeekan. Smith got sixteenth place and Berryman eighteenth place.

University of Pennsylvania—Alexander Grant, 1; A. C. Bowen, 4; E. R. Bushnell, 9; W. G. Stuart, 14. Total points, 28. A. Baillie started and finished in twenty-third place.

Yale—D. W. Franchot, 5; W. D. Waldron, 6; L. L. Gay, 7; H. S. Hetrick, 10. Total points, 28. B. G. Teel, C. A. Lindley, and E. S. Van Tassel started and all finished, Teel in eleventh place, Lindley in fifteenth, and Van Tassel in nineteenth place.

Columbia—C. B. Marshall, 12; W. Duden, 17; H. J. Bartholomae, 20; C. D. Oppenheimer, 22. Total points, 71. J. P. Adams, J. R. Richmond, and C. E. Scharps started. The former quit, Oppenheimer finished in twenty-second place, and Richmond in twenty-fifth place.

Princeton—W. W. McCoy, 21; W. Mount, 24; J. R. Crawford, 20. Total points, 71 for three men. E. D. Perry, A. Embury, and D. D. Rankin started, but failed to finish.

The question of settling the tie for second honors will be left to a future meeting of the Executive Committee. There are no rules in the intercollegiate cross-country regulations governing such a tie. Yale claimed that the fifth man in should determine the question, which would give the honors to her, as Yale's fifth

The following are some of the salient points of a letter addressed to us under date of November 26, 1900, by Mr. H. H. Vreeland, President of the Third Avenue Railroad Co. and of the Metropolitan Street Railway Co.:

THE THIRD AVENUE RAILROAD CO. OWNS OR CONTROLS, through the ownership of stock, a total system of street railroads AGGREGATING 269.09 MILES; its charter, obtained in 1853, is unlimited as to duration, and is one of the most valuable and comprehensive street railway franchises granted by the City of New York; it owns real estate of great value in various parts of the City of New York and elsewhere. The bonds of the present issue are secured by a mortgage upon the franchises, lines, equipment, and all other property of the Third Avenue Railroad Co., (including real estate,) subject only to the existing mortgage of $5,000,000, (to be eventually retired,) and also by the pledge and deposit with the Trustee of the Third Avenue Railroad Company's entire holdings of stock of the Forty-second St., Manhattanville and St. Nicholas Ave.; the Dry Dock, East Broadway and Battery; the Kingsbridge; the Union; the Southern Boulevard; the Tarrytown, White Plains and Mamaroneck; the Westchester Electric, and the Yonkers Railroad Companies, with provision for ultimately bringing all of the properties of the controlled Companies directly under the mortgage, subject only to the liens of the existing outstanding bonds, amounting to $8,443,000. Bonds of the par value of $13,443,000 have been reserved in the hands of the Trustee for the retirement or acquisition of all such outstanding Bonds, both of the Third Avenue Company and its controlled Companies, thus making provision for ULTIMATELY ASSURING TO THE FIRST CONSOLIDATED MORTGAGE AN ABSOLUTE FIRST LIEN ON ALL OF THE COMPANY'S PROPERTIES, INCLUDING THE CONTROLLED COMPANIES. Of the total authorized issue of $50,000,000, there have been issued and sold by the Company $35,000,000 for retiring the unfunded debt and for new equipment, improvements, construction, and additions; of the balance, $13,443,000 Bonds are set aside for retiring all outstanding Bonds of other issues, the remainder being reserved in accordance with the provisions of the mortgage.

THE FIXED CHARGES OF THE THIRD AVENUE COMPANY AND ITS CONTROLLED COMPANIES, INCLUSIVE OF THE ISSUE OF $35,000,000 OF THE ABOVE BONDS, AMOUNT TO $2,095,680; THIS WILL BE REDUCED BY $105,000 BY THE REPLACEMENT OF THE EXISTING FUNDED DEBT WITH THE NEW 4% BONDS RESERVED FOR THE PURPOSE. IT IS ESTIMATED THAT AFTER THE COMPLETION OF THE ELECTRIC EQUIPMENT NOW IN PROGRESS, AND WITH THE ADVANTAGES AND ECONOMIES RESULTING FROM THE CLOSE CONNECTION WITH THE METROPOLITAN STREET RAILWAY CO., THE ANNUAL NET EARNINGS OF THE THIRD AVENUE RAILROAD COMPANY WILL BE AT LEAST $3,000,000, WHICH, TOGETHER WITH THE SURPLUS EARNINGS OF THE METROPOLITAN STREET RAILWAY, (AFTER DEDUCTING ITS OWN FIXED CHARGES,) ON THE BASIS OF THE RESULTS OF THE LAST FISCAL YEAR, WOULD PROVIDE NET EARNINGS OF NEARLY $6,500,000 TO MEET FIXED CHARGES, AMOUNTING, AS ABOVE STATED, TO ABOUT $2,000,000 IN ALL, INCLUSIVE OF THE ENTIRE ISSUE OF THE NEW 4% BONDS. THE CAPITAL STOCK OF THE THIRD AVENUE RAILROAD CO. IS $15,000,000. THE METROPOLITAN STREET RAILWAY CO. GUARANTEES UNCONDITIONALLY BY INDORSEMENT THE PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST OF THE THIRD AVENUE R. R. 4% BONDS, AND HAS LEASED THE THIRD AVENUE RAILROAD, INCLUDING ITS CONTROLLED LINES, FOR 999 YEARS ON THE BASIS OF A DIVIDEND GUARANTEE ON THIRD AVENUE STOCK, WHICH, BEGINNING AFTER FOUR YEARS, WITH THE RATE OF 5% PER ANNUM, RISES AFTER TEN YEARS TO THE PERMANENT RATE OF 7% PER ANNUM.

THE OUTSTANDING CAPITAL STOCK OF THE METROPOLITAN STREET RAILWAY CO. IS $45,000,000, ON WHICH IT IS PAYING DIVIDENDS AT THE RATE OF 7% PER ANNUM. AN ADDITIONAL $7,000,000, INCREASING THE CAPITAL STOCK TO $52,000,000, HAS BEEN AUTHORIZED. WITH THE THIRD AVENUE RAILROAD SYSTEM, IT CONTROLS THE ENTIRE SYSTEM OF SURFACE TRACTION LINES IN THE BOROUGHS OF MANHATTAN AND BRONX.

THE RESULTS OF OPERATION OF THE METROPOLITAN STREET RAILWAY COMPANY FOR THE LAST FIVE FISCAL YEARS ENDING JUNE 30, 1900, HAVE BEEN AS FOLLOWS:

CANADA'S TRADE WITH BRITAIN.

Material Increase in Many Staples, but a Decrease in Flour.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Commercial Agent Felix Johnson, at Stanbridge, Quebec, has furnished the State Department with official statistics concerning Canada's trade with Great Britain during the last year. A material increase in the export of wheat, oats, bacon, cheese, fish, and sawn wood to the mother country is noted, together with a considerable falling off in the amount of wheat, flour, and butter sent over to England.

British exports to Canada have enjoyed material increases in the matter of cotton and piece goods, woolen tissues, tin plates, salt, pig iron, and many other articles, while there has been a notable decrease in the export of railroad iron.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

In substantial majority the net changes of the past week have been advances. From a news standpoint Wall Street had little to interest it and much less to influence it. Daily bulletins from abroad have announced the Czar's death, with involved war complications for practically all of the nations of the earth; but otherwise not much out of the ordinary has been disclosed.

The public still buys stocks. A fortnight ago there seemed to be very general profit taking upon the part of outsiders who went into the market in October and were courageous enough to carry lines of securities over the election; but recently there have been evidences of rebuying upon the part of such interests; and it is probable that present holdings for the account of the general public are larger than at any time for years past.

The money market stays easy, and on this account confidence is assertive. Adverse money market conditions have been much predicted by the professional speculators of Wall Street, but current developments put aside all unpleasant forecasts; and in the highest banking circles there is now very general agreement that anything like disturbing stringency need not be apprehended for a long time to come. It is unfortunate, however, that reasonable observers must take account of the fact that some money market elements denote an ability, if not disposition, upon the part of a relatively small group of men to govern money market rates. Half a dozen financiers in New York can make money 20 per cent. over night, if they choose; or they can continue cheap interest charges indefinitely. To this extent the security market of today differs from what hitherto has prevailed, and the change is not wholly reassuring. Apart from this one feature nothing disturbing is discoverable. Yesterday's Clearing House statement was, upon the whole, an encouraging exhibit. Business confidence results in the extension of money's use, and, incidentally, funds in large volume are returning to this city after crop service out of town. Money at an average of 4 per cent. may be counted upon—so runs the ordinary Clearing House declaration—for some months to come. Of course there may be spasmodic squeezes over New Year's, but such exceptional interferences are not expected to be more than transient incidents.

From every part of the country and practically from every business interest current reports are encouraging. Many of them warrant enthusiasm. Trade is not only active and labor well employed, but net returns are satisfactory—with prospects exceptionally favorable. Statements to this effect, presented on this page of THE NEW YORK TIMES to-day, form a notable chapter in business history. Only one record, one sentiment, may be found in the chronicle of what business men find in the present business situation—and that intensely agreeable. In commercial lines and in industrial development new life is aggressive. Threatening elements have been eliminated. The outlook in every good sense is satisfactory.

Against some of the industrial issues pressure has had recent effect. Just before the market closed yesterday a raid against the whole group of industrials attended the rumor that President McKinley's message is to inveigh against trusts. The iron and steel issues have suffered most lately. This has been traceable chiefly to the operation of special causes. Some of the iron and steel properties, it is now disclosed, have been made to serve insiders. One of the most important—the American Steel and Wire Company—has had unloaded upon it the outside enterprises of some of its managers. A steamboat company, heavily capitalized, has been foisted upon the Wire Trust on terms which yield extraordinary profits to Directors who have bargained with themselves. A review of this transaction in court can have good effects. No principle in corporation law is better determined than that Directors cannot trade with themselves for personal gain; and it will not be short of a scandal if there be not some security holder courageous enough, independent enough, to insist upon judicial scrutiny of this particular case.

In so far as the making of steel and iron products is concerned, there is nothing discouraging in any quarter. Business is brisk, profits are substantial, and activity increases. Of the iron and steel issues on the New York Stock Exchange, practically all represent prospering properties. Tennessee Coal, Federal Steel and others less prominent are apparently all progressing favorably. In every one of them exists a short interest; and thus, from the speculative as well as from the more substantial standpoint of actual value, they are favorably situated.

European transactions in this market are insignificant measured by surface indications. Some swapping of contracts marks opening transactions on the Stock Exchange every morning, but on balance slight differences show. Yet operators of importance, having close international relationships, persist in the belief that both London and Berlin are heavily short of American stocks, and have been since before election. The refusal of this market to react must be disappointing to foreign speculators, who, relying upon precedent, have been awaiting declines for weeks past. Whatever the disposition of the speculative element on the other side of the ocean may be, however, it is the testimony of practically every important banking interest that English and German investors are showing newly favorable disposition toward American issues. A curious incident appears in the recent offering of Hamburg municipal bonds here, while coincidently Hamburg bankers subscribe millions of dollars for a single new American railway extension. There is plenty of money in Europe disposed to make American investments now that American investments are safe beyond political cavil.

What more than most other indications certifies the security market's quality appears in the developing leadership of stocks like New York Central and Pennsylvania. All of the standard railway issues are strong, and they which have most merit are strongest. Better sign there could not be.

YESTERDAY'S MARKET.

The stock market yesterday was quiet and, until toward the close, strong and steady. At that time, following the publication of the bank statement, a bear drive was made, with the result that, together with some profit-taking, prices were forced somewhat lower.

There was somewhat less speculative activity than on recent days, but the investment demand was still considerable, and the standard stocks were all well bought. There was no news influencing the market one way or the other, the trading being of the kind that generally characterizes a Saturday, when the "evening up" process most asserts itself. What developments there were were of a favorable nature, and included a number of railway statements—among them Pennsylvania, Omaha, and Louisville and Nashville. The net figures of the lines directly operated by Pennsylvania showed an increase in October of $502,600, making a $5,609,400 increase for the ten months to the end of the month; while Louisville and Nashville's October net showed a gain of $112,250, and Omaha's for the same month an increase of $91,750.

The renewed buying in Southern Railway shares was a feature of the market, and was accompanied by continued talk of closer working relations with the Seaboard Air Line.

The publication of the circular letter of the Sugar Trust telling of a cut in refined was followed by a drive against that stock. On the floor of the Exchange a story preceding the publication of the circular was that the circular would deal with the dividend question and a reduction was forecasted. This, however, was without foundation.

Local railway shares were heavy, without any apparent reason.

In relation to the many rumors in respect to the affairs of American and Continental Tobacco, C. P. Buchanan, formerly of Buchanan & Lyall, is out with a statement to the effect that the report "involving him in connection with the tobacco business & its securities is unauthorized." Mr. Buchanan says he has not expressed any opinion, either directly or indirectly, for publication.

THE BANK STATEMENT.

The bank statement issued yesterday shortly before the close of business was about what generally had been expected. Surplus reserves decreased $1,412,600, loans increased $11,778,000, specie increased $2,152,500, legal tenders decreased $310,200, and deposits increased $13,019,600.

The increase in loans and deposits was a large factor in influencing the decrease in surplus reserves, something over $3,000,000 additional reserve being required because of the larger deposits. The increase in loans is attributed not so much to continued stock market activity as to borrowing during the week to provide for dividend and interest payments due Dec. 1.

***

Previous to the publication of the statement, the stock market had been dull, but steady, but following the figures a bear drive was made against the market and prices declined somewhat.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE SITUATION.

The advance in exchange gained further headway during the present week. A careful inquiry fails to reveal any other cause for the advance than securities returning from abroad. The demand for remittance caused by this return movement of our stocks and bonds was slightly reinforced by the demand for cover of the gold arriving in California from Australia. Besides these causes there must be others to account for this advance. What they are, if any, has not yet transpired. The advance, at all events, brought out a mass of accumulated exchange from all points of the Union and Canada. Hence the reaction of last Tuesday. The mass of returned securities, however, seems to have been so great that even this large extra supply failed to make anything more than a mere temporary impression on the market. Of commercial bills the supply amounted to a fair average, although the export business in both cotton and grain suffered from temporary obstructions, confining the movement to a limited number of exporters, while the bulk of our shippers were idle. The week's total, however, shows a fair average.

PENNSYLVANIA STOCK.

The Committee on Securities of the New York Stock Exchange rules that Pennsylvania Railroad Company stock certificates, whether issued in New York, registered by the American Exchange National Bank, or in Philadelphia, registered by the Girard Trust Company, are a good delivery. Certificates heretofore issued in Philadelphia, countersigned by an officer of the company, will be a good delivery until further notice.

THIRD AVENUE BONDS.

The report that the Third Avenue Railroad Company contemplated the issuance of additional bonds was confirmed yesterday, when Kuhn, Loeb & Co. announced that on Dec. 7 they will receive subscriptions for $10,000,000 of the company's first consolidated mortgage 4 per cent. 100-year gold bonds. These are part of a total authorized issue of $50,000,000, of which amount $13,433,000 is reserved to retire outstanding issues.

IMPORTS FOR THE WEEK.

The imports of dry goods and general merchandise for the week were valued at $12,621,535. The imports of specie amounted to $117,423, and the exports of specie to $948,118.

THE NATIONAL PROSPERITY

Great Business Improvement Reported from Many Cities.

Leading Brokers and Banking Authorities Give Their Views on Present and Prospective Conditions.

What Wall Street hears of improved business conditions and increased confidence throughout the country finds corroboration in specific statements made by foremost brokers and banking authorities doing business at practically every important point. Some representative opinions will be found herewith:

Chicago Trade Active.

JOHN DUPEE of Schwartz, Dupee & Co., Chicago, telegraphs—I expect to see quiet spots in the stock market and occasional reactions, but the outlook for earnings for most of the Western roads is too bright to warrant belief in any more than temporary setbacks. Wall Street traders, as a class, seem to fail to realize the extent of the prosperity in sight in the West. I notice liberal sales of stocks the past week in anticipation of the usual December decline. The month this year, I think, will prove an exception to the rule. There is every reason why it should. Country banks never were so full of money; country collections are good; farmers and country merchants as a rule are in easy circumstances. Except in the Northwest and a few spots in the corn belt grain crops have been bountiful. Taking the surplus corn-producing States as a whole, the yield has never been more bountiful nor the quality more satisfactory. The old crop being exhausted, the new crop is bound to bring remunerative prices to the farmer. Cattle, sheep, and hogs are all selling well. The stocks of provisions have been well eaten up, which insures good prices the coming Winter for hogs. In the Winter wheat districts the growing crop never looked better at this season of the year. Reports we get to-day from Kansas say that wheat is being freely offered, but along the lines of railway being full and cars scarce, shippers are restricted in their operations and receipts at primary markets less than they would otherwise be.

***

ALBERT M. DAY of Counselman & Day, Chicago, wires—The construction of parallel railways peculiar to conditions prevailing in the early eighties, when the Nickel Plate and West Shore Roads were built for the express purpose of depreciating the value of the Lake Shore and New York Central Roads, and forcing the purchase of those companies, is an idea of the past. The territory east of the Mississippi River is supplied with railway facilities to an extent where the demands of business are fully met. During the past dozen years the railways have passed through trying times, and many have been reorganized on a basis of reduced interest charges. Operating expenses, due to more conservative methods, have been largely reduced, and, at the same time, the physical condition very much improved. Consolidation and concentration of ownership have resulted in stability of rates. The country is rapidly growing in population and wealth. Good dividend-paying railway securities are being bought for investment and consequently disappearing from the market. Such stocks as St. Paul, Rock Island, Burlington, Union Pacific, Northern Pacific, Atchison, &c., will follow Lake Shore, Northwestern, Omaha, Michigan Central, New York Central, and Pennsylvania. The traffic of the railways in the territory west of and tributary to Chicago is now of such a character and so diversified that a failure of crops for one or two successive seasons would not cause the passing of dividends. American railway securities, that is to say, bonds and preferred stocks, are the safest and best investment securities in the world at present market prices. General mercantile business in and around Chicago has never been better.

***

RAYMOND, PYNCHON & CO. of Chicago, telegraph—The outlook in the West and Southwest Territories continues very encouraging, with reports of our railroads continuing to show increases in both their gross and net earnings. Attention is called to the fact that earnings reported to this date do not include any of the gains surely to arise from increased business due to the recent satisfactory political decision. Money remains easy, and bank reserves are increasing without any great expansion of loans. It would seem that many of the large railroad systems will maintain their freight rates by closer relationships, if not consolidations, and with economical and scientific management maintain earnings sufficient not only to pay regular dividends, but with the probability of increasing them. With business and large crops practically assured for the coming year, we should think that this situation would invite and encourage both investment and speculative purchases of railway shares. All reports we receive from industrial enterprises are that the outlook for trade is more encouraging than ever, and it seems to be simply a question of good management to insure the success of most of these enterprises.

Prosperity in Philadelphia.

E. R. DICK of Dick Brothers & Co., Philadelphia and New York, telegraphs—I look forward to a period of great prosperity. The boom of 1880 was caused by the return to specie payments, which gave this country credit everywhere, which credit was used in building railroads all over the West and opening up the country. The future boom will be based on our becoming the financial centre of the world, and that credit will allow us to expand our foreign business and open new markets for the products of field, mine, and mill, with consequent good railroad earnings. This big market is simply the reaction from the quiet we had before the election. The real bull market has not begun yet.

***

FREDERICK PAXSON & CO. of Philadelphia, correspondents of Raymond, Pynchon & Co., wire as follows—Business conditions here are generally good, particularly in the iron and steel trade and allied industries, and every one is looking forward to great activity the coming year and very prosperous times. Necessarily the railroads must share in the universal prosperity, and the car movements reported recently indicate that earnings are still increasing, which will be reflected in the coming monthly statements. The anthracite coal roads are an exception for the time being, in consequence of the late miners' strike, but they have before them a year of full business at very satisfactory prices. The outlook is conceded on all sides to be most promising, many shops and factories having orders booked that will keep them busy for a year to come. The working people are getting full wages and are happy and contented, and when the workingman and farmer are prosperous the whole country grows rich. In short, it would seem that only a calamity of some kind can prevent the biggest year's business this country has ever seen, and the more enthusiastic claim that it will extend over a period of two or three years.

Boston Business Booms.

GEORGE E. ARMSTRONG of Boston, Mass., head of the banking house of George E. Armstrong & Co., New York, Boston, and London, telegraphs—From all that I have been able to see of the tendency of financial and commercial affairs in New England, we are entering upon a period of unexampled prosperity. Perhaps no other single industry is a better index of the condition of business in this section than that of the manufacture of boots and shoes. For several months past the working shops have all been running on about half time, and some 30 per cent. of them have been closed down entirely, for the simple reason that prices of the manufactured goods were out of all proportion to the market for the raw material. In the last two weeks this condition has changed wonderfully, and we now see advancing prices for boots and shoes, and all the shops in the New England district working on full time, with orders rushing in in greater amounts than have been known for six months past. In iron and steel manufacture and general distributive lines I can see the same indications, and this must sooner or later be reflected in further improvement in security prices, particularly as the absorption of securities by investors is now on a very large scale. There is danger of getting too much steam on in the stock market, and reactions must occur, but they should be taken advantage of by conservative operators.

Baltimore's Good Times.

CLINTON P. PAINE & CO. of Baltimore, corespondents of John H. Davis & Co., telegraph—The result of the election removed all obstacles, and gives assurance of prosperity. Our factories are full of orders, which will yield good profits and keep them busy for months to come. This insures steady work with good pay to the workmen, which means prosperous times for retailers. The volume of jobbing is good, probably larger than usual for this late in the season, as buyers held off until the political horizon cleared up. Bonds and stocks have had a good advance in price. This being a bond market, most of the buying has been for investment. The demand for such securities continues good, at advanced prices. The stock market, which for so long a time ruled dull and featureless, sprang into activity, and many good dividend-paying stocks, which had, owing to dullness generally, fallen much below their intrinsic value, have rapidly advanced, but are still good to buy, even at higher figures, as they both earn and pay good dividends. The especial feature of our Exchange recently has been in Seaboard securities. The expected withdrawal by Mr. Ryan of the various suits instituted by him against the consolidation of the various roads into the Greater Seaboard system, caused great activity with very marked advance. The feeling is strong here that we will have good business in all lines, with, necessarily, general prosperity.

Buffalo's Happy Thanksgiving.

EDWIN A. BELL, manager of the Buffalo office of Bartlett, Frazier & Co., wires from Buffalo, through John H. Davis & Co., the firm correspondent here, as follows—Buffalonians ate their Thanksgiving turkey with a genuine sentiment of thanks for a past of prosperity and a future full of hope. The year 1900 has been an extraordinary one, in that railroads, shipping, grain, real estate, renting, and banking interests have large profits to their credit, and in all these Buffalo is vitally interested. The Pan-American Exposition, which opens next May, has already attracted large hordes of laborers and skilled mechanics to the city, filling up all vacant houses and necessitating many new ones. Work on this big electric fair has progressed marvelously, and it is already taking on wonderful and beautiful proportions. It has brought in its train many large projects in the way of hotels which are now building. Our largest hotel has increased its capacity twofold, and made other improvements at a cost of $500,000. The Niagara Falls Power Company, which owns the tunnel at the falls, has been working all Summer doubling its electric generative apparatus, and will next year have 100,000 horse power to sell, a large part of which is now contracted for in Buffalo. The Cataract Power and Conduit Company, which transmits about 20,000 horse power to Buffalo, will have three conduits where it now has but one. Only second in immediate importance to the Pan-American in Buffalo's growth is the immense Lackawanna Iron and Steel Company's plant now building on the lake shore. This means a $25,000,000 investment here, all new capital, the employment of several thousand mechanics, and Buffalo as a permanent and puissant rival of Pittsburg as an iron centre. With Lake Superior ore delivered by boat at Buffalo's docks, with coal and coke but a short railroad haul away, with cheap electricity for power and smelting purposes, and a broad waterway through which to deli business is excellent in the City of Cincinnati, and more, it is sound to the core. Never before has there been such a hum of wheels in the various manufactories, and such an output of foreign and domestic orders. An exception, however, rules in the machine tool business, which is generally dull and in some cases flat. Money is a comparative drug, and the wonder is where the cash comes from to make the investments that are making and have been made and to do the increased trade without friction. The city has just sold bonds on a 2.80 basis, which is a proof of her credit and sound financial condition, as these bonds were taken for home consumption. Railroads are loaded with traffic, and the cry is for more cars to move the freight, while financially they have large sums on hand, instead of borrowing, as is usual at this season. The officials are enthusiastic as to the present conditions and the outlook. In fact, the views of various bankers and business men are that the future promise is without a cloud, and for a persistence of the present energy in the two or three years to come.

Kansas City Prospers.

COUNSELMAN & DAY, from their Kansas City, (Mo.) office, telegraph—General business conditions were never better in this section. Locally, all branches of trade report satisfactory business, many lines far in excess of last year. Factories of all kinds are running up to their full facilities and employing all available help. Crops have been marketed at unusually remunerative prices, and the farmers, most of whom are out of debt, are adding acres, or rather, new sections, to their farms, and are liberal purchasers of all kinds of merchandise. The receipts of live stock at the Stock Yards are exceedingly large, but not more so than the local packing houses can take care of. In fact, Kansas City has been forced to reach out into territory of other markets in order to supply the demand for its products. The railroads are busy to their utmost capacity, hauling merchandise, and most of them have found their rolling stock entirely inadequate to handle the business offering, and have been able to but partially supply the demand for cars to bring in the grain along their lines. The general outlook for the immediate future all over the Southwest was never so propitious as at present. With our banks loaded with money, with our farmers practically out of debt, and all our merchants and manufacturers prosperous, and all lines of transportation taxed to their utmost capacity, this city and the territory tributary confidently expect the most prosperous season in its history.

Louisville's Business Satisfactory.

HALSEY & HALSEY of Louisville, Ky., wire—The Fall business in Louisville, in all lines, has been entirely satisfactory. Many proprietors say they could not ask for it to be better, and have never had it better in their lives. All report the outlook for the coming Year as being good. This applies to the dry goods, grocery, boot and shoe, paint and oil, jeans manufacturing, tanning, sole leather, wagon and plow manufacturing, flour milling, grain, hardware, and rolling mill industries. The fine whisky trade is reported as better. As usual, the leaf tobacco dealings will lead the world. Banks and trust companies report a good demand for money at fair rates, which they think will continue. The railroads entering here report a considerable shortage in cars, a good business, and consequently good earnings. The Globe Refining Company, a cottonseed oil concern, is in process of being taken over by a new set of people, who will increase its capital and enlarge the plant. Collections are reported as being good. Demand for investment bonds is very good, with the local supply limited.

Colorado is Hopeful.

COUNSELMAN & DAY telegraph from Denver, Col.—The revival of prosperity which began at the East ten years ago is only now reaching Colorado. It promises to swell to the proportions of a tidal wave. Business in every line is increasing rapidly. The whole State has recovered from a ten years' depression. With the election over, our people have cheerfully turned their faces to the future. Even silver mining in Colorado is exceedingly prosperous, and the metal has recovered 25 per cent. from the panic slump, owing to the renewed Oriental demand for it. The gold output of the present year will break the record and attract the attention of the world. The iron, coke, and coal output surpasses anything known in the boom days. The earnings of the railroads promise increased dividends. Even businesses depending exclusively upon silver mining camps never did as much business as now. The multifarious resources of the State are beginning a golden era of development. The extensive sheep and cattle interests are at high-water mark. The farmers by irrigation are more prosperous than ever before, and are generally out of debt. The successful inauguration of beet-sugar culture promises to double the returns of their lands by lifting the crop value from $20 to $50 per acre. The second beet-sugar factory, costing a million, has just opened, and a dozen more are projected. The movement for storage reservoirs will increase the irrigated acres from five to seven millions. This land is the best on earth for sugar beets, and could produce enough sugar at present prices to bring five times the amount of our gold and silver yield. Colorado possesses more home capital than any Western State, and it is at least going into home investments. The banks are full of money, and are loaning more liberally now than at any time since the panic. Rents are rising in Denver, and a new era of building has begun here, as well as in all cities of the State. In spite of the general depression and the last silver-mining slump, Colorado has gained 23 per cent. in the census, and gains a Congressman, while Kansas and Nebraska have gained only 1 and 3 per cent."

Two Views from Cleveland.

ADDISON H. HOUGH of Otis & Hough, Cleveland, correspondents of Post & Flagg, says—I do not think there is any question or any doubt about the future. The mills in Cleveland are running very full and, following election, orders for steel and iron products seemed to fairly pour in. Many of the steel mills are behind in their orders. It seems to me that the country is entering upon a new era, commercially, industrially, and financially, and that we are in for at least three or four years of unexampled prosperity. There is plenty of money available for investment.

HERBERT WRIGHT & CO. of Cleveland wire—While no especial feature is reported in business circles here, some reports are heard that collections are not up to those of a year ago. Officers of the large iron concerns centring here report a very large demand, with prospect of a continuation of same, although local papers have recently published statements to the effect that one thousand men had been laid off in the Newburg mills owing to a falling off in the demand for iron. Banks report a good demand for money from regular customers, with no indications of a boom, but rather of a healthy condition of trade. Jobbers say that they are experiencing the effects of between seasons, the election having had some effect in curtailing business in many lines, while in others an inclination to wait for the Christmas offerings has tended to cut down the demand. There is a slight inclination on the part of some to be pessimistic with regard to the present condition of trade, more particularly on the part of those who thought the election would be a sure cure for all business evils, and that the passing of the vote would mean the dawn of a new era of commercial activity. More conservative heads seem satisfied that there is no cause for complaint; believing the adjustment of the revenue laws will soon be an accomplished fact, and that this will have a tendency to correct some of the now existing defects in some particular lines. The fact that two National banks and one trust company with an aggregate capital stock of about $2,000,000, have been organized here within the past three weeks is looked upon by the more optimistic as an indication of renewed business prosperity, while, on the other hand, it is argued that it would be better were such capital utilized in the formation of manufacturing concerns, whereby the money would meet with more direct distribution among the men who toil. All in all, there is probably a slight preponderance in favor of disappointment over the failure of business to pick up in keeping with the expectations of the more sanguine as expressed prior to election.

LONDON'S FINANCIAL COMMENT.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Surveying the money position, The Statist says:

"American exchange this week has appreciably risen. There is now little probability that any demand will be made on London for gold for America. On the contrary, should a pressure arise in London toward the end of December, as is not improbable, we may have to obtain gold in New York."

Money has been difficult all the week, mainly owing to month-end demands.

"This is no reason to worry, but," says The Investors' Review, "the uneasiness continues under the surface and is amply warranted by our position. About £318,000 has left the Bank for abroad. The 4 per cent. rate is powerless to attract floating supplies. In meeting obligations it will have to pay out all Australia has supplied. India has parted with considerable stock to pay for silver without being able to send us a single sovereign. We thus approach the year end not only with ordinary mercantile requirements to provide for, but with indefinitely enormous Government bills to be met, for which gold is required. The Bank cannot hope under the present circumstances to make 5 per cent. effective without loss to itself. It would then have to bid higher for the money it takes off the market, and the moment the Treasury made a large disbursement all its efforts would be futile, rates would tumble back, and the bill brokers would be inclined to work down rates instead of, as now, keeping them up, believing themselves safe under 5 per cent., whereas 4 keeps them in permanent nervousness."

There was no rush of applications for the Exchequer bonds. Sixty-five per cent. was allotted at 97.18. "What is the use," says The Investors' Review, "of these millions, measured by the necessities of the Government? With such a small sum the Treasury will be unable to pay back any of the £7,750,000 owing to the Bank, and will hardly be able to pay the fortnight's extra war bills. The application of such a tiny remedy to a position calculated to fill the mind with despair resembles an attempt to put out a raging fire with a garden squirt. Still, the three millions may postpone the 5 per cent. rate temporarily, create an illusion about the Winter prospects, and augment the ultimate difficulties."

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Transactions in the market for outside securities yesterday were on a small scale, and few changes of any importance occurred in prices. Of the active issues, one or two showed considerable weakness, but as a whole the market was fairly steady at prevailing quotations. British Columbia Copper was the only one of the copper shares that showed much activity, and this issue advanced substantially. The industrials that had been most prominent in recent trading showed fair activity, but were irregular.

INTERNATIONAL PUMP was traded in to the extent of over 1,000 shares, and on selling which seemed to be somewhat urgent sold from 29 down to 28¼, and at the close was offered at 28. The preferred stock, though less active, declined with the common, and at the close showed a net loss of 2½ points. There was no news regarding the stock to which the declines were attributed, and they seemed merely the result of somewhat heavy liquidation. For some time past this stock had been one of the most active of the industrials, as well as one of the strongest issues of this group.

CONSOLIDATED EQUIPMENT was much quieter than on the earlier days of the week. It opened at 14½, and sold off fractionally, but closed with a slight net gain at 14¼ bid.

TELEPHONE, TELEGRAPH AND CABLE was extremely weak, but was not traded in to any large extent. At the close 3 was the best bid for the stock, and it was offered at 3¼. As was more or less generally supposed the recent weakness in this stock was due to the fact that the Directors had decided to make a further call. Notice has been sent to stockholders to the effect that the Directors have called the sum of $5 a share, equivalent to 10 per cent., payable on or before Dec. 31. The circular announcing the assessment does not state for what specific purposes the call was made. Another circular issued yesterday by the President of the company states that the call was made because it is the opinion of the Directors further moneys will be needed to safeguard the interests of the stockholders in the event that plans for a readjustment of the present form of the company's stock should be delayed beyond the time when it is expected the proposed changes will be completed. It is not stated whether or not any further calls will be made on the stock, although the inference seems to be that no further calls will be made if the present plans are carried into effect.

BRITISH COLUMBIA COPPER sold up to 21 and closed at 20⅝ bid, a net gain of half a point. The total transactions amounted to probably more than 2,000 shares.

PITTSBURG, BESSEMER AND LAKE ERIE was traded in to the extent of about 500 shares, all of which sold at 27. It closed with a half point net gain at 26¼ bid.

STANDARD OIL sold up to 780 and closed at 775 bid, a net gain of 15 points.

GENERAL CARRIAGE was active at 5⅞ and 6. Insiders say that there seems to be very little of the stock for sale.

INTERSTATE OIL sold up to 72¾ and closed at 72 bid, a net gain of one and a half points.

Closing quotations yesterday, compared with those of the previous day, were as follows:

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Considerable money has changed hands in connection with the calls upon new issues of capital amounting to £900,000 and the distribution of various dividends and interests, aggregating £1,500,000. The accession of supplies from the Bank of England eased the market. Discounts sympathized, much less going to the Bank of England.

Business on the Stock Exchange to-day was quiet, but irregular. Consols were dull. Home rails became firm, especially Scotch. Americans were fairly steady. They opened at parity, and there was a continued demand for Chesapeakes. They closed easier. Grand Trunks were weak on the October revenue returns.

The week's business on the Stock Exchange was largely confined to the settlement. Nowhere was new activity developed. Although Americans continued to advance, dealings in them dwindled much. The Investors' Review thinks "individual securities may be higher, and, perhaps, the whole list raised. But the frequent sharp setbacks are probable, especially in December, when the money agony might be acute in New York, as well as in London and Berlin. The process of realizing on foreign securities, in order to meet home obligations, must continue. Whether willing or unwilling, indefinite Exchequer borrowing hangs over us, trade is shrinking, no large class of securities can go up, and most of them are certain to decline."

Consols, for money, 98⅛; consols, for the account, (January,) 98⅛; Atchison, 41⅝; Canadian Pacific, 88⅜; St. Paul, 131¾; Illinois Central, 123½; Louisville, 86⅝; Union Pacific preferred, 84½; New York Central, 146¾; Erie, 14⅜; Pennsylvania, 72¼; Reading, 19⅝; Erie first preferred, 41¾; Northern Pacific preferred, 80½; Grand Trunk, 6¼; Anaconda, 10½; Rand Mines, 40.

Money, 2½@3 per cent. The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 3⅝@3 15-16 per cent., and for three months' bills is 3 15-16 per cent.

Spanish 4s, 69⅝.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Buenos Ayres, 132; Madrid, 33.65; Lisbon, 37.25; Rome, 5.57½.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—Prices were irregular on the Bourse to-day. Internationals were firm, under the advance in rentes. Kafirs opened strong and, closed steady. Rio Tintos and Turks opened with an advance, which was afterward lost. Industrials were pressed for sale and declined. Credit Foncier was in strong demand and improved considerably.

Three per cent. rentes, 101f 40c for the account. Exchange on London, 25f 10c for checks.

Spanish fours closed at 70.07½.

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—Prices were firm on the Boerse here to-day, the feature being the buoyancy of Argentines. Chinese were higher. Locals were fairly active on some bear covering. Hamburg-Americans rose in consequence of a rumor that they had been introduced on the New York Stock Exchange.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 44½ pfenings for checks.

Discount rates: Short bills, 4 per cent.; three months' bills, 4⅛ per cent.

PROPOSED NEW SUGAR PLANT.

Secrecy Observed Concerning the Refinery to be Built at Shady Side.

Since the announcement last week that a grant of land under water at Shady Side, near Fort Lee, N. J., had been awarded to the Morris Building Company of New York, whose purpose, as shown in contracts submitted to the New Jersey Riparian Commissioners, is to build a sugar refinery next year, efforts have been made to learn what interests were back of the venture.

Representatives of each of the three substantial sugar interests in this part of the country have said that they were not prepared to talk about the matter, as they had not learned what interests were backing the Morris Building Company.

THE NEW YORK TIMES then asked the New Jersey Riparian Commissioners for information, to which request Secretary Payne of the commission replied that the only persons known to be connected with the Morris Building Company were its counsel, Steele & Otis.

Mr. Steele, when seen yesterday, said that the Morris Building Company was not likely at present to build either a sugar refinery or a glucose factory, but that it might assist other interests to do so.

PRICES OF SUGAR.

Our basis for granulated is $5.60 less 16 cents per hundred pounds, 1 per cent. in cash and an additional conditional allowance of 1 per cent. At present it is possible to purchase sugar of other manufacture on a lower basis than our quotations.

The letter concludes with an appeal for sugar orders, "while present market differences exist."

The National yesterday advanced its list price for refined sugar from 5.45 to 5.55.

Fidelity Bank Opens To-morrow.

The Fidelity Bank, which was incorporated as a State institution recently with a capital of $200,000 and surplus of $100,000, will begin operations to-morrow at Madison Avenue and Seventy-fifth Street. Its officers are as follows: President—Edward H. Peaslee; Vice President—James Stillman; Cashier—Frederick Fowler. The Directory includes Thomas P. Fowler, Jacob H. Schiff, ex-Mayor Hugh J. Grant, and Charles R. Henderson.

To use the poet's words, it's almost like trying to paint the lightning with charcoal to try to picture with pen all there is to tell about this great store just now. Never have we made such preparations for your enjoyment, convenience and advantage. Every word will be the sincerer, every smile the brighter, every step the quicker and every heart beat the faster for a visit here. Extraordinary Sale Brass & Iron Beds.

The Most Unusual Event of the Year.

All the more remarkable because quite unexpected at this season. To be brief, it happened this wise: A prominent maker is moving his warerooms. He has to vacate the old before the new is complete and rather than store his samples offered them to us at a great sacrifice—all of them. There are eighty-five Brass and eighty-five Iron—fancy colors, no two alike—the most imposing sight of handsome beds ever offered for sale at one time. And the prices are away under those of the makers.

Double beds and twin beds, every one made in the very best manner and thoroughly up to date in design. We know of no such opportunity ever happening before. By the way, why wouldn't a Brass Bedstead make a good holiday gift? Here are some of the prices, but they don't commence to give you an idea of the real values on the third floor of our Furniture Store:

THE OUTLOOK IN CONGRESS

Only Bills Considered Absolutely Necessary to be Passed.

SHIPPING BILL IS PUT FIRST

Talk of Closure Rule in the Senate Is Not Practical—Opposition to the Army Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—There are few indications here to-day that the Congress is to reassemble to-morrow. At the hotels there is scarcely more than the usual number of familiar faces, and only at the Normandie, where Speaker Henderson lives, and where he has been called upon by many of the Republican members who have reached the city, has there been anything like a considerable flocking of statesmen and politicians. The Capitol records show that about half the Senate was in town yesterday at noon, and not half the members of the House. It is evident that most of the members feel that there is no urgent necessity for arriving here in advance of the day of reassembling.

Among those members who have been here for a few days the only topic of conversation is the order of business, and about this there is general agreement that it will include only those measures absolutely necessary to be passed. By common agreement the programme is to include the Ship Subsidy bill, the Nicaragua Canal bill, the Army bill, the bill to reduce the war taxes, and the bill to reapportion the Congressional representation.

The Ship Subsidy bill has been put in first place by those who have talked with Senator Hanna since his arrival yesterday and his meeting with the leading advocates of a subsidy measure. Senator Hanna is characteristically enthusiastic in his support of the bill, and says that it will pass. But he is aware that there is opposition to it. "The trouble is," the Senator says, "that the word subsidy frightens a great many people, and they are against the bill without knowing the vast amount of benefit it will bestow on the country." But Representative Burton, who lives in and represents the very district from which Mr. Hanna comes, is referred to every day as one of the Republicans who are opposed to the bill on principle, on the ground that it favors a few at the expense of the many.

The friends of the Ship Subsidy bill from New York, representing the Merchants' Association, have learned something of the character of the opposition that the bill is likely to encounter, and unconsciously perhaps are contributing to the opposition by opposing the policy urged until very recently by the Bureau of Navigation. Two representatives of the Merchants' Association appear to-day in a letter to a local newspaper as opposing any bill that intends to promote the merchant marine by granting free registry to foreign built ships while bounties or other gratuities are extended to home-built ships. Commissioner of Navigation Chamberlain has directed attention repeatedly, in his reports for the Bureau of Navigation, to the fact that, of all the maritime powers, the United States is the only one that does not permit its citizens to buy ships in foreign countries at the same time that it offers inducements to domestic ship builders and ship owners to extend their investments in ships and freight-carrying on the high seas.

Senator Hanna's talk about the Ship Subsidy bill has led to discussion of the possible hostile attitude of Senator Pettigrew, and the intimation that his opposition to the bill might provoke the adoption of a closure rule in the Senate. If that is really intended, it will be safe to assert that there will be no shipping bill, and possibly no Nicaragua Canal bill, passed during the session. An effort to change the rules of the Senate so as to shut off debate when even the friends of a bill have become anxious to have it passed may consume as much time in talk as an attempt to pass a bill. Any effort to make this important change in the Senate rules would be regarded here by old observers as a practical abandonment of disputed legislative propositions.

As for the Nicaragua Canal bill, it is almost certain that its passage will follow rather than precede the ratification of the Hay-Pauncefote agreement modifying the Clayton-Bulwer treaty.

The Army bill promises to confuse the House, and the attitude of opposition of the staff of the army to any bill that appears to infringe upon their traditional rights and privileges may compel the acceptance of some compromise like that suggested by Messrs. Slayden and Hay, Democratic members of the Military Committee, extending the present status for the army for three years. The present Congress cannot provide for the army for that period, but the Democrats assume that the Republicans will do that part of the business in the next Congress.

From the Committee on the Twelfth Census comes the intimation that the Apportionment bill will be but a report fixing a ratio that will not deprive any States except possibly Kansas and Nebraska of members with no effort to deprive the Southern States of representation on the ground that voters in that section are deprived of the right of suffrage. The lack of time for discussion of a proposition to reduce representation for that reason will be given for making the apportionment strictly upon a population basis.

Republican members are not satisfied with the list of articles relieved of taxation by the bill, and if too much opposition becomes evident when the House convenes on Monday, the leaders probably will call a conference or caucus for the purpose of adjusting and harmonizing differences.

On Thursday the Grout Oleomargarine bill will come up as a special order under a rule made at the last session. It imposes a tax of 10 cents per pound on oleomargarine, butterine, or other manufactures colored in imitation of butter. It has strong backing from the dairy interests, and while it will meet with warm opposition from the interests that are antagonizing its passage, when its reaches a vote its passage is regarded as a foregone conclusion. Two days, it is thought, will suffice for its consideration.

Saturday, under a special order made last session, will be devoted to eulogies on the life, character and public services of the late Representative Harmer of Pennsylvania, who for several years enjoyed the distinction of being the member holding the record for longest continuous service, and therefore entitled to the sobriquet "Father of the House."

THE SENATE PROGRAMME.

The Senate will be called to order at 12 o'clock to-morrow. Senator Allison will make the announcement of the death of his colleague Senator Gear, and there is hope that Senator Nelson may arrive in time to perform similar service concerning Senator Davis. These announcements will be preceded by the ceremony of swearing in the new members, who this year are Mr. Dolliver, who has been appointed to succeed Senator Gear, and Mr. Dillingham, who takes the place formerly occupied by Senator Ross of Vermont, and the appointment of the usual committees to wait upon the President and the House of Representatives.

Mr. Frye expects to get up the Shipping Subsidy bill on Tuesday, and if not on that day, then on Wednesday, and in doing this to have the Spooner Philippine bill displaced. This will be the beginning of the important work of the session, and upon the success or failure of the plan may depend much of the future course of proceedings for the entire session.

In order to accomplish this result it will be necessary, first, to get the consent of the Republican committee on Order of Business, and to this end a meeting of that committee will be held after the adjournment of the Senate Monday afternoon. Mr. Frye said to-day that he already had conferred with a majority of the members of that committee and that he felt assured he would have no difficulty in securing assent to the proposed change.

Thus far there has been no consultation with Democratic Senators, but the friends of the Shipping bill do not look for much opposition to the taking up of the bill from that source. A motion to take up the measure is not debatable, under the Senate rules, and they are confident of a majority on a vote if a roll call should be demanded. It is probable that a friendly arrangement will be made with Senator Morgan, who has the Nicaragua Canal bill in charge, that bill being on the calendar as a special order for Dec. 10.

There is some talk of an effort during the week to get up the Hay-Pauncefote treaty in executive session, but there is as yet no definite programme to this end. A movement is on foot now to secure the assent of the Committee on Foreign Relations to the abandonment of the Davis amendment to the treaty for the fortification of the proposed canal.

The usual custom of adjourning over from Thursday to the following Monday during the first weeks of the session probably will be departed from this session. That is the desire of the Republican leaders now here, and they say there probably will be no such adjournment this week.

MORE GOLD IN ALASKA.

Rich Quartz Ledge Uncovered in the Atlin District—Copper Mining Force Doubled.

TACOMA, Washington, Dec. 2.—Excellent mining reports continue to come from Alaska. The richest quartz ledge ever found in the Atlin district has been uncovered in the Gleaner group, on Taku Arm. David Von Cramer has reached Skagway with samples of the ore in which free gold is very plentiful. He says the ledge is 18 feet wide and that it contains a streak of wonderfully rich ore. Two and one-half ounces from this streak were pounded in a mortar, yeilding nearlyl $1.50 in gold. The owners declare that half a ton of picked ore will yield over $12,000.

A. G. Preston of White Horse brings news that the number of men at work on the copper mines has been doubled since the completion of the railroad to White Horse. The ore of the district is very rich, and there seems to be no end to it.

The belt, so far discovered, is about fourteen miles long by two miles wide, and equally rich ore is found in all parts of the belt. The assays run as high as 72 per cent. copper, $20 in gold, and 14 to 15 ounces in silver. Several mines, including the Copper King and War Eagle, will ship ore this Winter, sending it by sleds to the railroad.

The official report of the Treadwell Mine at Juneau for the year ended May 31 shows that during the year bullion was sold to the amount of $1,153,368. The year's working profit was $673,901, and four dividends were paid amounting to $300,000, or 6 per cent. upon the capital stock. The average expense was a trifle more than 36 cents per ton, leaving a net working profit of $1.20 per ton. The ore now in sight is estimated at over 4,000,000 tons.

A letter from Cook Inlet states that the richest placers known in that district were found last month. "Jack" Sutton took from his Canyon Creek claim gravel giving $40 per pan. Two men working a lay on Lynx Creek cut through a bar averaging $20 per day per man. In two weeks they took out about $1,500 worth of gold.

These strikes have caused great excitement. Two weeks ago mining operations in the district were suspended for the Winter. A rich strike has been made on the Monte Carlo, Index District, Washington. At a depth of 320 feet the tunnel encountered a vein of gray copper, yielding values of nearly $100 per ton in gold and silver.

REFUSES TO WORK ON SUNDAY.

Chicago Policeman Resigns Because He Cannot Attend Church.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Edward S. Luez, one of the policemen recently appointed, has resigned. He was placed on trial at the Kensington Police Station, but when he learned that he would have to work on Sunday and would be unable to attend devotional services, he handed in his resignation. To-morrow he will return to his former position in the service of a foundry company.

WOLVES ATTACK MOURNERS.

Fierce Battle at a Grave in Minnesota Before They Are Driven Off.

Special to The New York Times.

BEMIDJI, Minn., Dec. 2.—A small party of settlers was attacked by a pack of wolves while engaged in burying a child near Roseau, fifty miles north of here, yesterday afternoon. Just as the body was being lowered into the grave a pack of wolves burst from the underbrush surrounding the cemetery. The leader of the pack, a gigantic brute, made a dash into the party of mourners, and bit Axel Johansen through the fleshy part of the left leg. This attack emboldened the rest of the animals, and they came to the aid of their leader.

For a few minutes a battle raged, the mourners striving to protect themselves, and at the same time to prevent the wolves from reaching the coffin. After several of the men and one of the women had been bitten by the wolves, a fire was started around the grave, near the edge of which the little party hovered, and this prevented the wolves from making a further attack. They remained in the vicinity until a party of settlers appeared with rifles and drove them off.

PROGRAMME OF CONGRESS.

Important Measure Ready to be Taken Up at Once—Little to be Done To-day.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Beyond the probable reading of the President's message no business of importance will be done in Congress Monday, both houses adjourning out of respect to the memory of Senators Gear and Davis, and Representatives Daly and Hoffecker, whose deaths will be announced.

The Army Reorganization bill will be reported probably on Tuesday and will be taken up at once unless, after further consultation, it is decided to let the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation bill, which also will be ready on Tuesday, go ahead of it. The Democrats will caucus on the bill on Monday.

The bill to reduce the war revenue taxes has been practically completed by the Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee, and it will be submitted to the full committee on Tuesday, unless in the meantime a caucus of the Republicans should be found advisable. Some of the

SPEEDY VENGEANCE FOLLOWS A MURDER

Italian Who Stabbed Another Riddled With Knife Wounds.

Friends of Dead Man Were Ostensibly Taking His Slayer to Jail—Doctors Say He Cannot Live.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Dec. 2.—Quick vengeance was taken upon a murderer here to-night, and it is probable that he will follow his victim to the grave within a day or two, if not within a few hours. Meanwhile four men and two witnesses are detained pending further investigation, and the four may have to stand trial for the murder of the murderer. It was a lynching almost. Four times the points of knives pierced the murderer's lungs, and his face and back and neck are literally full of holes where the infuriated friends of the murdered man wreaked their vengeance.

The dead man is Frank Tuscani, who lived on Huyler Street, in one of the Italian settlements of the town. The man who is dying is John Gambola of Cherry Hill. Gambola and his brothers, James and Solomon, came to Hackensack this afternoon to visit friends on Huyler Street. There were about a dozen persons in the party, and the afternoon was spent in drinking wine. During the evening a quarrel arose over some question connected with a horse deal.

The men in the room seem to have been engaged in a free fight when Gambola drew a knife and twice drove it into Tuscani's neck. The wounded man staggered out into the yard, where he fell dead.

The stabbing had calmed the fighters and sobered them, too. Gambola had not made any effort to escape at first, but when it was found his victim was dead he and his brothers tried to get away. They were speedily overpowered, for the fight had attracted a crowd of Italians. The proceedings following the effort to escape appear to have been most deliberate, and it is believed the friends of Tuscani planned that Gambola should never reach the jail alive.

Men well known in the Italian colony took charge of him, and announced that they would take him to the jail. No alarm had as yet reached the authorities. It is said that after Gambola was led away other men of the local colony detained all who sought to follow. Gambola was taken some distance through the streets in the direction of the jail, but not by the most direct and most public way. Then in a lonely spot he was stabbed again and again.

Gambola's agonized shrieks brought people promptly to the spot from all directions, but his assailants had already disappeared. He begged to be taken to the jail, and not killed there on the street. The men who came to his aid, none of them Italians, hurried him there. He was half led and half carried into the office of Sheriff Van Buskirk.

Dr. Conrad, who was summoned, did what he could to stay the flow of blood from the wounds, and then removed Gambola to the hospital, to which in the meantime a number of physicians had been summoned at his suggestion. They agreed that his condition was hopeless.

In the meantime Sheriff Van Buskirk had acted promptly. He aroused several deputies and swore in other citizens to aid him and began an investigation. The little police force also lent aid. The investigation was at first as barren of result as most investigations of such things among Italians are. It was not until the Sheriff and his men came upon Gambola's brothers looking for him that they began to get an idea of what had taken place.

When the men were told of the fate of their brother they became furious and talked. They were detained as witnesses. Upon their assertions four arrests were made. The prisoners were hustled into jail and locked in isolated cells, and extra guards detailed to see that they did not escape.

The Sheriff and his deputies then set out to seek the other men concerned. The Sheriff made no entry of the prisoners he had arrested up to midnight. Guards were set at all the railroad stations with orders to detain every Italian trying to leave by train, and officers were sent to the terminus of the trolley line to arrest any who tried to depart in that manner.

Other officers have gone to Cherry Hill, as they received information that Gambola's friends, other than his brothers, after getting away from the friends of Tuscani, had started for that place to get away from the trouble. The Sheriff's men have the names of several of the Cherry Hill Italians whom they expect to get as witnesses.

It is said that fully a dozen arrests are likely to take place among the Hackensack Italians. The Sheriff says he has reason to believe that those who remained at the house had a full understanding with those who accompanied the murderer, and he wants to arrest them.

It is the general belief that the men who were the actual assailants of Gambola are not yet under arrest. When asked who the prisoners were, Sheriff Van Buskirk replied he had not had time to ascertain definitely.

Little has been learned concerning the men involved in the affair. Tuscani is said to have been a popular and leading man among the local Italians, while Gambola was well known in Cherry Hill and also in this place.

RAILWAY PROFITS IN MICHIGAN

The Earnings for 1900 Will Probably Exceed Those of Last Year.

Special to The New York Times.

LANSING, Mich., Dec. 2.—At the beginning of the present year Michigan railroad earnings reached the highwater mark, but the earnings from month to month have increased over the corresponding months of last year until now Commissioner Osborn is confident that this year's earnings will break all records, exceeding even those of the World's Fair year.

The freight business is far beyond the capacity of the roads to handle with any degree of promptness, while the passenger business is also unusually heavy.

In October the companies earned $3,518,602, the increase over October, 1899, being $169,659. A total of $32,641,816 was earned to Nov. 1, this being an increase over the first ten months of last year of $2,991,784.

KWANG-SU MAY RETURN.

Chinese Court Said to be Anxious to Go Back, but Li-Hung-Chang Opposes It.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—"Chang-Chin-Tung has received a dispatch from Sian-Foo," says the Shanghai correspondent of The Standard, "directing him to stop the forwarding of further supplies to the Province of Shen-Si. It is rumored that Emperor Kwang-Su will return to Peking immediately and that the Empress Dowager will follow if the reception given him is satisfactory."

The Shanghai correspondent of The Times also reports that it is believed in well-informed circles that the Chinese Court is anxious to return to Peking, but he says that such a course would not be agreeable to Li-Hung-Chang, who hopes to gain an advantage from dissensions among the powers.

EXPECT CHINESE AGREEMENT.

Washington Officials Believe Powers Soon Will Reach Common Ground for Demands.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Administration officials are sanguine that the Ministers of the powers at Peking will soon reach a common ground of agreement in the demands to be made upon the Chinese imperial Government in satisfaction for the Boxer outrages.

The State Department is in communication with the Ministers and Ambassadors of the United States to the European Courts and advices which have come from them from time to time lead the officials here to hope that the powers will be brought to the position maintained by the United States in dealing with the Chinese, viz., that there should not be demands made upon the imperial Government which it is not able to fulfill. The Government has persistently held to this view in the progress of the negotiations between the Ministers at Peeking, and if the principle of this contention can be maintained in the combined note to be handed to the Chinese Plenipotentiaries a decided advantage will be had at the start.

The attitude of the Government on this subject has been made clear to Mr. Conger. The meeting between him and the German and British Ministers yesterday at Peking presumably was in compliance with the Minister's latest instructions from Washington. Nothing has been heard from Mr. Conger by the State Department for several days.

CHINESE FORM MILITIA.

British Approve Punitive Expeditions —Hart Defends Chinese.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—"Count von Waldersee expresses some solicitude," says the Peking correspondent of The Morning Post, "concerning expeditions into the surrounding country, but he believes that they are necessary and salutary. Most of the British officers approve them.

"Sir Robert Hart, in the course of conversation, said he considered the resentment against foreigners to be partly just and the outgrowth of the last sixty years of treaty relations. He seemed to think the settlement would be a difficult problem.

"Chinese military forces are being formed everywhere and, even if the importation of foreign arms is prohibited, a supply will be easily obtainable from Chinese arsenals.

TIEN-TSIN, Dec. 2.—The number of Chinese returning has been considerably augmented during the last few days. Apparently they are friendly.

The Provosts Marshal of the various nations are being daily informed as to the whereabouts of returning Boxers, but only those are arrested against whom there is conclusive evidence of having killed native Christians.

TRANSFER OF THE RAILROAD.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—According to the St. Petersburg correspondent of The Daily Mail, Prince Ukhtomsky, now in Peking, was commissioned to negotiate with Li-Hung-Chang for the transfer of the control of the Shan-Hai-Kwan Railroad to Russia.

TIEN-TSIN, Dec. 2.—Russia, it is understood here, will transfer the Shan-Hai-Kwan Railroad to the Germans Dec. 15.

The first locomotive since the siege of the legations ran yesterday from Tien-Tsin to Peking. The line will not be opened, however, for general use until about Dec. 15.

PEKING OBSERVATORY LOOTED.

French and Germans Remove Instruments—Other Powers Protest.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—Dr. Morrison, wiring to The Times from Peking, says:

"In pursuance of their regrettable policy of appropriation, the French and German Generals, with Count von Waldersee's approval, have removed from the wall of Peking the superb astronomical instruments erected two centuries ago by the Jesuit Fathers. Half of them will go to Berlin and the rest to Paris.

"The explanation of this act of vandalism is that inasmuch as the return of the Court is so improbable, such beautiful instruments should not be exposed to the possibilities of injury when Peking is no longer the capital."

TIEN-TSIN, Dec. 2.—Protests and requests have been forwarded to Field Marshal Count von Waldersee by the representatives of the powers, urging the prevention of the removal of astronomical instruments from the observatory at Peking. Most of the principal instruments have been prepared for shipment and labeled for Berlin or for Paris.

The Chinese themselves do not protest because, as members of Li-Hung-Chang's staff put it, their objections would be useless, as whatever they say or do in the way of protest only elicits uncivil treatment.

The observatory is universally recognized as one of the most interesting sights in Peking. Most of the instruments now out of place are over 150 years old. Many of them are magnificent bronzes, and, although not of modern type, can still be used for the purposes of astronomical observation.

Brig. Gen. Wilson Arrives.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 2.—Brig. Gen. James H. Wilson, who arrived here yesterday from China on the transport Thomas, will leave for Washington Tuesday to report to the War Department. Gen. Wilson is accompanied by Lieut. G. S. Turner of the Tenth Infantry, who was one of the two American Military Attachés who accompanied the Pao-ting-Foo expedition. Lieut. Turner says the expedition had a good moral effect.

TROLLEYS IN LARCHMONT.

Sumptuously Fitted Cars Supplied to Pacify the Opposition.

Special to The New York Times.

LARCHMONT, N. Y., Dec. 2.—The Larchmont Railway Company has decided to abandon its old horse cars, which have been running for ten years, and this week will substitute electric cars in their places. The wealthy people who inhabit Larchmont have had such a deep prejudice against the trolley, that President Charles Singer, in order to pacify them, has purchased the most expensive cars in the market for use in the manor section, which extends from the New Haven Railroad to the Sound.

The new cars arrived yesterday. They are the finest ever seen in Westchester County. Each car is vestibuled, and all the railings are of highly polished brass and nickel. The cushions are fully six inches thick, and an electric push button is placed at each window. Ten large incandescent lights are in each car. Motormen and conductors will wear black suits, and black silk caps with gold braid.

KAISER SNUBS MR. KRUEGER

Refuses to Receive the Boer Leader at Berlin.

Latter Said to Be Much Disheartened—Rumor Says He Has Been Asked to Avoid Belgian Territory—London Press Exults.

BERLIN, Dec. 2.—Mr. Krüger has abandoned his proposed visit to Berlin, owing to the receipt of an official intimation that Emperor William regrets that, in consequence of previous arrangements, he will be unable to receive him. The Boer statesman will, therefore, proceed direct from Cologne to Holland. He telegraphed to this effect this afternoon.

The Emperor's intimation was conveyed to Mr. Krüger by the German envoy at Luxembourg, who arrived at Cologne to-day.

The Cologne Gazette, in an inspired article, says:

"Mr. Krüger's visit is not agreeable to Germany, his aim being to obtain intervention in South Africa. It would be a grave political mistake, it would be even a great crime, to allow him to entertain even a spark of hope that Germany will render him any practical support."

This declaration is accompanied with reproaches, Mr. Krüger being charged with "having encouraged a useless guerrilla warfare and having disregarded Germany's advice when he might still have followed it."

LONDON, Dec. 3.—All the London morning papers comment with unbounded enthusiasm upon the abrupt snub administered by Emperor William to Mr. Krüger, which is all the more noticeable when contrasted with the Boer statesman's concededly successful visit to France. The snub is regarded as further evidence of the better relations existing between Great Britain and Germany.

Emperor William's telegram to the German envoy at Luxembourg was the outcome of a dispatch which Mr. Krüger sent to the Kaiser on arriving at the German frontier:

"On reaching German soil I hasten to express to your Majesty my sentiments of respectful devotion and cordial sympathy."

The official explanation offered through the German press is that steps had not been taken to ascertain whether Mr. Krüger's visit would be agreeable.

The Boer delegates admit that they have received a serious check, and Mr. Krüger is said to be extremely disheartened.

There is a rumor that he has been requested to avoid Belgian territory.

FRANCE CONDEMNS THE KAISER

PARIS, Dec. 3.—Emperor William's refusal to receive Mr. Krüger has caused general surprise here. Most of the morning papers make it an excuse for articles sympathizing with the Boer statesman or condemning the Kaiser.

"The Kaiser is no longer a modern Lohengrin," says the Echo de Paris, "but a simple disciple of Bismarck. His attitude is dictated by the interests of Germany, which he considers identical with those of England."

Some of the papers publish the Kaiser's famous telegram of 1896 to Mr. Krüger side by side with that of yesterday.

CROWDS AT KRUEGER'S HOTEL.

He Speaks of Close Relationship Between Boers and Germans.

COLOGNE, Dec. 2.—Thousands of people waited to-day in the vicinity of the Cathedral Hotel to catch a glimpse of Mr. Krüger, who, when replying to the deputation of Bonn students in the afternoon, described the educational progress of the Transvaal, thanked the students for their kind welcome, and shook hands with each.

Afterward Mr. Krüger appeared upon the balcony, where he was loudly cheered from below. Having rested for half an hour he went into the vestibule of the hotel, which was crowded with visitors. Here, replying to a deputation from the Pan-German League, wishing him success, he referred to the close relationship between the Boers and the Germans.

It is expected that Mr. Krüger will remain here until Wednesday.

DENOUNCES BRITISH METHODS.

Ex-Treasurer of Cape Colony Urges Afrikanders to Speak Boldly in Upholding Their Rights.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 2.—Replying at Stellenbosch, Cape Colony, to an address presented to him by the leaders of the Afrikander Bund, J. X. Merriman, ex-Treasurer of Cape Colony, in the course of an impassioned speech, denounced the war in South Africa as "one of the blackest spots in British annals."

The present methods of British warfare, he said, were such as encouraged the worst elements on both sides, and were bound to prove fatal to the ultimate peace of the country. He declared that neither he nor J. W. Sauer, ex-Commissioner of Public Works, would attend the Worcester Congress, lest it should be said that the Congress was engineered by politicians, and he appealed to all Afrikanders to speak boldly when upholding their rights, and yet to "avoid wild language or actions which might lead to the abrogation of the last vestige of freedom."

Mr. Sauer, whose speech was rather more militant, demanded the removal of Sir Alfred Milner, whom he described as "violently anti-Dutch." He declared that if Great Britain deprived the two republics of their independence she would lose the affection of all South Africans. Referring to the Worcester Congress, he urged the delegates to show firmness.

SAYS BOERS HAVE 7,000 MEN.

But Mr. Churchill Thinks British Should Send 20,000 Regulars to Africa.

QUEENSTOWN, Dec. 2.—Winston Spencer Churchill, who is a passenger on the Cunard Line steamship Lucania, which left Liverpool yesterday for New York, said in the course of an interview here that his sojourn in the United States would be short, as he must hurry back to his Parliamentary duties.

When questioned regarding the war in South Africa, he said he agreed with Lord Roberts that 20,000 more regulars should be sent out, because any slackening would only revive the spirits of the Boers. He estimated the Boer forces at present as about 7,000.

THE FIGHT NEAR RIETFONTEIN.

Boers Anticipated Gen. Paget's Attack and Lost Heavily.

BLOEMFONTEIN, Dec. 2.—Further details have been received regarding the fight near Reitfontein between the British under Gen. Paget and the Boers under Commandants Viljoen and Erasmus, Nov. 28 and Nov. 29.

Gen. Paget, toward evening on the second day, closed in upon the Boer position, with the intention of attacking next day at dawn. The Boers, however, with reinforcements, including three guns, made a desperate attack, and severe fighting ensued.

The Boers, who were repulsed with heavy loss, withdrew in a northeasterly direction. Gen. Paget, having occupied their position, sent mounted infantry in pursuit.

Lord Roberts Praises "British Pluck."

LADYSMITH, Natal, Dec. 2.—Lord Roberts, who arrived here on Friday, inspected Majuba and Laing's Nek while en route. Replying to an address from the townspeople here, he expressed his admiration of the gallant defense of the town, which he characterized as a "glorious memorial of British pluck and endurance, only equaled by the determination and bravery of the relieving force." He said he trusted the day was not far distant when peace would reign supreme and "without ill-feeling toward a conquered foe." Lord Roberts visited Colenso and the surrounding battlefields.

TURKEY ORDERS A CRUISER.

Price of £350,000 Said to Include £23,000 Indemnity to This Country—Cramps Make Contract.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 2.—Hassan Pasha, Ottoman Minister of Marine, and Gen. Williams, representing the Cramp Shipbuilding Company of Philadelphia, have signed a contract for the construction of a cruiser for the Ottoman Navy.

The price to be paid is £350,000, which includes £23,000 as indemnity to the United States for losses sustained by Americans during the Armenian massacres.

Capt. C. M. Chester of the United States battleship Kentucky, with a number of officers of the battleship, is expected here. He will probably remain a few days.

MORE FILIPINOS SURRENDER.

MANILA, Dec. 3.—One thousand more Bolomen have surrendered to Capt. Green of the Thirty-third United States Infantry at Vigan, Island of Luzon.

KILLED ON HIS FIRST DAY.

Guard Powell Fell from an Elevated Train and Was Ground to Death.

J. H. Powell, Jr., Guard 1,033, was ground to death by a Second Avenue elevated road train at Nineteenth Street and First Avenue, just after last midnight. The body was so wedged in under the wheels of the engine that it was necessary to send for a wrecking train to get it out. This blocked the south roadway service. It is thought he fell from the train ahead of the one that killed him.

George Simmons of 654 East One Hundred and Forty-fifth Street, the engineer of the train, saw the form of a man on the track. He could not stop the train, which passed over the man on the tracks. The engineer blew his whistle as a call for the police, and Patrolman George Hoefer answered. The body of a man could be seen under the engine. On the tracks, close by, was the cap of an elevated road guard. It bore the number 1,033.

At the company's offices it was learned that Guard No. 1,033, named Powell, was a new man, who had been put on the road only yesterday. It is understood that he was on the train that passed the Nineteenth Street station a few minutes before 12.

Several guards identified the body, after it had been taken out. The wrecking crew spent some time in jacking up the engine. The body was not as badly mangled as was thought. The body was removed to the East Twenty-second Street Station House.

WESTERN MONTE CARLO OPENS

Mammoth Gambling Place Run by Chicagoans Is Surrounded by a Stockade and Guarded by Dogs.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—The new Monte Carlo, near Richton, was opened for business yesterday by the gambling trust. "Tom" McGinnis entered a stockade surrounding the big pool room near the Illinois Central Railroad tracks and chained up a half dozen vicious dogs. Harry Perry and James O'Leary lugged a forty-five-thousand-dollar bank roll into the building. Behind them came 100 clerks, telegraph operators, bartenders, and waiters.

Two special trains carried 1,500 men to the mammoth poolroom. Not one of the 1,500 appeared to fear a raid. The big building is bounded on three sides by a cornfield, and on the fourth by the railroad track. It stands on an elevation commanding a view of the surrounding country for miles. The only entrance to the high stockade is through a covered gate. Every person passing through this gate must stand the inspection of several employes who have a wide acquaintance among officers of the law. Persons who are not wanted are refused admission.

The bettors found everything to their liking. The odds are placed on immense blackboards. Telegraph operators call the odds and positions of the horses throughout the races, and at the five cashiers' windows the ticket writer urges the men to play their money.

Between the structure and the stockades are two cottages, four dog-houses and outbuildings. In event of a Sheriff's posse visiting the modern Monte Carlo, the Great Dane dogs can be turned loose and counted on to repel any ordinary attack. The supply of vicious dogs will be added to as fast as O'Leary is able to purchase them. He is offering fabulous prices for such as are being delivered to him at his saloon near the stockyards.

CLAIMS PART OF MILWAUKEE.

Title to Ninety Acres in the City Questioned in Ejectment Suits.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 2.—The title to property to the value of $1,000,000, located in the northwest part of the city, has been put in question by ejectment suits just instituted by Miss Annie Brown of Chicago.

The property, consisting of ninety acres, was originally owned by Samuel Brown, who settled on it in 1826.

He died in 1875 leaving the property to his widow, Clarissa Brown, and at her death it was to go to the children. Mrs. Brown, however, was given authority to sell or dispose of the property as she saw fit. She sold most of the land, all her children joining her in giving quitclaim deeds, with the exception of Annie Brown.

Mrs. Brown failed to state in the deeds that the land was sold under the provision of the will giving her permission to do so. This is held to be a fatal flaw in the title. It is asserted that the Supreme Court of the United States has ruled that this must be done.

Now Miss Brown has brought suit of ejectment against all the puchasers and the latter are in a high state of excitement. It is believed that a settlement will be effected.

DUKE DIDN'T NEED POLICE

Manchester Says He Was Well Able to Take Care of Himself.

Detectives, Capt. McClusky Explains, Were on Hand Owing to Threatening Letters Received from a Crank.

The mystery surrounding the presence of the detectives who met the Duke of Manchester on his arrival here with his American bride, on Saturday evening, and escorted him from the steamship St. Louis to the Holland House, was finally cleared away yesterday. Chief of Detectives McClusky, who, with his two subordinates, had refused Saturday to throw any light upon their part in the case, except such as was afforded by the uncertain and baffling rays of their dark-lantern explanations, was more frank and communicative. The Chief was seen at his residence, 233 West Seventieth Street. He abandoned all air of mystery, and told a plain story of the part which he and his men had played. He said:

"Detectives Vallely and Stripp went to the steamer and accompanied the Duke to the hotel because Mr. Zimmerman, the Duchess's father, had placed in my hands two letters—one written last Thursday and the other Friday, and both in the same handwriting—in which the writer asserted his intention of being present when the Duke and his bride arrived, and rotten-egging his Grace. The letters bore a Brooklyn postmark, and were in a masculine hand."

"Did the writer say why he intended to rotten egg the Duke?"

"Yes. He said that the Duke had captured an American girl with millions, who properly belonged to an American, and he purposed discouraging foreigners from running away with American heiresses. The statement that the two detectives were sent as a sort of a guard of honor for the Duke was ridiculous. We don't furnish guards of honor for Dukes or anybody else. But it is our business to see that there is no infraction of the law, and as hurling eggs at the Duke would have been an infraction of the law, the two detectives were sent with Mr. Zimmerman to see that the law was not broken, or at least if it was, that the offender was arrested."

"Have you any idea who wrote the letters?"

"None in the world. But, of course, it was a crank. They were really quite funny. The fellow described in detail the character of the eggs he had in store for the Duke. If the eggs were as ancient as he claimed they were, and he had thrown them, I think it would have been a case for the Beard of Health as well as for the police. I did not seriously expect that the threatened outrage would be committed, but then you cannot always tell what cranks will do, and I thought it best to be on the safe side."

"What did you do with the letters?"

"I have them still. They are in my office."

Several newspaper men sent a card up to the Duke of Manchester at the Holland House at 8 o'clock last night, and he received them readily. One of his visitors, who thought it well to start the interview by easy stages, said:

"How did you spend the morning?"

"Being interviewed," responded the Duke.

"And the afternoon?"

"Being interviewed."

"Have you anything special on hand for this evening?"

"Well, if I can get off being interviewed long enough I expect to have dinner."

All this was said in the best of humor. Then another of the newspaper men took his turn.

"You have received Chief McClusky's explanation of the presence of the two detectives?"

"Oh, yes. He had two letters from some crank over in Brooklyn, who wrote that he was opposed to any blarsted Britishers coming over here and marrying American girls who were good catches. He said they were robbing young Americans of a good thing, don't you know. Of course, if I had known about it I would never have advised having detectives on hand. I don't go in for that sort of thing. If I had my way I would have ridden uptown in an open carriage, and if any crank wanted to make trouble for me I think I would have been quite equal for him; or for two of them, for that matter. I have been trained in a pugilistic school, you know, and feel quite capable of taking care of myself anywhere, or under any circumstances."

"But it is rather difficult to counter on an egg," some one suggested.

"So it is," said the Duke, "but I guess I could have ducked all right. At least I would have made the fellow who threw it sorry he had done so, if I caught up with him."

"What is your idea of the fuss Fannie Ward Lewis is making over your taking her jewels to Ireland by mistake?"

"Well, really you know, I can't see any other purpose she can have than to get a good advertisement previous to her return to the stage. I know the Lewises very well. They are very nice people. I used to visit them a good deal during the Summer. I had a house on the Thames called 'Bishop's Farm,' and they had a place about a half mile below me. They used to give jolly parties, and I used to run down there every once in a while. But I haven't seen either Mrs. Lewis or Mr. Lewis since the latter part of the Summer."

"Is it true that they did notify the Scotland Yard detectives about the loss of Mrs. Lewis's jewels and have Miss Evans, your wife's aunt, shadowed?"

"Oh, yes, indeed. The detectives

BROOKLYN CHURCH DISPUTE

Part of His Congregation Arrayed Against Pastor Wasson.

TROUBLE OVER NEW BUILDING

Faction Opposed to the Rector Issues a Circular Asking for Votes at the Election To-day.

Trouble has arisen in St. George's Protestant Episcopal Church, Brooklyn. The full significance of the strained relations existing between the Rev. William A. Wasson, the rector, and several members of the vestry, was only yesterday made manifest to the congregation.

The trouble has arisen over contracts made for rebuilding the church at Gates and Marcy Avenues, which was burned some months ago. The congregation decided to rebuild, and work was begun. The rector was not satisfied with the progress. He was a member of the Building Committee, and it is said he made new contracts which caused much extra expense.

Hiram Snyder, one of the wardens, was active in the opposition to the rector, and was upheld by Augustus A. Dame, George A. White, W. C. Kimball, and R. J. Harris. On the side of the rector were K. E. Bunnell, F. C. Holmes, George W. Felter, R. S. Steves, and Charles D. Wells. There is to be an election of a Warden and three Vestrymen this morning, and the two factions will fight for supremacy.

An exciting meeting was held last Friday at which the rector is said to have asserted himself so emphatically that his opponents decided to act quickly and decisively. Bishop Littlejohn conducted the confirmation services yesterday and took as his text, "We will not have this man to reign over us," from St. Luke, and in the light of subsequent disclosures many of the congregation remarked upon what was a coincidence between the text and the action of the vestrymen opposed to the rector.

As the congregation filed out of the church the ushers distributed to them this circular:

Brooklyn, Dec. 31, 1900.

To the Supporters and Members of St. George's Church:

During the last few days active efforts have been made to show that an element antagonistic to the rector had always existed in the vestry. It has further been stated that full financial reports of the affairs of the parish were purposely withheld. It has been suggested that an attempt had been made to run the church by a minority delegation; and it has further been insinuated that some of the said minority were trying to break up the church. In fact, a canvass of the parish has been going on and for what purpose no one seems to know, and false statements and misrepresentations regarding the true condition of affairs and the attitude of certain members of the Vestry have been spread abroad.

Much as we deplore church politics and the division of a house against itself, we feel that some of these things must be answered. First, the parties described as antagonistic are identical with the committee who called the rector to St. George's, and, further, until the last two meetings of the vestry no action had been taken by any member or committee that had not the unanimous support of the Vestry. Financial reports have been published from time to time in The Church Bells, and the Treasurer's books are always open to any member of the parish.

In regard to any minority trying to run the parish, it would seem that when the rector defiantly declared that he would act his own pleasure, with the Vestry or without it, the case goes back.

The efforts of the Building Committee have been largely nullified, and their work seriously interfered with by the rector during the past few months, through the unauthorized awarding of contracts, the contraction of debts, and the alteration of existing contracts, all unknown to the committee, and resulting in extra charges amounting to several hundred dollars.

It must be remembered that the rector is only an ex officio and honorary member of the Building Committee, and has no authority to act for the committee. It is felt that the condition necessitates this public statement of the facts.

Detailed statements regarding many of the proceedings and matters referred to are manifestly impossible here, but if any member of St. George's, having the welfare and prosperity of the church at heart, will approach any one of the undersigned, he can be further enlightened. Our Building Committee and Finance Committee stand ready at any time to answer inquiries.

The intimation that any of the Vestry was trying to break up St. George's is the saddest and most serious insinuation; yet all who know the records of the Building Committee and the other signers can judge of their attitude toward and love for St. George's.

An election will be held on Monday, Dec. 3, 1900, at 8 A. M., in the chapel, for one Warden and three Vestrymen. We ask your hearty and cordial support of the following names for these positions.

For Warden—Augustus A. Dame.

For Vestrymen—Wilfred Smith, G. W. Pertain, and W. A. Patterson.

Respectfully yours,

HIRAM SNYDER,
AUGUSTUS A. DAME,
Wardens.

GEO. A. WHITE,
W. C. KIMBALL,
R. J. HARRIS,
Vestrymen.

The congregation discussed the paper. There was a choral service at St. George's in the evening, Mr. Wasson did not deliver a sermon, but he commented on the circular, saying that it was a surprise to him, and that he hoped the congregation would sustain him by electing the Vestrymen who had upheld his actions. After the service the members gathered about and discussed the matter, and considerable time elapsed before they had all left the church.

Mr. Bunnell, in discussing the trouble, said to a reporter of THE TIMES: "Mr. Snyder wants to run this church; that's all there is to it." Mr. Snyder later asked the reporter: "Have you got a statement from Mr. Bunnell?"

"Yes," was the answer, "and he says, among other things, that you want to run the church."

"He's a liar if he says that. It's the rector who wants to run the church. And he wants to make dummies of the Vestrymen." This was said in the church.

The Rev. Mr. Wasson, in commenting on the circular, said: "I do not think this the time nor the church the place to make or refute charges. What I did was in the interests of the church. I had no motives other than its welfare. And I hope and believe that the congregation will sustain me."

THE CITY'S MORAL WAR.

Dr. Kittredge Says the People Are Prepared to Throw Off the Bondage of Wicked Officials.

The Rev. Dr. Abbott E. Kittredge preached to a large congregation last evening in the Madison Avenue Reformed Church, Fifty-seventh Street and Madison Avenue, on the topic, "The Duty of Citizens of New York at This Time." The text was a clause reading: "A citizen of no mean city," taken from the thirty-ninth verse of the twenty-first chapter of Acts, which related to the birthplace of St. Paul.

Dr. Kittredge began by reminding his congregation that, "while we all rejoice because of the business prosperity following the recent victory of right over error at the polls," business prosperity alone does not insure the safety of the Nation. He said in part:

"It is inward purity, justice, mercy, and temperance that make a country's institutions permanent, and when these are lacking no nation can be strong, no republic can endure. Better build your massive warehouses and your marble residences on the soft mud and think that they will stand firm and beautiful than to be guilty of the insanity of supposing that you can build the free Government of 70,000,000 people upon corruption, believing that such a Government will live in defiance of the laws of God.

"The conflict that is agitating this community to-day is not one of politics, but of morals. It is a sharp drawn battle between honesty and dishonesty, between virtue and protected vice, between obedience to law and criminality, even by the preferred and sworn guardians of the law, and I believe that never has there been such intense indignation on the part of the moral classes of our community, never so determined a purpose to throw off the shackles of our bondage to wicked officials, as exists to-day, for men and women are realizing the stern fact that just as now and then robbers hold up the heavily freighted trains in the West, so this city has been held up and its citizens robbed by an organization that belongs to no party; are realizing that the interests of this great metropolis have been subverted to individual and selfish purposes; that its fair name has become a reproach in the sight of the Nation.

"Therefore, I say that the present movement is the result of a far-reaching resolve that this tyranny of immorality over our city must be broken."

Dr. Kittredge quoted figures to show the increase in crime. He commended the Strong administration, and said that 508 arrests for keeping disorderly houses had been made during that administration, while only 180 had been made in 1899.

Dr. Kittredge said that there is something amusing in Mayor Van Wyck's offer to help all he could in fighting vice, "when he could in one hour cause every place to be shut up." He said there is something equally amusing in a vice committee asking citizens to furnish evidence. Policemen are employed for that purpose, said Dr. Kittredge, and if the officers walked the streets for half an hour looking for evidence against vice they would find it.

"Let us go into no spasm of reform," said Dr. Kittredge. "Let us give ourselves to this work—for life, if needs be."

PERRY BELMONT'S VIEWS.

He Says the Constitution Will Be the Issue Now that the Silver Question Is Dead.

Perry Belmont in a communication to The Washington Post, to be published today, gives his views at length of existing currency conditions, and of the prospects of the Democratic Party for success in the future. The silver question, he thinks, should be removed from politics. On this point he says:

"Probably no one now wishes to renew the experience of Treasury silver purchase and coinage of silver dollars, which will in the end inflict on the country $578,000,000 of them. So long as the Government creditor is not compelled to receive them, or so long as the Treasury will on demand give gold dollars for them, no injustice has been done, but, according to party nomenclature of ante-bellum days, it is undemocratic to have full legal tender Government money requiring redemption.

"Thus it is that the country cannot pay, destroy, and get rid of the silver dollars. Their treatment should be turned over to competent non-partisan money experts. If they are out of the way, the silver question can rest, and there can be a revival of American Democracy on lines not socialistic or agrarian."

With the silver question out of the way there need be no fear, Mr. Belmont says, that there will be no issues.

"If," he says, "the Supreme Court shall declare that the Republican policy in our new islands—the policy of executive legislation, the conduct of the Taft Commission in legislating on currency in Manila and levying an export tax on Mexican silver coins—has been and will be unconstitutional, what will be the situation of the party in power?"

The paramount issue now before the country in Mr. Belmont's opinion is whether the United States, in the government of our new islands, "must obey the Constitution."

DEMOCRATIC CLUB FINANCES.

Mortgage on House Reduced to $45,000 —Election of Officers To-night.

The annual election of officers of the Democratic Club will be held at the clubhouse this evening. There is no opposition to this ticket: President—John Fox; first Vice President—Cord Meyer; second Vice President—Lewis Nixon; Treasurer—Theodore F. Hascall; Secretary—William E. Wyatt; Corresponding Secretary—Adrian T. Kiernan; Members of the Board of Governors—John W. Keller, Edward F. O'Dwyer, James Shevlin, M. Warley Platzek, John F. Carroll, Oliver H. P. Belmont.

Treasurer Hascall's report shows excess of assets of $276,489.64. The receipts for the year were $191,601.56, of which $113,830 were for initiation fees and dues. The expenses were $191,292.28. The balance sheet puts the value of the club house at $250,000, furniture and paintings, $40,000. The members owe for dues and house accounts $24,847.98. The mortgage on the house was reduced $55,000 last year, leaving a balance of $45,000 on the property. The only other indebtedness amounts to $8,894.57. There were 141 resident and 28 non-resident members admitted during the year.

BUILDING THE DEFENDER

How the Actual Work on the Yacht Will Be Done.

THE CLOSELY GUARDED SHOPS

Laying Down Process Is Being Prosecuted in a Loft Where Prying Eyes Cannot Penetrate.

Special to The New York Times.

BRISTOL, R. I., Dec. 2.—Secure from the prying eyes of the public, and in the most isolated place in the big boat shops in Bristol, the job of laying down the new cup defender that is to meet Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock II. next August on the Sandy Hook course is being prosecuted with dispatch. The spot where the laying-down process is going on is in a loft directly over the north boat shop, which gives a clear floor space deftly to ply the long battens in laying out the work in sections, as is the customary procedure preliminary to building large racing yachts. It is a system of proving the plans of the design, and if any errors are noted they can be corrected before the actual bending of the frames is put in operation, which frames must conform exactly to the lines laid down. The room is not only adapted to such work as regards space, but it is also the most isolated of any of the rooms about the boat-building establishment, giving a free hand without interruption to a few of the older mechanics, to carry on the job without being disturbed by any one passing in and out. This is the place where sails were made formerly, but, owing to the fact of the quarters being rather narrow for such work, a new sail loft was constructed near by. While there is no one actually on guard at the door leading to this place of secrets, there is a quiet understanding among the men at work on the laying-down process that their approach to the room is to be cautiously made, while a messenger from the depths below is met promptly at the door to inquire what is wanted. While no rules are in force forbidding other employes from visiting this sanctum, because that would indicate something out of the ordinary going on there, which would naturally arouse more or less curiosity, all persons about the premises give the room a "wide berth," presumably having business elsewhere.

The real beginning of the work of laying down the new yacht in sectional lines was commenced in earnest early last week. From reliable sources it is said that this work will be completed in the left about Dec. 15, in order to allow a sufficient margin of time for beginning the construction of the cup defender on the floor of the south shop.

MOLD FOR THE LEAD KEEL.

The lines of the big mold to contain the hot lead of the defender were also laid down in the old sail loft, the job being finished on them Friday morning. Some of the frames for the mold are shaped. In very many particulars the south boat shop, where the defender will take shape, to-day presents similar scenes to those that were in evidence there two years ago. Preparations were then going on in the south shop for the contest for the America's Cup in 1899. Two years ago the yacht Defender, the victor over Valkyrie III. in the races sailed in 1895, was resting on the cradle in this shop, having part of her aluminium topsides, which had become corroded, removed, and new plates of the same metal put on to place the craft in condition for a trial horse for the Columbia during the racing season of 1899. The Rainbow, at present undergoing tinkering to her hull, does not take up quite as much space in the shop as did the Defender, the craft being 120 feet shorter. The same activity is being displayed by the riveters and fitters on the Rainbow as was observable on the Defender; there is just as much raffle about the floor of the shop as there was when the champion of 1895 was being improved, and the rush to get the Rainbow out of the shop is just as great. The Rainbow's steel plates are fast being put up and riveted, while the interior of the hull many of the temporary bracings have been taken out.

In the various other departments of the boatbuilding establishment things have just begun to take on energetic appearances, denoting at once the importance of the work to be done in constructing a new cup defender. The heads of these departments have had conferences with the designer relative to plans in working out the various details of construction. In some instances it has been decided to have some of the work done outside of Bristol, yet it may seem to be the policy of the management for some time to have all boat work concentrated in and about the shops. It is only within a few years that the railways, a sail loft, and a foundry were introduced in Bristol. Some of the small work for the Columbia is well under way in these departments. For instance, in the blacksmith's shop the new sloop's chain plates and many strappings have been turned out, while two large anchors about the size the Columbia had in use were finished the past week. In the same shop the heavy section bending tables upon which the new frames will be bent are lined up and ready for use.

In the pattern shop wood material for molds to be used in the foundry are piled on benches, while work has already begun on the mold to be used in the casting for the collision bulkhead, which is to be of ordnance metal. Many of the heavy castings are to be of Tobin bronze. The heavier pieces of castings will probably be produced at a mill at Bridgeport, Conn. It is not so sure about the sections of keel plates being cast in the Herreshoff foundry, as on Friday it was understood there was a discussion at the office about the matter. For the present the question is held in reserve. The sternpost and rudder stock will probably be cast at Bridgeport.

The sailmakers are perhaps the busiest mechanics at the boat establishment at present. Some of the head sails are completed, a mainsail has been cut, and the work of making it has begun. The mainsails will have to be finished in sections and put together, owing later to a scarcity of room for sails of such extent.

When the seventy-footers were built this year a number of steel-bulbed angle frames were left over, and now may be put to use in the construction of the cup defender, but whether or not this will be done is not known.

TWO DETECTIVES ARRESTED.

Employes of a Private Agency Accused of Annoying Surveillance.

Two men were arrested by the West Sixty-eighth Street Station police last night on complaint of William A. Witty of 254 West Twenty-fifth Street, who said that the men had been scrutinizing everybody who passed his house for the last week. The prisoners are Edwin Constantine of 39 Madison Street, Brooklyn, and William Perkers of 74 Tillary Street, Brooklyn. They said they were employed by a detective agency which started business last week.

Mr. Witty, who lives in a handsome apartment house, said the men stood about his house nearly all the time. Other neighbors had complained of the men's conduct, and Detective Hubbard sent two policemen to look after them. The men said they were watching somebody on the block, but did not have credentials of any kind, not even the State license for private detectives. They sent a message to a Brooklyn man named Drummond after their arrest, asking him to look out for their interests.

Shot to Death by Accident.

BUFFALO, Dec. 2.—Edward, Mannis nineteen years old, of this city, was shot accidently in the forehead by Hotel-keeper Hilton of Marilla, at 5 o'clock this afternoon; he died on the train while being brought to Buffalo. Mannis, who with several friends, was in Hilton's hotel, asked the hotel-keeper to show him a revolver which was on the bar. In handing the revolver to Mannis is was discharged.

Rabbi Wolff Dies Suddenly.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Dec. 2.—The Rev. David Wolff, one of the oldest rabbis in the State of New York, dropped dead in his home in Kingston to-night. For thirty-five years he was rabbi of the Congregation Emanuel. Previous to that time he was rabbi of the congregation of Fourth Street, New York City. Four children survive him. He was born in Germany, and was an authority in ecclesiastical matters of the Jewish Church of America.

ROBBED WHILE THEY SLEPT.

William F. Farmer of 332 East Eighty-fourth Street, has the East Eighty-eighth Street Station detectives at work investigating the robbery of $3,000 in cash and $3,000 worth of diamonds and jewelry, from his home some time Saturday night or yesterday morning.
